Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 41(9), will amend para. 138(11.91)(d) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Subsection 138(11.91) provides rules for the purpose of computing the income of a non-resident insurer that commences to carry on a business in Canada or that ceases to be exempt from tax under Part I in a particular taxation year. Paragraph (d) of this subsection is amended to remove the reference to subparagraph 138(3)(a)(iv), which is repealed. For further information, see the commentary on subsection 138(3).

(d.1) for the purposes of subsection 20(22) and subparagraph (3)(a)(ii.1),

(i) the insurer is deemed to have carried on the business referred to in paragraph (a) in Canada in the preceding taxation year referred to in paragraph (c), and

(ii) the amounts, if any, that would have been prescribed in respect of the insurer for the purposes of paragraphs (4)(b) and 12(1)(e.1) for that preceding year in respect of the insurance policies of that business are deemed to have been included in computing its income for that year,

(e) the insurer is deemed to have disposed, immediately before the beginning of the particular taxation year, of each property owned by it at that time that is designated insurance property in respect of the business referred to in paragraph (a) for the particular taxation year, for proceeds of disposition equal to the fair market value at that time and to have reacquired, at the beginning of the particular taxation year, the property at a cost equal to that fair market value, and

(f) where paragraph (e) applies in respect of depreciable property of the insurer and the cost thereof to the insurer immediately before the commencement of the particular taxation year exceeds the fair market value thereof at that time, for the purposes of sections 13 and 20 and any regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a),

(i) the capital cost of the property to the insurer at that time shall be deemed to be the cost thereof to the insurer at that time, and

(ii) the excess shall be deemed to have been allowed to the insurer in respect of the property under regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a) in computing its income for taxation years ending before the commencement of the particular taxation year.

Proposed Repeal — 138(11.91)(f)

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 95(3), will repeal para. 138(11.91)(f), applicable to taxation years that end after 1999.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 138(11.91) provides rules for the purpose of computing the income of a non-resident insurer that at any time in a particular taxation year commences to carry on business in Canada or that ceases to be exempt from tax under Part I of the Act.

Paragraph 138(11.91)(f) applies where the non-resident insurer's capital cost of a depreciable property exceeds the property's fair market value immediately before the commencement of the particular taxation year. To ensure that on a later disposition of the property the non-resident insurer is subject to recapture of any excess capital cost allowance claimed before the particular taxation year, this paragraph preserves the property's capital cost, and treats the excess as having been allowed as capital cost allowance.

Since it is inappropriate to provide for the recapture of capital cost allowance that was claimed when the business was not carried on in Canada or when the non-resident insurer was exempt from tax under Part I of the Act, paragraph 138(11.91)(f) is repealed.

(11.93) Property acquired on default in payment — Where, at any time in a taxation year of an insurer, the beneficial ownership of property is acquired or reacquired by the insurer in consequence of the failure to pay all or any part of an amount (in this subsection referred to as the "insurer's claim") owing to the insurer at that time in respect of a bond, debenture, mortgage, hypothecary claim, agreement of sale or any other form of indebtedness owned by the insurer, the following rules apply to the insurer:

(e) in computing the insurer's income for the year or a subsequent taxation year, no amount is deductible under paragraph 20(1)(l) in respect of the insurer's claim.

History: The opening words of subsec. 138(11.93) amended by 2001, c. 17, s. 218 to add the words "hypothecary claim", in force June 14, 2001.

Subsec. 138(11.93) amended by 1995, c. 21, s. 39, applicable to property acquired or reacquired after February 21, 1994, other than acquisitions or reacquisitions pursuant to a court order made before February 22, 1994. Subsec. (11.93) formerly read:

(11.93) Notwithstanding section 79, where, at any time in a taxation year, an insurer has acquired or reacquired the beneficial ownership of property in consequence of another person's failure to pay all or any part of an amount (in this subsection referred to as the "insurer's claim") owing by the other person to the insurer in respect of a bond, debenture, mortgage, agreement of sale or any other form of indebtedness owned by the insurer, the following rules apply:

(b) any amount paid by the other person after the acquisition or reacquisition, as the case may be, of the property on account of or in satisfaction of the insurer's claim shall be deemed to be a loss of that person from the disposition of the property for that person's taxation year in which payment of that amount was made;

(11.94) Transfer of insurance business by resident insurer — Where

(a) an insurer resident in Canada (in this subsection referred to as the "transferor") has, at any time in a taxation year, ceased to carry on all or substantially all of an insurance business carried on by it in Canada in that year,

(b) the transferor has, at that time or within 60 days after that time,

(i) in the case of a transferor that is a life insurer and that carries on an insurance business in Canada and in a country other than Canada in the year, transferred all or substantially all of the property (in subsection (11.5) referred to as the "transferred property") that is owned by it at that time and that was designated insurance property in respect of the business for the taxation year that, because of paragraph (11.5)(h), ended immediately before that time, or

(ii) in any other case, transferred all or substantially all of the property owned by it at that time and used by it in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of, carrying on that insurance business in Canada in that year (in subsection (11.5) referred to as the "transferred property") to a corporation resident in Canada (in this subsection referred to as the "transferee") that is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation of the transferor that, immediately after that time, began to carry on that insurance business in Canada for consideration that includes shares of the capital stock of the transferee,

Proposed Amendment — 138(11.94)(b) closing words to a corporation resident in Canada (in this subsection referred to as the "transferee") that is a qualified related corporation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 219(8)) of the transferor that, immediately after that time, began to carry on that insurance business in Canada for consideration that includes shares of the capital stock of the transferee,

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 41(10), will amend the closing words of para. 138(11.94)(b) to read as above, applicable to transfers made after October 2004.

Technical Notes: Subsection 138(11.94) provides for the transfer on a tax-deferred (i.e., rollover) basis of an insurance business carried on in Canada by an insurer resident in Canada to a corporation resident in Canada that is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation of that insurer. This rollover treatment is available on an elective basis, provided that the following conditions are met:

- the insurer ceases to carry on all or substantially all of an insurance business carried on in Canada;
- the insurer transfers all or substantially all of the property used or held in the insurance business at the time of the cessation, or within 60 days thereafter, to a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation for consideration that includes shares of the subsidiary wholly-owned corporation, and the subsidiary wholly-owned corporation then immediately commences to carry on the insurance business in Canada;
- the subsidiary wholly-owned corporation then, or within 60 days thereafter, assumes or reinsures all or substantially all of the business; and
- the insurer and the subsidiary wholly-owned corporation jointly file the election in prescribed form and in accordance with subsection 138(11.6).

The definition "subsidiary wholly-owned corporation" is found in subsection 248(1). In its current form, the definition "subsidiary wholly-owned corporation" covers a corporation all of the issued shares of which (other than directors' qualifying shares) are held by a particular corporation of which it is a subsidiary.

Subparagraph 138(11.94)(b)(ii) is amended to replace the reference to "subsidiary wholly-owned corporation" with a reference to "qualified related corporation (within the meaning of subsection 219(8))". The effect of this amendment is that the rollover treatment under subsection 138(11.94) will be available when the transfer of an insurance business in Canada is made to a qualified related corporation, being a corporation all of the issued shares of which (other than directors' qualifying shares) are owned by a particular corporation of which it is a subsidiary, or by other corporations that are subsidiary wholly-owned corporations of the particular corporation of which it is a subsidiary. This has the effect of broadening the rollover treatment to include a transfer of an insurance business made by a corporation to a corporation in the same corporate group, but that is not necessarily a direct subsidiary of the transferor corporation.

(c) the transferee has, at that time or within 60 days thereafter, assumed or reinsured all or substantially all of the obligations of the transferor that arose in the course of carrying on that insurance business in Canada, and

(d) the transferor and the transferee have jointly elected in prescribed form and in accordance with subsection (11.6), paragraphs (11.5)(e) to (m) and subsections (11.7) to (11.9) apply in respect of the transfer.

"transition year" of a life insurer means

(a) in respect of the accounting standards adopted by the Accounting Standards Board and effective as of October 1, 2006, the life insurer's first taxation year that begins after September 2006, and

(b) in respect of the International Financial Reporting Standards adopted by the Accounting Standards Board and effective as of January 1, 2011, the life insurer's first taxation year that begins after 2010;

Proposed Addition — 138(12)"transition year"(c)

(c) in respect of the amendment to paragraph 1406(b) of the Income Tax Regulations announced on March 16, 2011, the life insurer's 2012 taxation year;

Application: The March 16, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 1(1), will add para. (c) to the definition "transition year" in subsec. 138(12), applicable to 2012 et seq.

Technical Notes: Section 138 sets out detailed rules relating to the taxation of insurance corporations. Section 138 is amended to modify existing transitional rules for insurers in respect of their life insurance businesses carried on in Canada ("life insurers"). These modifications are as a result of changes ("segregated fund policy changes") to the prescribed rules in Part XIV of the Regulations for computing the maximum amount deductible, under subparagraph 138(3)(a)(i) of the Act, by a life insurer as a reserve in respect of its life insurance policies in Canada. These changes to the Regulations, announced on March 16, 2011, would clarify the computation of the maximum allowable reserves in respect of segregated fund policies.

These proposed modifications to the transitional rules in section 138 are generally intended to ensure that any increase or decrease in the reserves of an insurer resulting from the segregated fund policy changes will be taken into account in computing income for tax purposes over a five-year period.

The definition "transition year" in subsection 138(12) of the Act provides for two separate transition years of a life insurer. The first relates to accounting changes adopted by the Accounting Standards Board, and effective as of October 1, 2006. The second relates to changes to accounting rules in respect of the International Financial Reporting Standards adopted by the Accounting Standards Board and effective as of January 1, 2011 ("IFRS").

The definition is amended to add a third separate transition year for a life insurer. The third transition year ("segregated fund policy transition year") relates to the segregated fund policy changes and is a life insurer's 2012 taxation year.

As a result of this amendment, a life insurer will be required to compute, in respect of its life insurance business carried on in Canada in its segregated fund policy transition year, its reserve transition amount (as defined in existing subsection 138(12)) in respect of policy reserves arising from the segregated fund policy changes. This computation is independent of the reserve transition amount computed in respect of the 2006 accounting changes and IFRS. In this regard, new subsection 138(26) of the Act provides special rules for applying the related income tax provisions in circumstances where a life insurer has more than one transition year for the same taxation year. For more detail, see the commentary on new subsection 138(26).

Existing subsection 138(16) requires the inclusion, in computing the insurer's income for its segregated fund policy transition year, of the positive amount, if any, of the insurer's reserve transition amount for its segregated fund policy transition year. Similarly, subsection 138(17) requires the deduction in computing the insurer's income for its segregated fund policy transition year of the absolute value of the negative amount, if any, of the insurer's reserve transition amount for its segregated fund policy transition year. If an insurer has included an amount under subsection 138(16), or deducted an amount under subsection 138(17), subsections 138(18) and (19) will provide for corresponding deductions or inclusions — recognized over a five-year period beginning with its segregated fund policy transition year — in computing the insurer's income.

Related Provisions: 138(26) — Policy reserve transition — application rules.

(ii) any amount deducted under subsection (18) or included under subsection (19) in computing the transferor's income for a taxation year of the transferor that begins before that time that can reasonably be attributed to the transferred business, and

(iii) any amount that would — in the absence of this subsection and if the transferor existed and carried on a life insurance business on each day that includes that time or is a subsequent day and on which the transferee carries on a life insurance business — be required to be deducted or included, in respect of any of those days, under subsection (18) or (19) in computing the transferor's income that can reasonably be attributed to the transferred business; and

(b) in determining, in respect of the day that includes that time or any subsequent day, any amount that is required under subsection (18) or (19) to be deducted or included in computing the transferor's income for each particular taxation year from the transferred business, the description of A in the formulas in those subsections is deemed to be nil.

(a) the time (determined without reference to this subsection) at which the life insurer ceased to carry on the life insurance business, and

(b) the time that is immediately before the end of the last taxation year of the life insurer that ended at or before the time at which the life insurer ceased to exist.

Proposed Addition — 138(26)

(26) Policy reserve transition — application rules — In applying subsections (16), (17), (18) and (19) to a life insurer for a taxation year of the life insurer,

(a) if the application of one or more of those subsections is in respect of the amendment to paragraph 1406(b) of the Income Tax Regulations announced on March 16, 2011, the life insurer's reserve transition amount for its transition year in respect of that amendment is to be determined as though variable A in the formula in the definition "reserve transition amount" in subsection (12) read as follows:

A is the maximum amount that the life insurer would be permitted to claim under subparagraph (3)(a)(i) (and that would be prescribed by section 1404 of the Income Tax Regulations for the purposes of subparagraph (3)(a)(i)) as a policy reserve for its base year in respect of its life insurance policies in Canada if paragraph 1406(b) of the Income Tax Regulations were read as it applies to the life insurer's 2012 taxation year, and;

(b) if one or more of those subsections applies in the same taxation year in respect of both the amendment to paragraph 1406(b) of the Income Tax Regulations announced on March 16, 2011, and the International Financial Reporting Standards adopted by the Accounting Standards Board and effective as of January 1, 2011, then, for purposes of applying those subsections in respect of a transition year described by paragraph (b) of the definition "transition year" in subsection (12), the reference to "as it reads in respect of its transition year" in paragraph (b) of A of the formula in the definition "reserve transition amount" in subsection (12) is to be read as a reference to "as it reads in respect of its transition year (determined without reference to the amendment to paragraph 1406(b) of the Income Tax Regulations announced on March 16, 2011); and

(c) if the life insurer has more than one transition year for the same taxation year of the life insurer

(i) for each such transition year, the computation of the reserve transition amount for the transition year, and the requirements to include, or rights to deduct, under any of those subsections an amount in respect of that reserve transition amount, shall be determined as if that transition year were the only transition year of the life insurer for that taxation year, and

(ii) for greater certainty, the references in subsections (16), (17), (18) and (19) to a transition year include each such transition year.

Application: The March 16, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 1(2), will add subsec. 138(26). applicable to 2012 et seq.

Technical Notes: New subsection 138(26) contains rules of application in respect of the determination of a life insurer's reserve transition amount and the associated application of subsections 138(16), (17), (18) and (19). Those subsections provide for transition in some circumstances where the calculation of a life insurer's life insurance policy reserves changes.

New paragraph 138(26)(a) provides an application rule for purposes of computing the income tax effects in the transitional rules in subsections (16), (17), (18) and (19), and for purposes of the definition "reserve transition amount" in subsection 138(12), where the application of those subsections is relevant to the segregated fund policy changes. For those purposes, that paragraph provides a special rule for computing an insurer's reserve transition amount for its segregated fund policy transition year. Specifically, variable A in the formula in the definition "reserve transition amount" in subsection (12) is to be read such that it represents the amount that a life insurer would be permitted to claim as a policy reserve in its base year computed as though the amendment to paragraph 1406(b) of the Regulations incorporating the segregated fund policy changes applied to that base year.

New paragraphs 138(26)(b) and (c) both apply if a life insurer has more than one transition year for the same taxation year.

Paragraph 138(26)(b) applies specifically where the segregated fund policy transition year and the IFRS transition year are for the same taxation year of the life insurer. In this circumstance, for purposes of the IFRS transition year, the insurer's reserve transition amount, and the associated application of subsections 138(16), (17), (18) and (19), is determined without regard to the segregated fund policy changes.

Paragraph 138(26)(c) applies generally where a life insurer has more than one transition year for the same taxation year (note that as a practical matter, under the income tax provisions, including as amended currently, this will only involve, as under paragraph (b), where the segregated fund policy transition year and the IFRS transition year are for the same taxation year of the life insurer). In this circumstance, paragraph 138(26)(c) clarifies

- that the insurer's reserve transition amount for each of those transition years, and the associated application of subsections 138(16), (17), (18) and (19), is determined separately in respect of each of those transition years, and
- that the amounts determined as described immediately above are to be included or deducted, as the case may be, in computing the insurer's income for the relevant taxation year.

138.1 (1) Rules relating to segregated funds — In respect of life insurance policies for which all or any portion of an insurer's reserves vary in amount depending on the fair market value of a specified group of properties (in this section referred to as a "segregated fund"), for the purposes of this Part, the following rules apply:

(a) an inter vivos trust (in this section referred to as the "related segregated fund trust") is deemed to be created at the time that is the later of

(i) the day that the segregated fund is created, and

(ii) the day on which the insurer's 1978 taxation year commences,

and to continue in existence throughout the period during which the fund determines any portion of the benefits under those policies that vary in amount depending on the fair market value of the property in the segregated fund (in this section referred to as "segregated fund policies");

(b) property that has been allocated to and that remains a part of the segregated fund, and any income that has accrued on that property is deemed to be the property and income of the related segregated fund trust and not to be the property and income of the insurer;

(c) the insurer is deemed to be

(i) the trustee who has ownership or control of the related segregated fund trust property,

(ii) a resident of Canada in respect of the related segregated fund trust property used or held by it in the course of carrying on the insurer's life insurance business in Canada, and

(iii) a non-resident of Canada in respect of the related segregated fund trust property not used or held by it in the course of carrying on the insurer's life insurance business in Canada;

(d) where at a particular time there is property in the segregated fund that was not funded with premiums paid under a segregated fund policy,

(i) the insurer is deemed to have an interest in the related segregated fund trust that is not in respect of any particular property or source of income, and

(ii) the cost at any time of that interest to the insurer is deemed to be the total of

(A) for property of the trust at that time allocated by the insurer to the segregated fund prior to 1978, the amount that would be its adjusted cost base to the insurer if the interest had been a capital property at all relevant times prior to 1978 and if the rules in this section had been applicable for the taxation years after 1971 and before 1978, and

(B) for property of the trust at that time allocated by the insurer to the segregated fund after 1977, the fair market value of the property at the time it was last allocated to the segregated fund by the insurer;

Subsection 142.5(4) is a transitional rule for non-capital property deemed to be disposed of on the initial application of the mark-to-market requirement. Subsection 142.5(5), in conjunction with the Income Tax Regulations, includes the deducted amount in income over a 5-year period starting with the taxation year that includes October 31, 1994.

Subsection 142.5(6) is a transitional rule that applies with respect to capital property that is deemed to be disposed of on the initial application of the mark-to-market requirement. It permits a financial institution to claim an allowable capital loss not exceeding a prescribed amount (as determined under Part LXXXI of the Income Tax Regulations). Subsection 142.5(7), in conjunction with the Income Tax Regulations, require an equivalent amount of taxable capital gains to be recognized over a 5-year period starting in the taxation year that includes October 31, 1994.

"base year" of a taxpayer means the taxpayer's taxation year that immediately precedes its transition year.

"transition amount" of a taxpayer for the taxpayer's transition year is the positive or negative amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at the end of the taxpayer's base year, of a transition property of the taxpayer; and

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the cost amount to the taxpayer, at the end of the taxpayer's base year, of a transition property of the taxpayer.

"transition property" of a taxpayer means a property that

(a) was a specified debt obligation held by the taxpayer at the end of the taxpayer's base year;

(b) was not a mark-to-market property of the taxpayer for the taxpayer's base year, but would have been a mark-to-market property of the taxpayer for the taxpayer's base year if the property had been carried at the property's fair market value in the taxpayer's balance sheet as at the end of each taxation year of the taxpayer that ends after the taxpayer last acquired the property (otherwise than by reason of a reacquisition under subsection 142.5(2)) and before the commencement of the taxpayer's transition year; and

(c) was a mark-to-market property of the taxpayer for the transition year of the taxpayer.

"transition year" of a taxpayer means the taxpayer's first taxation year that begins after September 2006.

$$A \times B/1825$$

where

A is the amount included under subsection (2) in computing the taxpayer's income for the transition year; and

B is the number of days in the particular taxation year that are before the day that is 1825 days after the first day of the transition year.

$$A \times B/1825$$

(b) if the taxpayer becomes a financial institution, the taxpayer is deemed to have disposed, immediately before the end of its particular taxation year that ends immediately before the particular time, of each of the following properties held by the taxpayer for proceeds equal to the property's fair market value at the time of that disposition:

(i) a specified debt obligation, or

(ii) a mark-to-market property of the taxpayer for the particular taxation year or for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the particular time;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 96(1), will amend para. 142.6(1)(b) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after 1998.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 142.6(1) contains rules that apply where a taxpayer becomes (or ceases to be) a financial institution. This is most likely to happen where the change of status occurs because the taxpayer becomes (or ceases to be) controlled by a financial institution.

If a taxation year of the taxpayer does not end immediately before the time at which its status as a financial institution changes, subparagraph 142.6(1)(a)(i) deems the taxpayer's taxation year that would otherwise have included that time to end immediately before that time. A new taxation year begins at that time, and the taxpayer is permitted to adopt a new fiscal period. One purpose for the deemed year-end is to ensure the proper application, in taxation years in which the taxpayer is a financial institution, of the rules, commonly known as the mark-to-market rules,

- in section 142.3 for specified debt obligations, and
- in section 142.5 for market-to-market properties.

The expressions "financial institution", "specified debt obligation" and "mark-to-market property" are defined in section 142.2.

Paragraph 142.6(1)(b) applies where a taxpayer becomes a financial institution. This paragraph generally provides for a deemed disposition at fair market value of each property held by the taxpayer that is

- a specified debt obligation [142.6(1)(b)(i) — ed.], or
- a mark-to-market property for the taxpayer's taxation year that ends immediately before the time of the change of status [142.6(1)(b)(ii) — ed.].

This deemed disposition under paragraph 142.6(1)(b) is intended to ensure that amounts brought, because of the mark-to-market rules in sections 142.3 and 142.5, into the taxpayer's income for the taxpayer's subsequent taxation year (i.e., the taxation year that includes the time of the change of status) do not include gains or losses accrued before the beginning of that subsequent taxation year.

Paragraph 142.6(1)(b) is amended to ensure that this is achieved in connection with mark-to-market properties. Amended paragraph 142.6(1)(b) results in the taxpayer being deemed to have disposed of, immediately before the end of its particular taxation year that ends immediately before the time of the change of status, and for proceeds equal to its fair market value at the time of that disposition, a mark-to-market property of the taxpayer

- for the particular taxation year, or
- for the subsequent taxation year.

(c) where the taxpayer ceases to be a financial institution, the taxpayer shall be deemed to have disposed, immediately before the end of its taxation year that ends immediately before the particular time, of each property held by the taxpayer that is a specified debt obligation (other than a mark-to-market property of the taxpayer for the year), for proceeds equal to its fair market value at the time of disposition; and

(d) the taxpayer shall be deemed to have reacquired, at the end of the taxation year referred to in paragraph (b) or (c), each property deemed by that paragraph to have been disposed of by the taxpayer, at a cost equal to the proceeds of disposition of the property.

Proposed Amendment — 142.6(1)(d)

(d) the taxpayer is deemed to have reacquired, at the end of its taxation year that ends immediately before the particular time, each property deemed by paragraph (b) or (c) to have been disposed of by the taxpayer, at a cost equal to the proceeds of disposition of the property.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 96(2), will amend para. 142.6(1)(d) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after 1998.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Paragraph 142.6(1)(c) provides for a deemed disposition of specified debt obligations (other than mark-to-market property) in the opposite situation of change of status, i.e., where the taxpayer ceases to be a financial institution. Paragraph 142.6(1)(d) provides that the taxpayer is deemed to have reacquired, at the end of the taxation year referred to in paragraph 142.6(1)(b) or (c), each property deemed by that paragraph to have been disposed of by the taxpayer, at a cost equal to the proceeds of disposition of the property.

Consequential to the amendments to paragraph 142.6(1)(b), paragraph 142.6(1)(d) is amended to provide that the taxpayer is deemed to have reacquired, at the end of its taxation year that ends immediately before the time of the change of status, each property deemed by paragraph 142.6(1)(b) or (c) to have been disposed of by the taxpayer, at a cost equal to the proceeds of disposition of the property.

(b) as part of the series of transactions or events, the taxpayer who acquired the debt obligation disposed of property before October 31, 1994; and

(c) it is reasonable to consider that one of the main reasons for the acquisition of the debt obligation by the taxpayer was to obtain a deduction because, as a consequence of the disposition referred to in paragraph (b),

(i) an amount was included in the taxpayer's income for any taxation year, or

(ii) an amount was subtracted from a balance of undeducted outlays, expenses or other amounts of the taxpayer and the subtracted amount exceeded the portion, if any, of the balance that could reasonably be considered to be in respect of the property.

(1.1) Ceasing to use property in Canadian business — If at a particular time in a taxation year a taxpayer that is a non-resident financial institution (other than a life insurance corporation) ceases to use, in connection with a business or part of a business carried on by the taxpayer in Canada immediately before the particular time, a property that is a mark-to-market property of the taxpayer for the year or a specified debt obligation, but that is not a property that was disposed of by the taxpayer at the particular time,

(a) the taxpayer is deemed

(i) to have disposed of the property immediately before the time that was immediately before the particular time for proceeds equal to its fair market value at the time of disposition and to have received those proceeds at the time of disposition in the course of carrying on the business or the part of the business, as the case may be, and

(ii) to have reacquired the property at the particular time at a cost equal to those proceeds; and

(a) to have disposed of the property immediately before the time that was immediately before the particular time for proceeds equal to its fair market value at the time of disposition; and

(b) to have reacquired the property at the particular time at a cost equal to those proceeds.

(b) if the taxpayer does not have financial statements for the period ending immediately before the particular time referred to in subsection (1.1), references in the definition to financial statements for the year shall be read as references to the financial statements that it is reasonable to expect would have been prepared if the year had ended immediately before the particular time.

(a) the taxpayer is deemed

(i) to have disposed of the property immediately before the particular time for proceeds of disposition equal to its fair market value immediately before the particular time, and

(ii) to have acquired the property, at the particular time, at a cost equal to those proceeds; and

(b) subsection 142.5(1) does not apply to the disposition under subparagraph (a)(i).

(i) each predecessor affiliate is deemed to have been affiliated with the entrant bank throughout the period that began on February 11, 1999 and ended at the time of the merger,

(5) Specified debt obligations — If a Canadian affiliate of an entrant bank transfers a specified debt obligation to the entrant bank in a transaction in respect of which an election is made under subsection (3), the Canadian affiliate is a financial institution in its taxation year in which the transfer is made, and the amount that the Canadian affiliate and the entrant bank agree on in their election in respect of the obligation is equal to the tax basis of the obligation within the meaning assigned by subsection 142.4(1), the entrant bank is deemed, in respect of the obligation, for the purposes of sections 142.2 to 142.4 and 142.6, to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the Canadian affiliate.

are deemed to be an amount (in this paragraph referred to as the "assumption amount") equal to the amount outstanding on account of the principal amount of the obligation at that time, and

(ii) the assumption amount shall not be considered a term of the transaction that differs from that which would have been made between persons dealing at arm's length solely because it is not equal to the fair market value of the obligation at that time;

Proposed Addition — 142.7(8)(a.1) [temporary]

(a.1) for the purpose of applying subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii) in respect of the debt obligation, the obligation is deemed to have been issued by the entrant bank at the time that the obligation was issued by the Canadian affiliate.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 97(1), will add para. 142.7(8)(a.1), applicable after June 27, 1999 and until repeal below.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 142.7 provides time-limited rules to facilitate foreign banks' transformation of certain Canadian operations, currently carried out through subsidiaries, into Canadian branches (known as "authorized foreign banks") of the foreign banks themselves.

When an authorized foreign bank assumes certain debt obligations of its Canadian affiliates, subsection 142.7(8) applies to govern the tax consequences of the assumption.

[Former — ed.] Subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii) provides [before 2008 — ed.] an exemption from Part XIII tax in respect of interest payments on certain long- and medium-term corporate debt. The exemption can depend upon, among other things, the time at which a debt is issued. New paragraph 142.7(8)(a.1) is added to treat, for the purpose of subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii), a debt obligation assumed by an authorized foreign bank from its Canadian affiliate as having been issued at the time that the debt was issued by the Canadian affiliate.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 18, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

I am writing in reply to your letter of October 24, 2001, regarding the conversion rules of foreign bank branches, particularly subsection 142.7(8) and subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii) of the Income Tax Act, as well as your letter of November 13, 2001 regarding the application of section 116 of the Act where an authorized foreign bank disposes of its property to a Canadian resident.

Conversion Rules

Subsection 142.7(8) provides the conversion rules for debt obligations assumed by an authorized foreign bank from its Canadian subsidiary, and subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii) exempts from Part XIII non-resident withholding tax the interest paid to a non-resident by a corporation resident in Canada on certain long-term debts. Subsection 212(13.3), meanwhile, treats the branch as a resident of Canada for the purposes of Part XIII.

In your October letter, you note that paragraph 142.7(8)(c) deems the assumed debt not to have been settled or extinguished for the purposes of paragraphs 20(1)(e) and (f), but it does not do the same for the purposes of subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii). You also suggest that the assumption of debt by an authorized foreign bank would result in a novation of that debt as the Canadian affiliate would have been totally discharged from it. In your opinion, when the novation took place there would be a new debt, which would not qualify for the exemption in subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii) if there were less than 5 years left on the debt.

You consider this to be an inappropriate result, and you request an amendment to subsection 142.7(8) to provide specifically that the above-described debt be deemed to continue in order to qualify for the subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii) exemption.

We agree with your views on this point and are prepared to recommend amendments to ensure that, where an authorized foreign bank assumes the debts of its subsidiary, such debt will be deemed for the purposes of the subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii) exemption to have been issued by the entrant bank at the same time that it was issued by the Canadian affiliate under the original terms and conditions.

I trust that the above will satisfy your requirements.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Repeal — 142.7(8)(a.1)

(ii) for the purpose of an election made in respect of the obligation under paragraph (a), the amount outstanding on account of the principal amount of the obligation at that time is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that was advanced to the Canadian affiliate on account of principal, that remains outstanding at that time, and that is determined using the exchange rate that applied between the foreign currency and Canadian currency at the time of the advance; and

(c) for the purpose of applying paragraphs 20(1)(e) and (f) in respect of the debt obligation, the obligation is deemed not to have been settled or extinguished by virtue of its assumption by the entrant bank and the entrant bank is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the Canadian affiliate.

and the Canadian affiliate and the entrant bank jointly elect in accordance with subsection (11) to have subsection (10) apply in respect of the dividend.

(10) Treatment of dividend — If the conditions in subsection (9) are met,

(a) the dividend is deemed (except for the purposes of subsections 112(3) to (7)) not to be a taxable dividend; and

(b) there is added to the amount otherwise determined under paragraph 219(1)(g) in respect of the entrant bank for its first taxation year that ends after the time at which the dividend is paid, the amount of the dividend less, where the dividend is paid by means of, or arises as a result of, a transfer of eligible property in respect of which the Canadian affiliate and the entrant bank have jointly elected under subsection (3), the amount by which the fair market value of the property transferred exceeds the amount the Canadian affiliate and the entrant bank have agreed on in their election.

(ii) in the case of an election under subsection (12), the dissolution order was granted or the winding up commenced; and

(c) in the case of an election under subsection (3) or (7), paragraph (8)(a) or (b) or subsection (10), the dividend, transfer or assumption to which the election relates is paid, made or effected within the period that

(ii) the affiliate has been wound up under the terms of the corporate law that governs it,

(b) the entrant bank carries on all or part of the business in Canada that was formerly carried on by the Canadian affiliate, and

(c) the Canadian affiliate and the entrant bank jointly elect in accordance with subsection (11) to have this section apply

then in applying section 111 for the purpose of computing the taxable income earned in Canada of the entrant bank for any taxation year that begins after the date of the dissolution order or the commencement of the winding up, as the case may be,

(d) subject to paragraphs (e) and (h), the portion of a non-capital loss of the Canadian affiliate for a taxation year (in this paragraph referred to as the "Canadian affiliate's loss year") that can reasonably be regarded as being its loss from carrying on a business in Canada (in this paragraph referred to as the "loss business") or being in respect of a claim made under section 110.5, to the extent that it

(i) was not deducted in computing the taxable income of the Canadian affiliate or any other entrant bank for any taxation year, and

(ii) would have been deductible in computing the taxable income of the Canadian affiliate for any taxation year that begins after the date of the dissolution order or the commencement of the winding up, as the case may be, on the assumption that it had such a taxation year and that it had sufficient income for that year,

(e) if at any time control of the Canadian affiliate or entrant bank has been acquired by a person or group of persons, no amount in respect of the Canadian affiliate's non-capital loss for a taxation year that ends before that time is deductible in computing the taxable income earned in Canada of the entrant bank for a particular taxation year that ends after that time, except that the portion of the loss that can reasonably be regarded as the Canadian affiliate's loss from carrying on a business in Canada and, where a business was carried on by the Canadian affiliate in Canada in the earlier year, the portion of the loss that can reasonably be regarded as being in respect of an amount deductible under paragraph 110(1)(k) in computing its taxable income for the year are deductible only

(i) if that business is carried on by the Canadian affiliate or the entrant bank for profit or with a reasonable expectation of profit throughout the particular year, and

(f) subject to paragraphs (g) and (h), a net capital loss of the Canadian affiliate for a taxation year (in this paragraph referred to as the "Canadian affiliate's loss year") is deemed to be a net capital loss of the entrant bank for its taxation year in which the Canadian affiliate's loss year ended to the extent that the loss

(i) was not deducted in computing the taxable income of the Canadian affiliate or any other entrant bank for any taxation year, and

(ii) would have been deductible in computing the taxable income of the Canadian affiliate for any taxation year beginning after the date of the dissolution order or the commencement of the winding-up, as the case may be, on the assumption that the Canadian affiliate had such a taxation year and that it had sufficient income and taxable capital gains for that year,

(g) if at any time control of the Canadian affiliate or the entrant bank has been acquired by a person or group of persons, no amount in respect of the Canadian affiliate's net capital loss for a taxation year that ends before that time is deductible in computing the entrant bank's taxable income earned in Canada for a taxation year that ends after that time, and

(h) any loss of the Canadian affiliate that would otherwise be deemed by paragraph (d) or (f) to be a loss of the entrant bank for a particular taxation year that begins after the date of the dissolution order or the commencement of the winding-up, as the case may be, is deemed, for the purpose of computing the entrant bank's taxable income earned in Canada for taxation years that begin after that date, to be such a loss of the entrant bank for its immediately preceding taxation year and not for the particu-

143.2 (1) Definitions — The definitions in this subsection apply in this section.

Related Provisions: 143.2(2) — At-risk adjustment in respect of expenditures; 143.2(6) — Expenditures reduced by at-risk adjustment.

"limited partner" has the meaning that would be assigned by subsection 96(2.4) if that subsection were read without reference to "if the member's partnership interest is not an exempt interest (within the meaning assigned by subsection (2.5)) at that time and".

"limited-recourse amount" means the unpaid principal amount of any indebtedness for which recourse is limited, either immediately or in the future and either absolutely or contingently.

"taxpayer" includes a partnership.

"tax shelter investment" means

(a) a property that is a tax shelter for the purpose of subsection 237.1(1); or

(b) a taxpayer's interest in a partnership where

(i) an interest in the taxpayer

(A) is a tax shelter investment, and

(B) the taxpayer's partnership interest would be a tax shelter investment if

(I) this Act were read without reference to this paragraph and to the words "having regard to statements or representations made or proposed to be made in connection with the property" in the definition "tax shelter" in subsection 237.1(1),

(II) the references in that definition to "represented" were read as references to "that can reasonably be expected", and

(III) the reference in that definition to "is represented" were read as a reference to "can reasonably be expected",

(ii) another interest in the partnership is a tax shelter investment, or

(iii) the taxpayer's interest in the partnership entitles the taxpayer, directly or indirectly, to a share of the income or loss of a particular partnership where

(A) another taxpayer holding a partnership interest is entitled, directly or indirectly, to a share of the income or loss of the particular partnership, and

I.T. Technical News: 22 (tax shelter news release — rulings position).

(2) At-risk adjustment — For the purpose of this section, an at-risk adjustment in respect of an expenditure of a particular taxpayer, other than the cost of a partnership interest to which subsection 96(2.2) applies, means any amount or benefit that the particular taxpayer, or another taxpayer not dealing at arm's length with the particular taxpayer, is entitled, either immediately or in the future and either absolutely or contingently, to receive or to obtain, whether by way of reimbursement, compensation, revenue guarantee, proceeds of disposition, loan or any other form of indebtedness, or in any other form or manner whatever, granted or to be granted for the purpose of reducing the impact, in whole or in part, of any loss that the particular taxpayer may sustain in respect of the expenditure or, where the expenditure is the cost or capital cost of a property, any loss from the holding or disposition of the property.

Related Provisions: 96(2.2) — At-risk amount for limited partnership; 143.2(3) — Exclusions from at-risk adjustment; 143.2(4) — Determination of amount or benefit; 143.2(6) — Expenditures reduced by at-risk adjustment; 143.2(9) — Timing.

(3) Amount or benefit not included — For the purpose of subsection (2), an at-risk adjustment in respect of a taxpayer's expenditure does not include an amount or benefit

(a) to the extent that it is included in determining the value of J in the definition "cumulative Canadian exploration expense" in subsection 66.1(6), of M in the definition "cumulative Canadian development expense" in subsection 66.2(5) or of I in the definition "cumulative Canadian oil and gas property expense" in subsection 66.4(5) in respect of the taxpayer; or

(b) the entitlement to which arises

(i) because of a contract of insurance with an insurance corporation dealing at arm's length with the taxpayer (and, where the expenditure is the cost of an interest in a partnership, with each member of the partnership) under which the taxpayer is insured against any claim arising as a result of a liability incurred in the ordinary course of carrying on the business of the taxpayer or the partnership,

(ii) as a consequence of the death of the taxpayer,

(iii) in respect of an amount not included in the expenditure, determined without reference to subparagraph (6)(b)(ii), or

(iv) because of an excluded obligation (as defined in subsection 6202.1(5) of the Income Tax Regulations) in relation to a share issued to the taxpayer or, where the expenditure is the cost of an interest in a partnership, to the partnership.

(4) Amount or benefit — For the purposes of subsections (2) and (3), where the amount or benefit to which a taxpayer is entitled at any time is provided by way of an agreement or other arrangement under which the taxpayer has a right, either immediately or in the future and either absolutely or contingently (otherwise than as a consequence of the death of the taxpayer), to acquire property, for greater certainty the amount or benefit to which the taxpayer is entitled under the agreement or arrangement is considered to be not less than the fair market value of the property at that time.

(5) Amount or benefit — For the purposes of subsections (2) and (3), where the amount or benefit to which a taxpayer is entitled at any time is provided by way of a guarantee, security or similar indemnity or covenant in respect of any loan or other obligation of the taxpayer, for greater certainty the amount or benefit to which the taxpayer is entitled under the guarantee or indemnity at any particular time is considered to be not less than the total of the unpaid amount of the loan or obligation at that time and all other amounts outstanding in respect of the loan or obligation at that time.

(6) Amount of expenditure — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the amount of any expenditure that is, or is the cost or capital cost of, a taxpayer's tax shelter investment, and the amount of any expenditure of a taxpayer an interest in which is a tax shelter investment, shall be reduced to the amount, if any, by which

(a) the amount of the taxpayer's expenditure otherwise determined

exceeds

(b) the total of

(i) the limited-recourse amounts of

(A) the taxpayer, and

(B) all other taxpayers not dealing at arm's length with the taxpayer that can reasonably be considered to relate to the expenditure,

(ii) the taxpayer's at-risk adjustment in respect of the expenditure, and

(iii) each limited-recourse amount and at-risk adjustment, determined under this section when this section is applied to each other taxpayer who deals at arm's length with and holds, directly or indirectly, an interest in the taxpayer, that can reasonably be considered to relate to the expenditure.

Related Provisions: 18.1(13) — Subpara. (6)(b)(ii) inapplicable for matchable expenditures; 237.1(6) — No tax shelter deductions unless shelter registered with CRA; Reg. 1100(20.1), (20.2) — Limitation on CCA claim for computer tax shelter property.

Selected Cases [subsec. 143.2(6)]: Tolhoek v. R., [2008] 3 C.T.C. 403 (FCA) (Assumed indebtedness constituted limited recourse amount and reduced ACB).

Proposed Addition — 143.2(6.1)

(6.1) Limited-recourse debt in respect of a gift or monetary contribution — The limited-recourse debt in respect of a gift or monetary contribution of a taxpayer, at the time the gift or monetary contribution is made, is the total of

(a) each limited-recourse amount at that time, of the taxpayer and of all other taxpayers not dealing at arm's length with the taxpayer, that can reasonably be considered to relate to the gift or monetary contribution,

(b) each limited-recourse amount at that time, determined under this section when this section is applied to each other taxpayer who deals at arm's length with and holds, directly or indirectly, an interest in the taxpayer, that can reasonably be considered to relate to the gift or monetary contribution, and

(c) each amount that is the unpaid amount at that time of any other indebtedness, of any taxpayer referred to in paragraph (a) or (b), that can reasonably be considered to relate to the gift or monetary contribution if there is a guarantee, security or similar indemnity or covenant in respect of that or any other indebtedness.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 99(2), will add subsec. 143.2(6.1), applicable in respect of expenditures, gifts and monetary contributions made after February 18, 2003.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 143.2(6.1) describes limited-recourse debt in respect of a gift or monetary contribution made after February 18, 2003. Such an amount is an advantage under subsection 248(32), such that it reduces the eligible amount of a gift or political contribution determined under subsection 248(31). For additional details regarding the amount of an advantage, see the commentary to new subsection 248(32).

A limited-recourse debt includes the unpaid principal of any indebtedness for which recourse is limited, even if that limitation applies only in the future or contingently. It also includes any other indebtedness of the taxpayer, related to the gift or contribution, if there is a guarantee, security or similar indemnity or covenant in respect of that or any other indebtedness. For example, if a donor (or any other person mentioned below) enters into a contract of insurance whereby all or part of a debt will be paid upon the occurrence of either a certain or contingent event, the debt is a limited-recourse debt in respect of a gift if it is in any way related to the gift.

Such an indebtedness is also a limited-recourse debt if it is owed by a person dealing non-arm's length with the taxpayer or by a person who holds an interest in the taxpayer.

Dept. of Finance news release 2003-061, Dec. 5, 2003: These measures implement proposals introduced in Budget 2003 that address charitable donation arrangements that were promoted in recent years involving the use of limited-recourse debt. [See under 248(35)–(41) for full text of news release — ed.]

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, Feb. 18, 2003: (17) That, after February 18, 2003, . . .

(c) in respect of gifts and contributions, and representations, made after that date, an arrangement in respect of the making of a gift referred to in section 110.1 or 118.1 of the Act or a contribution referred to in subsection 127(4.1) of the Act be deemed to be a tax shelter if it may reasonably be considered that, having regard to representations made concerning the arrangement, a person will incur an indebtedness in respect of which recourse is limited; and

(d) for gifts and contributions made after that date pursuant to an arrangement described in subparagraph (c), the amount of the gift or contribution be reduced by the amount of any associated indebtedness in respect of which recourse is limited, and the value of any repayment of the limited recourse debt be treated as a gift or contribution in the year the repayment is made.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, Feb. 18, 2003: Tax Shelter Definition

Generally, a tax shelter is any property in respect of which it is represented that a potential purchaser will be able to claim, within four years, deductions from income or taxable income which equal or exceed the net cost of the property to the purchaser (that is, net of certain prescribed benefits such as limited-recourse debt).

Promoters of tax shelter properties are not permitted to sell a tax shelter without first obtaining an identification number from the Canada Customs and Revenue Agency (CCRA). This identification number does not constitute confirmation by the CCRA of entitlement to any tax benefits that may have been described to potential purchasers; rather, the CCRA uses the number for administrative purposes such as identifying tax shelters for audit.

If an identification number is not obtained in advance, no person may claim any deduction in respect of the tax shelter until the number is obtained.

While the existing definition of "tax shelter" in the Income Tax Act applies to arrangements promoted as providing deductions in computing income or taxable income, it may not currently apply to those that are promoted as providing only the deduction of tax credits. The budget proposes to eliminate this technical distinction so that promoters will be required to register a property as a tax shelter if representations are made that a potential purchaser will be able to claim, within four years, any combination of deductions in computing income or taxable income and federal tax credits which in total equal or exceed the purchaser's net cost of the property. The definition of tax shelter will also be amended to clarify its application to property acquired under an arrangement in respect of which it is represented that a donation or contribution of the property would generate tax credits or deductions (such as charitable donations tax credits or deductions) equal to or exceeding the net cost to the donor of the property.

In order to avoid a double counting of tax credits in the formula used to determine if a property or an arrangement is a tax shelter, it is proposed that the definition of "prescribed benefits" in paragraph 231(6)(b) of the Income Tax Regulations be amended to exclude any federal tax credit already taken into account in determining whether tax credits and deductions exceed net cost. Provincial tax credits would continue to be considered prescribed benefits.

Further, the budget proposes to treat as a tax shelter any arrangement that involves a transfer of property in respect of which it is represented that a donation or contribution of the property would generate tax credits or deductions, if it may reasonably be considered that a person will incur limited-recourse debt in connection with the arrangement. If the transfer otherwise qualifies for a tax credit or deduction, the amount of the donation or contribution will be reduced for the purposes of calculating the amount of the credit or deduction to the extent of the associated limited-recourse debt. A repayment of the limited-recourse debt will be treated as a donation or contribution in the year it is repaid.

These amendments will generally apply in respect of property acquired, and gifts, contributions and representations made, after February 18, 2003.

Related Provisions: 237.1(1)"gifting arrangement"(b) — Incurring limited-recourse debt may require tax shelter registration; 248(32)(b) — Limited-recourse debt reduces value of donation; 248(34) — Repayment of limited-recourse debt.

(7) Repayment of indebtedness — For the purpose of this section, the unpaid principal of an indebtedness is deemed to be a limited-recourse amount unless

(a) bona fide arrangements, evidenced in writing, were made, at the time the indebtedness arose, for repayment by the debtor of the indebtedness and all interest on the indebtedness within a reasonable period not exceeding 10 years; and

(b) interest is payable at least annually, at a rate equal to or greater than the lesser of

(i) the prescribed rate of interest in effect at the time the indebtedness arose, and

(ii) the prescribed rate of interest applicable from time to time during the term of the indebtedness, and is paid in respect of the indebtedness by the debtor no later than 60 days after the end of each taxation year of the debtor that ends in the period.

Related Provisions: 143.2(12) — Series of loans or repayments; Reg. 4301(c) (prescribed rate of interest).

(8) Limited-recourse amount — For the purpose of this section, the unpaid principal of an indebtedness is deemed to be a limited-recourse amount of a taxpayer where the taxpayer is a partnership and recourse against any member of the partnership in respect of the indebtedness is limited, either immediately or in the future and either absolutely or contingently.

(9) Timing — Where at any time a taxpayer has paid an amount (in this subsection referred to as the "repaid amount") on account of the principal amount of an indebtedness that was, before that time, the unpaid principal amount of a loan or any other form of indebtedness to which subsection (2) applies (in this subsection referred to as the "former amount or benefit") relating to an expenditure of the taxpayer,

(a) the former amount or benefit is considered to have been an amount or benefit under subsection (2) in respect of the taxpayer at all times before that time; and

(b) the expenditure is, subject to subsection (6), deemed to have been made or incurred at that time to the extent of, and by the payment of, the repaid amount.

(10) Timing — Where at any time a taxpayer has paid an amount (in this subsection referred to as the "repaid amount") on account of the principal amount of an indebtedness which was, before that time, an unpaid principal amount that was a limited-recourse amount (in this subsection referred to as the "former limited-recourse indebtedness") relating to an expenditure of the taxpayer,

(a) the former limited-recourse indebtedness is considered to have been a limited-recourse amount at all times before that time; and

(b) the expenditure is, subject to subsection (6), deemed to have been made or incurred at that time to the extent of, and by the amount of, the repaid amount.

Related Provisions: 231.6 — Foreign-based information.

(11) Short-term debt — Where a taxpayer pays all of the principal of an indebtedness no later than 60 days after that indebtedness arose and the indebtedness would otherwise be considered to be a limited-recourse amount solely because of the application of subsection (7) or (8), that subsection does not apply to the indebtedness unless

(a) any portion of the repayment is made with a limited-recourse amount; or

(b) the repayment can reasonably be considered to be part of a series of loans or other indebtedness and repayments that ends more than 60 days after the indebtedness arose.

Related Provisions: 231.6 — Foreign-based information; 251(1) — Arm's length.

(12) Series of loans or repayments — For the purpose of paragraph (7)(a), a debtor is considered not to have made arrangements to repay an indebtedness within 10 years where the debtor's arrangement to repay can reasonably be considered to be part of a series of loans or other indebtedness and repayments that ends more than 10 years after it begins.

Related Provisions: 248(10) — Series of transactions or events.

(13) Information located outside Canada — For the purpose of this section, where it can reasonably be considered that information relating to indebtedness that relates to a taxpayer's expenditure is available outside Canada and the Minister is not satisfied that the unpaid principal of the indebtedness is not a limited-recourse amount, the unpaid principal of the indebtedness relating to the taxpayer's expenditure is deemed to be a limited-recourse amount relating to the expenditure unless

Proposed Amendment — 143.2(13) opening words

(13) Information located outside Canada — For the purpose of this section, if it can reasonably be considered that information relating to indebtedness that relates to a taxpayer's expenditure, gift or monetary contribution is available outside Canada and the Minister is not satisfied that the unpaid principal of the indebtedness is not a limited-recourse amount, the unpaid principal of the indebtedness relating to the taxpayer's expenditure, gift or monetary contribution is deemed to be a limited-recourse amount relating to the expenditure, gift or monetary contribution unless

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 99(3), will amend the opening words of subsec. 143.2(13) to read as above, applicable in respect of expenditures, gifts and monetary contributions made after February 18, 2003.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 143.2(13) applies where information related to an indebtedness in respect of an expenditure is located outside Canada, and the Minister of National Revenue is not satisfied that the indebtedness is not a limited-recourse amount. In such a case, the indebtedness is deemed to be a limited-recourse amount in respect of the expenditure. Subsection 143.2(13) is extended to also apply in respect of an indebtedness that relates to a gift or political contribution made after February 18, 2003.

(a) the information is provided to the Minister; or

(b) the information is located in a country with which the Government of Canada has entered into a tax convention or agreement that has the force of law in Canada and includes a provision under which the Minister can obtain the information.

(14) Information located outside Canada — For the purpose of this section, where it can reasonably be considered that information relating to whether a taxpayer is not dealing at arm's length with another taxpayer is available outside Canada and the Minister is not satisfied that the taxpayer is dealing at arm's length with the other taxpayer, the taxpayer and the other taxpayer are deemed not to be dealing with each other at arm's length unless

(a) the information is provided to the Minister; or

(b) the information is located in a country with which the Government of Canada has entered into a tax convention or agreement that has the force of law in Canada and includes a provision under which the Minister can obtain the information.

(15) Assessments — Notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), such assessments, determinations and redeterminations may be made as are necessary to give effect to this section.

Related Provisions: 237.1(6.2) — Late assessment to deny deduction when penalty unpaid.

Expenditures — Limitations

143.3 [Issuing shares or options is not an expenditure] — (1) Definitions — The following definitions apply in this section.

"expenditure" of a taxpayer means an expense, expenditure or outlay made or incurred by the taxpayer, or a cost or capital cost of property acquired by the taxpayer.

"option" means an option, warrant or similar right, issued or granted by a taxpayer, giving the holder the right to acquire an interest in the taxpayer or in another taxpayer with whom the taxpayer does not, at the time the option, warrant or similar right is issued or granted, deal at arm's length.

"taxpayer" includes a partnership.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New section 143.3 reduces, if applicable, the amount of a taxpayer's expenditure by certain amounts for the purposes of computing the taxpayer's income, taxable income and tax payable or an amount considered to have been paid on account of the taxpayer's tax payable.

New subsection 143.3(1) provides definitions that apply for the purposes of section 143.3. Those definitions are:

"Expenditure" of a taxpayer, which means an expense, expenditure or outlay made or incurred by the taxpayer, or that is a cost or capital cost of property acquired by the taxpayer.

"Option", which means an option, warrant or similar right, issued or granted by the taxpayer, giving the holder the right to acquire an interest in the taxpayer or in another taxpayer with which the taxpayer does not, at the time the option, warrant or similar right is issued or granted, deal at arm's length.

"Taxpayer", which is defined to include a partnership.

(2) Options — limitation — In computing a taxpayer's income, taxable income or tax payable or an amount considered to have been paid on account of the taxpayer's tax payable, an expenditure of the taxpayer is deemed not to include any portion of the expenditure that would — if this Act were read without reference to this subsection — be included in determining the expenditure because of the taxpayer having granted or issued an option on or after November 17, 2005.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 143.3(2) provides that, in computing a taxpayer's income, taxable income or tax payable or an amount considered to have been paid on account of the taxpayer's tax payable, an expenditure of the taxpayer is deemed not to include any portion of the expenditure that would — if the Act were read without reference to subsection 143.3(2) — be included in determining the expenditure because of the taxpayer having granted or issued an option on or after November 17, 2005. In essence, the value of an option granted by a taxpayer is not considered to be an expenditure for income tax purposes.

Related Provisions: 7(3)(b) — No reduction in employer's income from issuing stock options; 143.3(5) — Exceptions.

(3) Corporate shares — limitation — In computing a corporation's income, taxable income or tax payable or an amount considered to have been paid on account of the corporation's tax payable, an expenditure of the corporation that would — if this Act were read without reference to this subsection — include an amount because of the corporation having issued a share of its capital stock at any particular time on or after November 17, 2005 is reduced by

(a) if the issuance of the share is not a consequence of the exercise of an option, the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the share at the particular time exceeds

(i) if the transaction under which the share is issued is a transaction to which section 85, 85.1 or 138 applies, the amount determined under that section to be the cost to the issuing corporation of the property acquired in consideration for issuing the share, or

(ii) in any other case, the amount of the consideration that is the fair market value of the property transferred to, or the services provided to, the issuing corporation for issuing the share; and

(b) if the issuance of the share is a consequence of the exercise of an option, the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the share at the particular time exceeds the amount paid, pursuant to the terms of the option, by the holder to the issuing taxpayer for issuing the share.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 143.3(3) provides for two reductions that apply to an expenditure that would — if the Act were read without reference to subsection 143.3(3) — include an amount because of a corporation (or another corporation not dealing at arm's length with the corporation) having issued a share of its capital stock at any particular time on or after November 17, 2005. The reductions apply to the corporation in computing its income, taxable income or tax payable or an amount considered to have been paid on account of the corporation's tax payable.

New paragraph 143.3(3)(a) applies on the issuance of the share (other than on the exercise of an option). Generally, the corporation is to reduce the related expenditure by the amount, if any, by which

(i) the fair market value of the share

exceeds

(ii) if the transaction under which the share is issued is a transaction to which section 85, 85.1 or 138 applies, the amount determined under that section to be the cost to the corporation of the property acquired in consideration for the issuance of the share, or

(iii) in any other case, the amount of consideration that is the fair market value of the property transferred to, or the services provided to, the issuing corporation for issuing the share.

In addition, under new paragraph 143.3(3)(b), if the issuance of the share is a consequence of the exercise of an option, generally the corporation is to reduce the related expenditure by the amount, if any, by which

(i) the fair market value of the share

exceeds

(ii) that portion of the amount paid, pursuant to the terms of the option, by the holder to the issuing corporation for issuing the share.

[This overrules Alcatel, [2005] 2 C.T.C. 2001 (TCC) — ed.]

Example

Facts

In its 2006 taxation year, Corporation X grants an option to Y in return for $1,000 worth of paintings by a little-known Canadian artist. Corporation X does not give cash or any other consideration for the paintings. The option gives Y the right to acquire one share of Corporation X for $10,000 in 2007. (At the time the option is granted one share of Corporation X has a fair market value of $10,000.)

In 2007, Y exercises the option and pays Corporation X $10,000 cash for the share. The share has a fair market value of $15,000 at the time of issue.

Corporation X files its 2007 income tax return on the basis that the cost of the paintings is $5,000, representing the difference between the fair market value of the share when it was issued and the cash paid by Y for the share.

Application of section 143.3

1. On granting the option:

- New subsection 143.3(2) applies to clarify that there is no expenditure by Corporation X resulting from it issuing the option.

2. On the exercise of the option:

When issuing the share on the exercise of the option, new paragraph 143.3(3)(b) ensures that an expenditure, if any, of Corporation X is reduced by $5,000 — being the amount by which

$15,000 (the fair market value of the share — see subparagraph (b)(i))

$10,000 (the amount paid for the share — see subparagraph (b)(ii).

However, and as noted in the explanatory note accompanying new subsection 143.3(5), the reductions provided for under subsections 143.3(3) and (4) do not apply to reduce an expenditure if the expenditure itself does not include an amount determined to be excesses described in those subsections.

Related Provisions: 52(3)(a) — Cost of share received as stock dividend excludes amount deductible under 112(1); 143.3(5) — Exceptions.

(4) Non-corporate interests — limitation — In computing a taxpayer's (other than a corporation's) income, taxable income or tax payable or an amount considered to have been paid on account of the taxpayer's tax payable, an expenditure of the taxpayer that would — if this Act were read without reference to this subsection — include an amount because of the taxpayer having issued an interest, or because of an interest being created, in itself at any particular time on or after November 17, 2005 is reduced by

(a) if the issuance or creation of the interest is not a consequence of the exercise of an option, the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the interest at the particular time exceeds

(i) if the transaction under which the interest is issued is a transaction to which paragraph 70(6)(b) or 73(1.01)(c), subsection 97(2) or section 107.4 or 132.2 applies, the amount determined under that provision to be the cost to the taxpayer of the property acquired for the interest, or

(ii) in any other case, the amount of the consideration that is the fair market value of the property transferred to, or the services provided to, the taxpayer for the interest; and

(b) if the issuance or creation of the interest is a consequence of the exercise of an option, the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the interest at the particular time exceeds the amount paid, pursuant to the terms of the option, by the holder to the taxpayer for the interest.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 143.3(4) provides for two reductions that apply to a non-corporate taxpayer's expenditure that would — if the Act were read without reference to subsection 143.3(4) — include an amount because the taxpayer (or another taxpayer not dealing at arm's length with the taxpayer) issues or creates an interest in itself at any particular time on or after November 17, 2005. The reductions apply to the taxpayer in computing its income, taxable income or tax payable or an amount considered to have been paid on account of the taxpayer's tax payable.

In general terms, under new paragraph 143.3(4)(a), if the issuance or creation of the interest in a taxpayer is not a consequence of the exercise of an option, the taxpayer is to reduce the expenditure by the amount, if any, by which

(i) the fair market value of the interest

exceeds

(ii) if the transaction under which the interest is issued or created is a transaction to which paragraph 70(6)(b), subsection 97(2), paragraph 73(1.01)(c), subsection 73(1.02), section 107.4 or 132.2 applies, the amount determined under that provision to be the cost to the taxpayer of the property acquired for the interest, or

(iii) in any other case, the amount of the consideration that is the fair market value of the property transferred to, or the services provided to, the taxpayer for the interest.

In addition, under new paragraph 143.3(4)(b), if the issuance or creation of the interest is a consequence of the exercise of an option, the taxpayer is to reduce the expenditure by the amount, if any, by which

exceeds

(ii) the amount paid, pursuant to the terms of the option, by the holder to the taxpayer for the interest.

However, and as noted in the explanatory note accompanying new subsection 143.3(5), the reductions provided for under subsections 143.3(3) and (4) do not apply to reduce an expenditure if the expenditure itself does not include an amount determined to be excesses described in those subsections.

Related Provisions: 143.3(5) — Exceptions.

(5) Clarification — For greater certainty,

(a) subsection (2) does not apply to reduce an expenditure that is a commission, fee or other amount for services rendered by a person as a salesperson, agent or dealer in securities in the course of the issuance of an option;

(b) subsections (3) and (4) do not apply to reduce an expenditure of a taxpayer to the extent that the expenditure does not include an amount determined to be an excess under those subsections;

(c) this section does not apply to determine the cost or capital cost of property determined under subsection 70(6), section 73, 85 or 85.1, subsection 97(2) or section 107.4, 132.2 or 138;

(d) this section does not apply to determine the amount of a taxpayer's expenditure if the amount of the expenditure as determined under section 69 is less than the amount that would,

if this subsection were read without reference to this paragraph, be the amount of the expenditure as determined under this section; and

(e) for the purposes of subparagraph (3)(a)(ii), the issuance of a share of a taxpayer that is a corporation is deemed to be a transfer of property.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 10, 2009:

Ms. Sandra Jack, Q.C. and Mr. D. Brett Anderson, Felesky Flynn LLP, Calgary, AB

Dear Ms. Jack and Mr. Anderson:

I am replying to your letter of November 24, 2009 concerning proposed section 143.3 of the Income Tax Act.

In your letter, you note that proposed section 143.3 limits a taxpayer's cost of property in circumstances where the taxpayer issues its own shares as consideration for the acquisition of the property. You are concerned that the proposal would yield inappropriate results in circumstances where a corporation (the "first corporation") issues shares in consideration for another corporation (the "second corporation") issuing shares to it. In these circumstances, and based on a conclusion that the issuance of shares by the second corporation is not a "transfer" of property by that second corporation, you are of the view that the cost of the second corporation's shares acquired by the first corporation would be reduced to zero because there was no property "transferred" by the second corporation to the first corporation.

In view of the above, you recommend that the proposed legislation be clarified to ensure that the issuance of shares by the second corporation in these circumstances would be provided the same treatment as is accorded transfers of other types of property. We agree that, from a tax policy perspective, the text "property transferred to" in proposed subparagraph 143.3(3)(a)(ii) should not apply to exclude shares issued to the first corporation in the circumstances described above.

We are therefore prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that proposed section 143.3 be clarified to expressly address this concern applicable to shares issued on and after November 17, 2005 [See now 143.3(5)(e), first introduced in the draft legislation of July 16, 2010 — ed.]. While I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 143.3(5) provides five rules for greater certainty.

First, paragraph 143.3(5)(a) clarifies that subsection 143.3(2) does not reduce an expenditure that is a commission, fee or other amount for services rendered by a person as a salesperson, agent or dealer in securities in the course of the issuance of the option.

Second, paragraph 143.3(5)(b) clarifies that subsections 143.3(3) and (4) do not apply to reduce an expenditure to the extent that the expenditure does not include an amount determined to be an excess under those subsections. For example, if a corporation were to issue shares of its capital stock having a fair market value of $100 in consideration for having acquired property or services having a fair market value of $40, no excess exists under paragraph 143.3(3)(a) if the expenditure of the corporation for the property or services claimed by the corporation without reference to section 143.3 is, for income tax purposes, $40. To the extent the corporation seeks to claim an expenditure in excess of that $40, paragraph 143.3(3)(a) would reduce that excess to nil. Paragraph 143.3(5)(b) recognizes that the jurisprudence that would treat an expenditure of the type reduced by subsections 143.3(3) and (4) currently applies only to scientific research and experimental development (SR&ED) tax credits, and is limited to a single decision of the Tax Court of Canada [Alcatel, [2005] 2 C.T.C. 2001 — ed.]. It may very well transpire that future jurisprudence may constrain or eliminate any such expenditure that may be considered to arise in these circumstances.

Third, paragraph 143.3(5)(c) clarifies that section 143.3 does not determine the cost or capital cost of property determined under certain tax-deferral rules. For example, if section 85 deems a transferee corporation that acquires non-depreciable capital property to do so at a cost of $100 in circumstances where the corporation issued a share of its capital stock having a fair market value of $200, this section does not decrease or increase the $100 cost for the property to the corporation, as determined under section 85.

Fourth, paragraph 143.3(5)(d) clarifies that section 143.3 does not determine the amount of a taxpayer's expenditure if the amount of the expenditure as determined under section 69 is less than an amount determined under section 143.3.

Fifth, paragraph 143.3(5)(e) clarifies that that the issuance of a share is a transfer of property for the purposes of subparagraphs (3)(a)(ii). In particular, paragraph 143.3(3)(a)(ii) refers to "property transferred to" an issuing corporation — thus paragraph (5)(e) clarifies that, if another corporation issues shares of its capital stock to the issuing corporation, that other corporation is "transferring" property to the issuing corporation for the purposes of the issuing corporation applying the limitations in subsection 143.3(3).

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 100, will add s. 143.3, applicable after November 16, 2005.

Dept. of Finance news release 2005-080, Nov. 17, 2005: Minister of Finance Proposes Amendments Concerning the Income Tax Treatment of Certain Expenditures

Minister of Finance Ralph Goodale today acted to protect the income tax base by ensuring that tax credits and deductions claimed by corporations are appropriate. Specifically, he tabled a Notice of Ways and Means Motion proposing amendments to the Income Tax Act to clarify that the amount of an expenditure allowable to a taxpayer, and upon which a tax credit or deduction may be claimed, is limited to the amount actually disbursed by the taxpayer.

The proposed amendments respond to a recent Tax Court of Canada decision [Alcatel, [2005] 2 C.T.C. 2001 — ed.] involving shares issued under an employee stock option plan. The amount paid by the employees was less than the value of the shares at the time they were issued, and the Court allowed the corporation to treat the difference as a scientific research and experimental development (SR&ED) expenditure qualifying for SR&ED tax credits.

The proposed amendments are designed to ensure that, for income tax purposes, no expenditure will be considered to have been made by a taxpayer except to the extent of an actual outlay or expense incurred by the taxpayer.

A related proposal [220(2.2) — ed.] is meant to ensure that a taxpayer cannot deduct SR&ED expenditures, nor be eligible for investment tax credits, if the taxpayer takes more than the additional 12 months allowed to make a claim under the Income Tax Act.

In general, the proposal related to employee stock options applies to options granted and shares issued on or after today, and the proposal concerning SR&ED and investment tax credit claims applies on and after today.

The attached backgrounder provides additional information about these proposals. References to "Announcement Day" in the proposed legislation and explanatory notes should be read as referring to today's date.

Backgrounder

Canada's income tax system in general provides tax recognition to expenditures incurred to earn income to the extent that a taxpayer disburses, or is obligated to disburse, money or money's worth. However, a recent court decision has brought into question whether there is an expenditure in certain circumstances for which, traditionally, no expenditure had been recognized for income tax purposes. The background to this issue and the Government's proposed response is discussed below.

The Amount of an Expenditure — Disbursement of Money or Money's Worth

The income tax system generally recognizes an expenditure to the extent that a taxpayer has provided consideration in the form of money or money's worth. Examples of non-monetary consideration include the provision of services, the provision of movable or immovable property and the assumption of a liability. The issuance of shares by a corporation, in exchange for the provision of goods or services to it, may also be treated as an expenditure for income tax purposes, but the amount of the expenditure made by the corporation has recently come into question.

The case law has traditionally allowed a corporation in such cases to consolidate two transactions into one: (1) the corporation provides consideration on the acquisition of an asset or service from the other person, and (2) the other person reinvests that consideration in the corporation on the issuance of capital stock of the corporation to the other person. When considered this way, if the other person's obligation to pay the corporation for the issued shares is satisfied with an asset or the provision of services, the corporation is generally considered as having acquired the asset or incurred an expenditure in respect of the asset or services at a cost equal to the amount invested by the other person in the corporation, as reflected in the corporation's share capital.

However, in a February 2005 decision of the Tax Court of Canada [Alcatel, [2005] 2 C.T.C. 2001 — ed.] a corporate taxpayer was allowed to claim an SR&ED tax credit for the amount by which the fair market value of shares issued by the corporation exceeded the exercise price payable to the corporation for its shares under an employee stock option plan. The Tax Court noted that the value of the shares in excess of the exercise price did not increase the share capital. In other words, while the excess was not an amount invested in the corporation within the parameters of the above-mentioned traditional approach to providing cost recognition, the Tax Court found that the excess was an expenditure for SR&ED tax credit purposes.

Such excesses do not represent an outlay of a corporation; rather they generally represent a dilution of the value of the share equity of the other shareholders of the corporation. Such excesses were not intended to be considered expenditures under the SR&ED tax incentive program.

The rules announced today clarify that such an excess will not be recognized as an expenditure for income tax purposes. Similar clarifying rules are provided for cases involving the issuance of interests in partnerships and trusts. As well, the rules clarify that no expenditure arises solely by virtue of a taxpayer granting an option to acquire an interest in itself.

Definitions [s. 143.3]: "amount" — 248(1); "arm's length" — 251(1); "corporation" — 248(1), Interpretation Act 35(1); "expenditure", "option" — 143.3(1); "person", "property", "share", "taxable income" — 248(1); "taxpayer" — 143.3(1), 248(1).

Proposed Addition — 143.4

Expenditures — Limit for Contingent Amount

143.4 (1) Definitions — The following definitions apply in this section.

"contingent amount", of a taxpayer at any time (other than a time at which the taxpayer is a bankrupt), includes an amount to the extent that the taxpayer, or another taxpayer that does not deal at arm's length with the taxpayer, has a right to reduce the amount at that time.

"expenditure", of a taxpayer, means an expense, expenditure or outlay made or incurred by the taxpayer, or a cost or capital cost of property acquired by the taxpayer.

"right to reduce", an amount in respect of an expenditure at any time, means a right to reduce or eliminate the amount including, for greater certainty, a right to reduce that is contingent upon the occurrence of an event, or in any other way, if it is reasonable to conclude, having regard to all the circumstances, that the right will become exercisable.

Technical Notes: New subsection 143.4(1) provides four definitions that apply for the purpose of the limitation that may apply in respect of an expenditure under section 143.4. The main rule in respect of this limitation is found in subsection 143.4(2) which provides, in general, that an "expenditure" of a "taxpayer" is reduced to the extent there is, in the year in which the expenditure occurs, a "contingent amount" of the taxpayer — essentially where the taxpayer has a "right to reduce" an amount in respect of the expenditure. These four definitions are more fully described below.

"Contingent amount" of a taxpayer at any time (other than a time at which the taxpayer is a bankrupt) includes an amount to the extent that the taxpayer, or another taxpayer that does not deal at arm's length with the taxpayer, has a right to reduce the amount at that time.

"Expenditure" of a taxpayer means an expense, expenditure or outlay made or incurred by the taxpayer, or a cost or capital cost of property acquired by the taxpayer.

"Right to reduce" in respect of an amount of an expenditure at any time is broadly defined to mean a right to reduce or eliminate the amount. For these purposes a "right to reduce" is defined to include a right that is contingent upon the occurrence of an event, or in any other way, but only if it is reasonable to conclude, having regard to all the circumstances, that the right will become exercisable.

"Taxpayer" includes a partnership.

(2) Limitation of amount of expenditure — For the purposes of this Act, if in a taxation year of a taxpayer an expenditure of the taxpayer occurs, the amount of the expenditure at any time is the lesser of

(a) the amount of the expenditure at the time calculated under this Act without reference to this section, and

(b) the least amount of the expenditure calculated by reducing the amount of the expenditure determined under paragraph (a) by the amount that is the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is a contingent amount of the taxpayer in the year in respect of the expenditure

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount paid by the taxpayer to obtain a right to reduce an amount in respect of the expenditure.

Technical Notes: New subsection 143.4(2) provides that the amount of a taxpayer's expenditure is the lesser of two amounts. Paragraph (a) provides that the first of these two amounts is the amount of the expenditure calculated under the Act without reference to new section 143.4. In general, the second amount in paragraph (b) is calculated by reducing the first amount by the amount, if any, that is the total of each contingent amount in respect of the expenditure. The amount computed under paragraph (b) is to be reduced by the total of all amounts paid by the taxpayer in order to obtain a right to reduce an amount in respect of the expenditure.

Related Provisions: 18(1)(e) — No deduction from business or property for contingent amount; 143.4(3) — Where amount is later paid; 143.4(4) — Later year's right-to-reduce included in income; 143.4(6) — Anti-avoidance; 143.4(7) — Late reassessment permitted.

(3) Payment of contingent amount — For the purposes of this Act, if in a particular taxation year, a taxpayer pays all or a portion of a contingent amount referred to in paragraph (2)(b) that reduced the amount of the taxpayer's expenditure referred to in paragraph (2)(a), the portion of the contingent amount paid by the taxpayer in the particular year for the purpose of earning income, and to that extent only, is deemed

(a) to have been incurred by the taxpayer in the particular year;

(b) to have been incurred for the same purpose and to have the same character as the expenditure so reduced; and

(c) to have become payable by the taxpayer in respect of the particular year.

Technical Notes: New subsection 143.4(3) provides, in general, that if an expenditure of a taxpayer has been reduced because of a contingent amount referred to in subsection 143.4(2) and the taxpayer later pays all or a portion of the contingent amount, then the taxpayer is considered to have incurred the previously reduced expenditure to the extent it was paid. In this case, the amount paid is considered to be incurred in the year paid for the same purpose and to have the same character as the expenditure that was reduced under subsection 143.4(2).

(4) Subsequent years — Subject to subsection (6), if at any time in a taxation that is after a taxation year in which an expenditure of the taxpayer occurred, the taxpayer, or another taxpayer not dealing at arm's length with the taxpayer, has a right to reduce an amount in respect of the expenditure (in this subsection and subsection (5) referred to as the "prior expenditure") that would, if the taxpayer or the other taxpayer had had the right to reduce in a particular taxation year that ended before the time, have resulted in subsection (2) applying in the particular taxation year to reduce or eliminate the amount of the prior expenditure, the taxpayer's subsequent contingent amount in respect of the prior expenditure, as determined under subsection (5), is deemed, to the extent subsection (2) and this subsection have not previously applied in respect of the expenditure,

(a) to be an amount received by the taxpayer at the time in the course of earning income from a business or property from a person described in subparagraph 12(1)(x)(i); and

(b) to be an amount referred to in subparagraph 12(1)(x)(iv).

Technical Notes: New subsection 143.4(4) provides a special rule that, in general, applies if a taxpayer, or a person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length, has a right to reduce (as defined by subsection 143.4(1)) in respect of an expenditure in a year subsequent to the taxation year in which the expenditure occurred. In such cases, subsection 143.4(4) deems the taxpayer to have received a "subsequent contingent amount" in the course of earning income from a business or property to which paragraph 12(1)(x) applies. This rule applies to the extent subsections 143.4(2) and (4) have not previously applied in respect of the expenditure. For this purpose, the amount of a taxpayer's subsequent contingent amount is to be determined under new subsection 143.4(5).

However, subsection 143.4(4) does not apply to a taxpayer's subsequent contingent amount if the special anti-avoidance rule in new subsection (6) applies to deem the amount to be a contingent amount in the previous year in which the expenditure otherwise occurred. In such cases, subsection 143.4(2) applies to reduce the amount of the expenditure in the taxation year in which it otherwise occurred. For more detail see the discussion in respect of the special anti-avoidance rule in subsection 143.4(6)).

Related Provisions: 143.4(5) — Meaning of "subsequent contingent amount".

(5) Subsequent contingent amount — For the purpose of applying subsection (4), a taxpayer's "subsequent contingent amount" in respect of a prior expenditure of the taxpayer is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the maximum amount by which the amount (in this subsection referred to as the "particular amount") in respect of the prior expenditure may be reduced pursuant to a right to reduce the particular amount

exceeds

(b) the amount, if any, paid to obtain the right to reduce the particular amount.

Technical Notes: New subsection 143.4(5) provides in general that a taxpayer's "subsequent contingent amount" is, for the purpose of applying subsection 143.4(4), the amount by which the amount in respect of an expenditure may be reduced under a right to reduce exceeds the amount paid to obtain the right to reduce the amount in respect of the expenditure.

(6) Anti-avoidance — If a taxpayer, or another taxpayer that does not deal at arm's length with the taxpayer, has a right to reduce an amount in respect of an expenditure of the taxpayer in a taxation year that is after the taxation year in which the expenditure otherwise occurred, determined without reference to subsection (3), the taxpayer is deemed to have the right to reduce in the taxation year in which that expenditure otherwise occurred if it is reasonable to conclude having regard to all the circumstances that one of the purposes for having the right to reduce after the end of the year in which the expenditure otherwise occurred was to avoid the application of subsection (2) to the amount of the expenditure.

Technical Notes: New subsection 143.4(6) provides a special anti-avoidance rule that applies if it is reasonable to conclude that one of the purposes for having a right to reduce an amount in respect of an expenditure after the end of the taxation year in which an expenditure otherwise occurred was to avoid a reduction under subsection 143.4(2) in respect of the expenditure.

In such a case, subsection 143.4(6) deems the right to reduce to exist in the taxation year in which the expenditure otherwise arose. The result of deeming the right to reduce to exist in the year in which the expenditure otherwise occurred is that the limitation in subsection 143.4(2) for a contingent amount in respect of an expenditure applies to reduce the amount of the expenditure in that previous taxation year.

(7) Assessments — Notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), such assessments, determinations and redeterminations may be made as are necessary to give effect to this section.

Technical Notes: New subsection 143.4(7) provides to the Minister of National Revenue the authority to make the assessments, determinations and redeterminations that are necessary to give effect to section 143.4 notwithstanding that the taxation year in question is otherwise statute-barred from assessment.

Application: The March 16, 2011 draft legislation, s. 2, will add s. 143.4, applicable in respect of taxation years that end after March 15, 2011.

Technical Notes: New section 143.4 provides a rule that, in general, reduces the amount of a taxpayer's expenditure, that is otherwise deductible for the purposes of the Act or that otherwise forms part of a capital property to the taxpayer, if the taxpayer has a right to reduce or eliminate the amount that the taxpayer is required to pay in respect of the expenditure. This rule responds to the Federal Court of Appeal's decision in Collins v. The Queen (2010 FCA 12) [[2010] 3 C.T.C. 100] in which the Court held that the taxpayers could deduct interest expenses as they accrued even though the taxpayers' had a right to reduce the amount payable in respect of the interest expenses. The Court indicated that it was not the interest amounts payable that were contingent; instead, it was the issue of whether the taxpayers would exercise their right to reduce the amount they were required to pay that was contingent. Further commentary on this new rule is provided below.

D is the total of all amounts each of which is

(i) an amount deducted by the taxpayer under subsection (5) or (5.1), in computing the taxpayer's income for the year,

(ii) an amount deducted by the taxpayer under paragraph 10 of Article XVIII of the Canada-United States Tax Convention signed at Washington on September 26, 1980 or a similar provision in another tax treaty, in computing the taxpayer's taxable income for the year, or

(iii) a contribution made by an employer in the year to a pooled registered pension plan in respect of the taxpayer, and

Application: The December 14, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 10(1), will amend the description of D in the definition "unused RRSP deduction room" in subsec. 146(1) to read as above, in force or deemed in force on the day of the coming into force of S.C. 2012, c. 16 (Bill C-25, Royal Assent June 18, 2012), Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act.

Technical Notes: Subsection 146(1) defines "unused RRSP deduction room", which measures the amount of deduction room for RRSP contributions that an individual may carry forward from one year to use in future years. An individual's unused RRSP deduction room at the end of a year is generally defined to be the amount determined by the formula A + B + R – (C + D). Variable D reduces an individual's unused RRSP deduction room by the RRSP contributions deducted by the individual in computing his or her income for the year.

Variable D is amended to add a new subparagraph (iii), under which an individual's unused RRSP deduction room will also be reduced by the amount of contributions made by an employer in the year to the individual's account under a pooled registered pension plan (PRPP). As a consequence, employer contributions to a PRPP in one year will reduce an individual's "RRSP deduction limit" (defined in subsection 146(1) to include unused RRSP deduction room) in the following year. Pursuant to subsection 146(5), an employer's contributions to an individual's PRPP account in a year also reduce the deductible contributions that the individual can make in the year to an RRSP or PRPP.

R is the taxpayer's total pension adjustment reversal for the year.

History: The description of D in para. (b) of the definition "unused RRSP deduction room" in subsec. 146(1) amended by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 51(2), applicable to 2009 et seq. The description formerly read:

D is the total of the amounts deducted by the taxpayer under subsections (5) and (5.1) and paragraph 60(v) in computing the taxpayer's income for the year, and

Para. (b) of the definition "unused RRSP deduction room" amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 37(2), applicable after 1988 except that, for taxation years before 1998, the description of "R" shall be read as "R is nil". Para. (b) formerly read:

(b) for taxation years that end after 1990,

(i) the amount, which can be positive or negative, determined by the formula

where

A is the taxpayer's unused RRSP deduction room at the end of the immediately preceding taxation year,

B is the amount, if any, by which the lesser of the RRSP dollar limit for the year and 18% of the taxpayer's earned income for the immediately preceding taxation year exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is the taxpayer's pension adjustment for the immediately preceding taxation year in respect of an employer, or a prescribed amount in respect of the taxpayer for the year,

C is the taxpayer's net past service pension adjustment for the year, and

D is the total of the amounts deducted by the taxpayer under subsections (5) and (5.1) and paragraph 60(v) in computing the taxpayer's income for the year.

(b) for taxation years ending after 1990, the lesser of

. . . . .

(ii) the greater of

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, determined in respect of a particular taxation year that is the year or such of the six taxation years immediately preceding the year as end after 1990, that is the lesser of 18% of the taxpayer's earned income for the taxation year immediately preceding the particular taxation year and the RRSP dollar limit for the particular taxation year, and

(1.1) Restriction — financially dependent — For the purposes of paragraph (b) of the definition "refund of premiums" in subsection (1), clause 60(l)(v)(B.01), the definition "eligible individual" in subsection 60.02(1), subparagraph 104(27)(e)(i) and section 147.5, it is assumed, unless the contrary is established, that an individual's child or grandchild was not financially dependent on the individual for support immediately before the individual's death if the income of the child or grandchild for the taxation year preceding the taxation year in which the individual died exceeded the amount determined by the formula

Application: The December 14, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 10(2), will amend the opening words of subsec. 146(1.1) to read as above, in force or deemed in force on the day of the coming into force of S.C. 2012, c. 16 (Bill C-25, Royal Assent June 18, 2012), Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act.

Technical Notes: Certain tax provisions apply in relation to the treatment of retirement savings on the death of an individual in situations where a recipient of the savings is a financially dependent child or grandchild of the deceased individual. Subsection 146(1.1) sets out a rebuttable presumption that a child or grandchild of a deceased RRSP annuitant is not financially dependent on the deceased if the income of the child or grandchild exceeds the amount specified in that subsection.

Subsection 146(1.1) is amended, consequential on the introduction of section 147.5 pertaining to PRPPs, so that the rebuttable presumption in that subsection also applies for the purposes of that section. For example, the rebuttable presumption in subsection 146(1.1) will now apply for the purposes of

- the definition "qualifying survivor" (in subsection 147.5(1)) of a deceased PRPP member, which includes a child or grandchild who was financially dependent on the member for support; and
- new subsection 147.5(20), which permits a tax-free transfer of a lump sum death benefits paid from a deceased PRPP member's account to a child or grandchild who was financially dependent on the member for support by reason of mental or physical infirmity.

where

A is the amount used under paragraph (c) of the description of B in subsection 118(1) for that preceding taxation year; and

B is nil, unless the financial dependency was because of mental or physical infirmity, in which case it is $6,180 adjusted for each such preceding taxation year that is after 2002 in the manner set out in section 117.1.

History: The opening words of subsec. 146(1.1) amended by 2011, c. 24, subsec. 45(3), deemed to have come into force on March 4, 2010. They formerly read:

(1.1) For the purpose of paragraph (b) of the definition "refund of premiums" in subsection (1), clause and subparagraph 104(27)(e)(i), it is assumed, unless the contrary is established, that an individual's child or grandchild was not financially dependent on the individual for support immediately before the individual's death if the income of the child or grandchild for the taxation year preceding the taxation year in which the individual died exceeded the amount determined by the formula

Subsec. 146(1.1) added by 2003, c. 15, subsec. 82(3), applicable in respect of deaths that occur after 2002.

(1.1) Definition of "spouse" — For the purposes of the definitions "annuitant", "refund of premiums" and "retirement income" in subsection (1), paragraph (3)(b) and subsections (8.8), (8.91) and (16), "spouse" of an individual means a person of the opposite sex

(i) that was deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for a preceding taxation year,

(ii) that was designated for any taxation year for the purposes of paragraph 60(j), (j.1) or (l),

(iii) in respect of which the taxpayer received a payment that was deducted under subsection (8.2) in computing the taxpayer's income for a preceding taxation year,

(iv) that was deductible under subsection (6.1) in computing the taxpayer's income for any taxation year, or

(iv.1) that would be considered to be withdrawn by the taxpayer as an eligible amount (as defined in subsection 146.01(1) or 146.02(1)) less than 90 days after it was paid, if earnings in respect of a registered retirement savings plan were considered to be withdrawn before premiums paid under that plan and premiums were considered to be withdrawn in the order in which they were paid

Proposed Amendment — 146(5)(b)

(b) the amount, if any, by which the taxpayer's RRSP deduction limit for the year exceeds the total of all contributions made by an employer in the year to a pooled registered pension plan in respect of the taxpayer.

Application: The December 14, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 10(3), will amend para. 146(5)(b) to read as above, in force or deemed in force on the day of the coming into force of S.C. 2012, c. 16 (Bill C-25, Royal Assent June 18, 2012), Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act.

Technical Notes: Subsection 146(5) provides that an individual may deduct in computing his or her income for a taxation year an amount not exceeding the lesser of two amounts. The first amount, determined under paragraph 146(5)(a), is the individual's undeducted RRSP contributions made on or before the 60th day of the year following the taxation year. The second amount, determined under paragraph 146(5)(b), is the individual's RRSP deduction limit for the year.

Paragraph 146(5)(b) is amended, consequential on the introduction of new section 147.5 pertaining to pooled registered pension plans (PRPPs), so that an employer's contributions in a year to an individual's PRPP account will reduce the amount of deductible contributions that an individual can make in that same year to an RRSP or PRPP.

The impact of an employer's contributions to PRPPs on the RRSP room of its employees is not similar to the "pension adjustment" mechanism that applies to employer contributions to a money purchase provision (as defined in subsection 147.1(1)) of a registered pension plan (RPP). Under the RPP rules, a pension adjustment generated from contributions in respect of an individual (i.e., the employee) for a particular year reduces the individual's "RRSP deduction limit" and "unused RRSP deduction room" for the year following the year in which the employer contributions are made.

In the case of a PRPP, an employer's contributions to an individual's PRPP account in a taxation year will immediately reduce the individual's ability to make deductible RRSP contributions under subsection 146(5). New subsection 147.5(11) deems an individual's contributions to a PRPP in a taxation year to be premiums paid by the individual to an RRSP of the individual for various purposes of the Act, including subsection 146(5). As a result, an individual's PRPP contributions in a year will immediately reduce the individual's ability to make deductible RRSP contributions in that same year.

(b) a deferred profit sharing plan is amended or administered in such a manner as to terminate, suspend or delay contributions under the plan for the year in respect of an individual, and one of the main reasons for the termination, suspension or delay may reasonably be considered to be to reduce the pension adjustment of the individual for the year in respect of an employer, the only amount that may be deducted in computing the income for the year of the individual, in respect of premiums paid to registered retirement savings plans, is the amount that would have been deductible had that termination, suspension or delay not occurred.

(a) the net loss (exclusive of payments by the trust as or on account of interest) sustained by the trust in consequence of its using the property, or permitting it to be used, as security for the loan and not as a result of a change in the fair market value of the property

(8.1) Deemed receipt of refund of premiums — Where a portion of an amount paid out of or under a registered retirement savings plan of a deceased annuitant to the annuitant's legal representative would have been a refund of premiums if it had been paid under the plan to a beneficiary of the deceased's estate, it is, to the extent it is so designated jointly by the legal representative and the beneficiary in prescribed form filed with the Minister, deemed to be received by the beneficiary (and not by the legal representative) at the time it was so paid as a benefit that is a refund of premiums.

Proposed Amendment — 146(8.1)

(8.1) Deemed receipt of refund of premiums — If a payment out of or under a registered retirement savings plan of a deceased annuitant to the annuitant's legal representative would have been a refund of premiums if it had been paid under the plan to an individual who is a beneficiary (as defined in subsection 108(1)) under the deceased's estate, the payment is, to the extent it is so designated jointly by the legal representative and the individual in prescribed form filed with the Minister, deemed to be received by the individual (and not by the legal representative) at the time it was so paid as a benefit that is a refund of premiums.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 101(5), will amend subsec. 146(8.1) to read as above, applicable after 1988 except that, before 1999, it is to be read as follows:

> (8.1) Such portion of an amount paid in a taxation year out of or under a registered retirement savings plan of a deceased annuitant to the annuitant's legal representative as, had that portion been paid under the plan to an individual who is a beneficiary (as defined in subsection 108(1)) under the deceased's estate, would have been a refund of premiums is, to the extent it is so designated jointly by the legal representative and the individual in prescribed form filed with the Minister, deemed to be received by the individual in the year as a benefit that is a refund of premiums.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 146(8.1) deals with situations in which an amount paid from a deceased individual's RRSP to the individual's estate would have been a "refund of premiums" if it had been paid by the RRSP to a beneficiary under the estate. An amount paid out of an RRSP as a consequence of the death of the annuitant is defined, by subsection 146(1), to be a "refund of premiums" if the recipient was, immediately before the death of the RRSP annuitant, a spouse or common-law partner of the annuitant or a financially dependent child or grandchild of the annuitant.

Subsection 146(8.1) allows the legal representative of a deceased RRSP annuitant's estate and a qualifying beneficiary under the estate to elect jointly to have the RRSP proceeds that were paid to the estate treated as a refund of premiums received by the beneficiary from the RRSP. When such an election is made, the beneficiary may include the deemed refund of premiums in income. If a corresponding amount is used to acquire a qualifying annuity or is paid into an RRSP or registered retirement income fund of the beneficiary and certain other conditions are satisfied, the beneficiary will be entitled to an offsetting deduction under paragraph 60(l).

Subsection 146(8.1) is amended to provide that the expression "beneficiary" under a deceased RRSP annuitant's estate has the meaning assigned by subsection 108(1). This has the effect of extending the provisions of subsection 146(8.1) to an individual who is "beneficially interested" in a deceased RRSP annuitant's estate (as defined in subsection 248(25)), but who is not a beneficiary under the estate. This could occur, for example, where an individual has only an indirect interest in the deceased RRSP annuitant's estate by virtue of being a beneficiary under a trust that is a beneficiary under the estate — a structure typically contemplated in the estate planning of parents of mentally infirm children.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, April 20, 2005:

Ms. Lucie Beauchemin, Raymond Chabot Grant Thornton, LLP, Montréal, QC

Dear Ms. Beauchemin:

This is in reply to your letter of January 25, 2005 concerning proposed amendments to paragraph 60(l) of the Income Tax Act, released by the Department of Finance on February 27, 2004. In general terms, the proposed amendments are intended to accommodate a tax-deferred rollover of the proceeds of a deceased individual's RRSP where the proceeds are used to acquire a life annuity under which a qualifying trust for a qualifying infirm individual is the annuitant.

You suggest that additional legislative amendments are needed in order to give effect to the stated intent of the proposed amendments. In this regard, you describe (in your letter and in the Ruling Request to which you make reference) a situation in which the proceeds of a deceased individual's RRSP are transferred to the deceased individual's legal representative. The funds are then used by the deceased's estate to acquire an annuity under which the annuitant is a testamentary trust created under the will of the deceased. A mentally infirm financially dependent child of the deceased is, during the child's lifetime, the sole beneficiary of the testamentary trust. While the child does not have a direct interest in the deceased individual's estate, the child is "beneficially interested" in the estate, within the meaning assigned by subsection 248(25) of the Act, by virtue of being a beneficiary of the testamentary trust, which is, in turn, a beneficiary of the estate.

You are concerned, in particular, with subsection 146(8.1) of the Act. That subsection allows a beneficiary of a deceased individual's estate and the legal representative of the deceased individual to make a joint election to treat proceeds received by the estate from the deceased individual's RRSP as having been received by the beneficiary as a "refund of premiums" (as defined in subsection 146(1) of the Act), to the extent that the proceeds would have been a "refund of premiums" had they been received directly by the beneficiary. When such an election is made, the proceeds are included in the beneficiary's income and, if the proceeds are used as provided for under paragraph 60(l), an offsetting deduction is allowed.

In some situations, the Act extends the normal meaning of beneficiary so that a reference to a beneficiary of a trust or estate includes an individual who is not a direct beneficiary of the trust or estate but who is beneficially interested in the trust or estate. This extended meaning of "beneficiary" does not apply, however, for subsection 146(8.1). Thus, in the situation you describe, no election can be made to treat the RRSP proceeds as having been received by the child as a refund of premiums. Moreover, while the testamentary trust is itself a beneficiary of the estate, no election can be made to treat the testamentary trust as having received a refund of premiums. This is because there is no provision in the Act that would treat proceeds paid directly from the deceased annuitant's RRSP to the testamentary trust as being a refund of premiums received by the trust. As there is no possibility of having the deceased individual's RRSP proceeds treated as a refund of premiums, no rollover under paragraph 60(l) of the Act is available.

I agree that it is not appropriate that a rollover under paragraph 60(l) be denied simply because the child's interest in the deceased annuitant's estate is not a direct interest. I am prepared, therefore, to recommend to the Minister of Finance that subsection 146(8.1) of the Act be amended to extend the meaning of "beneficiary", for the purposes of that subsection, to include persons who are beneficially interested (within the meaning assigned by subsection 248(25) of the Act) in the estate of the deceased individual. This would ensure that, in the situation you describe, an election can be made under subsection 146(8.1) to treat the child of the deceased RRSP annuitant as having received a refund of premiums from the RRSP. I am also prepared to recommend that the Act be amended to clarify that the amount paid to acquire the annuity, whether paid by the estate or by the trust that is the annuitant under the annuity, be treated as having been paid on behalf of the child, thus ensuring that the requirements of paragraph 60(l) in this regard can be met and that the child is not denied the deduction thereunder for the purchase price of the annuity. I will also recommend that these proposed amendments apply as of the effective date of the previously proposed amendments to paragraph 60(l).

You have also asked that consideration be given to amending the Act to allow the trust (rather than the child) that is a direct beneficiary of the estate to include the refund of premiums in its income and to claim the offsetting deduction under paragraph 60(l). Such a measure would go beyond the intended scope of the proposed amendments released in February 2004 and is not something that I could recommend at this time.

While I cannot offer any assurance that the legislative amendments that we intend to recommend will be adopted, I trust that this statement of our position is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(b) the taxpayer or the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner can reasonably be regarded as having received a payment from a registered retirement savings plan or a registered retirement income fund in respect of such portion of the undeducted premiums as

(i) was not paid by way of a transfer of an amount from a registered pension plan to a registered retirement savings plan,

(ii) was not paid by way of a transfer of an amount from a deferred profit sharing plan to a registered retirement savings plan in accordance with subsection 147(19), and

(iii) was not paid by way of a transfer of an amount to a registered retirement savings plan from

(A) a pooled registered pension plan in circumstances to which subsection 147.5(20) applied, or

(B) a specified pension plan in circumstances to which subsection (21) applied,

Application: The December 14, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 10(4), will amend subpara. 146(5)(b)(iii) to read as above, in force or deemed in force on the day of the coming into force of S.C. 2012, c. 16 (Bill C-25, Royal Assent June 18, 2012), Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act.

Technical Notes: Subsection 146(8.2) is a relieving provision that provides a deduction for certain RRSP and RRIF distributions that are included in computing an individual's income. The deduction is available to the extent that the distributions are made in respect of certain non-deducted RRSP premiums paid by the individual to the individual's RRSP or to a spousal or common-law partner's RRSP. Paragraph 146(8.2)(b) specifies that the deduction, which is generally permitted under subsection 146(8.2), does not apply to a withdrawal of RRSP contributions made by way of a direct transfer from a registered pension plan, a deferred profit sharing plan or a specified pension plan (i.e., the Saskatchewan Pension Plan).

Subparagraph 146(8.2)(b)(iii) is amended, consequential on the introduction of section 147.5, to specify that the deduction under subsection 146(8.2) will not be allowed in respect of a withdrawal of RRSP contributions made by way of a direct transfer from a PRPP.

(c) the payment is received by the taxpayer or the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner in a particular taxation year that is

(i) the year in which the premiums were paid by the taxpayer,

(ii) the year in which a notice of assessment for the taxation year referred to in subparagraph (i) was sent to the taxpayer, or

(iii) the year immediately following the year referred to in subparagraph (i) or (ii), and

(d) the payment is included in computing the taxpayer's income for the particular year, the payment (except to the extent that it is a prescribed withdrawal) may be deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for the particular year unless it is reasonable to consider that

(e) the taxpayer did not reasonably expect that the full amount of the premiums would be deductible in the taxation year in which the premiums were paid or in the immediately preceding taxation year, and

(f) the taxpayer paid all or any portion of the premiums with the intent of receiving a payment that, but for this paragraph and paragraph (e), would be deductible under this subsection.

(b) in applying the subsec. to a retirement savings plan where the annuitant under the plan attained 69 years of age in 1996, the references in that provisions to "69 years of age" shall be read as "70 years of age";

(i) the day on which annuity payments are to begin under the plan is fixed and determined and is after the year in which the annuitant attains

(A) 69 years of age, where the annuitant had not attained that age before 1997, or

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 102(2), will repeal subsec. 146.01(8), applicable to 2002 et seq.

Technical Notes (July 2010): In order for an RRSP withdrawal to qualify as an HBP withdrawal, the taxpayer must make a written request in prescribed form to the RRSP issuer. Under subsection 146.01(8) of the Act, an RRSP issuer to whom a T1036 is submitted must file the form with the Minister of National Revenue no later than 15 days after the quarter in which it was so submitted.

Subsection 146.01(8) is repealed. Rather than reporting HBP withdrawals on a quarterly basis by filing the relevant T1036, RRSP issuers are instead required (by subsection 214(1) of the Regulations) to report such withdrawals on an annual basis using the T4RSP.

(A) the individual is resident in Canada when the designation is made, or

(B) the designation is made in conjunction with a transfer of property into the plan from another registered education savings plan under which the individual was a beneficiary immediately before the transfer, and

(ii) in the case of a contribution, either

(A) the individual's Social Insurance Number is provided to the promoter before the contribution is made and the individual is resident in Canada when the contribution is made, or

(B) the contribution is made by way of transfer from another registered education savings plan under which the individual was a beneficiary immediately before the transfer;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 103(1), will add para. 146.1(2)(g.3), applicable after 2003.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 146.1(2) sets out the conditions that must be satisfied in order for an education savings plan to be accepted for registration.

New paragraph 146.1(2)(g.3) is introduced to preclude non-residents and individuals who have not yet been assigned a Social Insurance Number (SIN) from becoming a beneficiary under a registered education savings plan (RESP) or from benefiting from RESP contributions.

Specifically, paragraph 146.1(2)(g.3) requires that an education savings plan not permit an individual to be designated as a beneficiary under the plan, and not allow a contribution for an individual who is a beneficiary under the plan, unless the individual's SIN has been provided to the promoter of the plan and the individual is resident in Canada.

If an individual is designated as a beneficiary under an RESP in conjunction with the transfer of property into the plan from another RESP under which the individual was a beneficiary immediately before the transfer, the requirement that the individual be resident in Canada in order to be designated as a beneficiary does not apply. However, subject to the exceptions in new subsection 146.1(2.3), the individual's SIN has to be provided to the promoter in order for the individual to be designated as a beneficiary under the transferee RESP. This special rule is intended primarily to accommodate transfers from an RESP to a replacement RESP after the beneficiary has ceased to be resident of Canada. (It should be noted that the transfer itself, as a contribution to an RESP, is not subject to the SIN and residency conditions that apply to ordinary contributions.)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 15, 2003:

Dear [xxx]

I am responding to your letter of January 17, 2003 to Mr. Brett Baker, regarding the proposed Income Tax Act (ITA) amendments contained in the legislative proposals that were released on December 20, 2002. Your letter raises concerns about the amendment requiring registered education savings plan (RESP) promoters to obtain a beneficiary's Social Insurance Number (SIN) before accepting any contributions into an RESP. I want to express my appreciation for the recent opportunity I had to meet with you and several of your colleagues to further elaborate on this matter.

The federal government is committed to helping Canadian families save for their children's post-secondary education, and recognizes the important role that RESPs play in helping them achieve their financial goal. As you know, the government has taken significant steps in recent years to enhance the attractiveness of RESPs as a savings instrument: the lifetime contribution limit was increased to $42,000 per beneficiary; the annual contribution limit was raised to $4,000 to give families flexibility to make "catch-up" contributions; investment income can be paid out to the contributor in the event the beneficiary does not pursue post-secondary education; and the Canada Education Savings Grant (CESG) program was introduced in the 1998 Budget as part of the Canadian Opportunities Strategy.

The SIN is already required for the effective administration of both the RESP and CESG programs, and must currently be provided in order to register an RESP. The proposed amendment to the ITA is intended to help ensure that RESP beneficiaries fully benefit from RESP tax benefits and the CESG supplement, and will minimize the potential for adverse consequences that can currently arise when the SIN is not provided on time.

In the event that parents face significant delays in obtaining a SIN for their child, they can generally make "catch-up" contributions to the RESP and thus obtain the full CESG.

We appreciate comments and suggestions that we have received on the proposed amendment from members of your organization and others in the RESP industry. While imposing a requirement for obtaining a SIN prior to setting up an RESP is appropriate, for the reasons set out above, we understand that implementing this change too quickly might be disruptive and have some adverse impacts on the sale of RESPs. In order to provide for a smoother transition, I will recommend to the Minister of Finance that the coming-into-force date of the proposed amendment be deferred from March 21, 2003 until January 1, 2004.

I trust this addresses your concerns and thank you for bringing this matter to the government's attention.

Yours sincerely,

Stephen R. Richardson
Senior Assistant Deputy Minister

CCRA Registered Plans release, April 28, 2003: Technical Income Tax Amendments for Registered Education Savings Plans

On December 20, 2002, the Minister of Finance released a package of draft technical amendments to the Income Tax Act (ITA). The technical bill indicated that these amendments were to be applicable after the 90th day after the announcement date (i.e., March 21, 2003). In order to provide for a smoother transition, the Department of Finance intends to propose an amendment [February 27, 2004 — ed.] to the coming into force date, which would change it from March 21, 2003 to January 1, 2004.

Summary of Changes

Paragraph 146.1(2)(g.3) and subsection 146.1(2.3) have been introduced, both of which apply December 31, 2003. Subparagraph 146.1(2)(g.3)(i) of the Act permits an individual to be designated as a beneficiary under the plan only if the individual's SIN is provided to the promoter before the designation is made, and the individual is resident in Canada when the designation is made. The residency requirement is not applicable when the designation is made in conjunction with a transfer of property from another RESP under which the individual was a beneficiary immediately before the transfer.

Subparagraph 146.1(2)(g.3)(ii) of the Act permits a contribution to the plan in respect of an individual who is a beneficiary only if the individual's SIN is provided to the promoter before the contribution is made and the individual is resident in Canada, or where the contribution is made by way of a transfer from another RESP under which the individual was a beneficiary immediately before the transfer.

As an exception to the requirement to provide the individual's SIN above, subsection 146.1(2.3) does not require an individual's SIN to be provided in respect of a contribution to the plan, if the plan was entered into before 1999. Such contributions continue to be ineligible for the CESG, and the SIN exception is relevant only for existing beneficiaries under such plans.

Under the second new exception, an educational savings plan may permit a non-resident individual who does not have a SIN to be designated as a beneficiary under the plan provided that such designation is made in conjunction with a transfer of property from another RESP under which the individual was a beneficiary immediately before the transfer.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 103(2), will add subsec. 146.1(2.3), applicable after 2003.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 146.1(2.3) provides two additional exceptions to the SIN condition that are primarily of relevance to RESPs that were entered into before 1999 and RESPs that replace such plans. These exceptions recognize that the Canada Revenue Agency only began requiring the beneficiary's SIN to be provided on the application for registration for plans entered into after 1998.

The first new exception allows an education savings plan that was entered into before 1999 to not require that an individual's SIN be provided in respect of a contribution to the plan. Such contributions, however, continue to be ineligible for the Canada Education Savings Grant. It should be noted that this exception is only relevant for contributions made for existing beneficiaries under such plans. An individual without a SIN is prevented from being designated as a new beneficiary under such a plan.

Under the second new exception, an education savings plan may permit a non-resident individual who does not have a SIN to be designated as a beneficiary under the plan provided that the designation is being made in conjunction with a transfer of property into the plan from another RESP under which the individual was a beneficiary immediately before the transfer. This exception is intended, in particular, to accommodate the transfer of property from an RESP that was entered into before 1999, under which the beneficiary had always been non-resident or had ceased to be resident in Canada before having been assigned a SIN, to a replacement RESP (and successive transfers).

(a) the year in which all of the conditions set out in subsection (2) (except in paragraph (2)(b)) were complied with, or

(b) the year preceding the year in which the plan was subsequently registered,

Tax-free Savings Accounts

146.2 (1) Definitions — The following definitions apply in this section and in Part XI.01.

"distribution" under an arrangement of which an individual is the holder means a payment out of or under the arrangement in satisfaction of all or part of the holder's interest in the arrangement.

"holder" of an arrangement means

(a) until the death of the individual who entered into the arrangement with the issuer, the individual; and

(b) at and after the death of the individual, the individual's survivor, if the survivor acquires

(i) all of the individual's rights as the holder of the arrangement, and

(ii) to the extent it is not included in the rights described in subparagraph (i), the unconditional right to revoke any beneficiary designation made, or similar direction imposed, by the individual under the arrangement or relating to property held in connection with the arrangement.

Proposed Addition — 146.2(1)"holder"(c)

(c) at and after the death of a holder described in paragraph (b) or in this paragraph, the holder's survivor, if the survivor acquires

(i) all of the holder's rights as the holder of the arrangement, and

(ii) to the extent it is not included in the rights described in subparagraph (i), the unconditional right to revoke any beneficiary designation made, or similar direction imposed, by the holder under the arrangement or relating to property held in connection with the arrangement.

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), s. 27, will add para. (c) to the definition "holder" in subsec. 146.2(1), applicable to 2009 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 146.2(1) provides a number of definitions for the purposes of the rules applicable in respect of Tax-Free Savings Accounts (TFSAs). Under the current definition "holder" in subsection 146.2(1), only a "survivor" (defined in subsection 146.2(1) as the individual who was, immediately before the death of the individual who opened the TFSA, the spouse or common-law partner of that individual) can be a successor holder. The legislation does not allow the survivor to designate a subsequent successor holder (e.g. a new spouse of the survivor in case of remarriage of the survivor) in respect of the TFSA. On the other hand, the TFSA rules do permit the survivor to transfer the funds out of the existing TFSA to a new TFSA in respect of which he or she can designate a successor holder, thereby achieving the same result indirectly.

The definition "holder" is amended to simplify the TFSA rules regarding successor holder designations by allowing the survivor (and subsequent survivors) to designate a subsequent successor holder. Note that the same conditions apply to the designation of a successor holder to a survivor as to the designation of a survivor to the initial holder of the TFSA: that is, the successor holder has to acquire, as part of the survivor's rights as holder or in addition to those rights, the unconditional right to revoke any beneficiary designation made by the survivor in relation to the TFSA.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 1, 2009:

Ms. Debbie Pearl-Weinberg, General Tax Counsel, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Head Office – Taxation Division, Toronto, ON

Dear Ms. Pearl-Weinberg:

I am writing in response to your letter dated April 22, 2009 in which you recommend that the definition "holder" in subsection 146.2(1) of the Income Tax Act (Act) that applies in respect of Tax-Free Savings Accounts (TFSAs) be amended to accommodate the designation, by a successor holder, of a subsequent successor holder.

Under the current definition "holder" described above, only the survivor (defined in subsection 146.2(1) as the person who was, immediately before the death of the individual who opened the TFSA, the spouse or common-law partner of that individual) can be designated as a successor holder. The legislation does not contemplate the designation of a subsequent successor holder by the survivor in respect of the account. The existing structure of the legislation, however, does allow a survivor to transfer the TFSA funds to a new TFSA in respect of which the survivor can designate a successor holder.

We agree that the rules in respect of successor holder designation can be streamlined without departing from the policy objectives underlying TFSAs. We are therefore prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance an amendment to the definition "holder" in order to allow a survivor who is a successor holder to designate a subsequent successor holder. It would also be our recommendation that the proposed amendment apply to the 2009 and subsequent taxation years.

While I cannot offer any assurance that the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intention is helpful to you.

Thank you for writing to us on this matter.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(a) the first individual to whom the carrier has undertaken to make payments described in the definition "retirement income fund" out of or under the fund, where the first individual is alive at that time,

(b) after the death of the first individual, a spouse or common-law partner (in this definition referred to as the "survivor") of the first individual to whom the carrier has undertaken to make payments described in the definition "retirement income fund" out of or under the fund after the death of the first individual, where the survivor is alive at that time and the undertaking was made pursuant to an election described in that definition of the first individual with the consent of the legal representative of the first individual, and

Proposed Amendment — 146.3(1)"annuitant"(b)

(b) after the death of the first individual, a spouse or common-law partner (in this definition referred to as the "survivor") of the first individual to whom the carrier has undertaken to make payments described in the definition "retirement income fund"

out of or under the fund after the death of the first individual, if the survivor is alive at that time and the undertaking was made

(i) pursuant to an election that is described in that definition and that was made by the first individual, or

(ii) with the consent of the legal representative of the first individual, and

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 104(1), will amend para. (b) of the definition "annuitant" in subsec. 146.3(1) to read as above, applicable to 2001 et seq. except that, if a taxpayer and a person have jointly elected under s. 144 of the Modernization of Benefits and Obligations Act [S.C. 2000, c. 12; see the transitional rules reproduced in the History to 248(1)"common-law partner"], in respect of the 1998, 1999 or 2000 taxation years, it applies to the taxpayer and the person in respect of the applicable taxation year and subsequent taxation years.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 146.3(1) contains the definition "annuitant" for purposes of the rules relating to RRIFs. Paragraph (b) of the definition allows the spouse or common-law partner of a deceased annuitant to become the successor annuitant under the RRIF, if the deceased annuitant so elected or the legal representative of the deceased annuitant consents. When this paragraph was amended by S.C. 2000, c. 12 (the Modernization of Benefits and Obligations Act, formerly Bill C-23), the word "or" in the English version was inadvertently removed. The definition is amended to correct this error, and to improve the readability of this paragraph, with the same application as the initial amendment in Bill C-23.

(c) after the death of the survivor, another spouse or common-law partner of the survivor to whom the carrier has undertaken, with the consent of the legal representative of the survivor, to make payments described in the definition "retirement income fund" out of or under the fund after the death of the survivor, where that other spouse or common-law partner is alive at that time;

History: Paras. (b) and (c) of the definition "annuitant" in subsec. 146.3(1) by 2000, c. 12, s. 136, applicable to 2001 et seq., in force July 31, 2000. See also the transitional rules reproduced in the History note to 248(1)"common-law partner". The paras. formerly read:

(b) after the death of the first individual, a spouse (in this paragraph[53] referred to as the "surviving spouse") of the first individual to whom the carrier has undertaken to make payments described in the definition "retirement income fund" out of or under the fund after the death of the first individual, where the surviving spouse is alive at that time and the undertaking was made pursuant to an election described in that definition of the first individual or with the consent of the legal representative of the first individual, and

(c) after the death of the surviving spouse, another spouse of the surviving spouse to whom the carrier has undertaken, with the consent of the legal representative of the surviving spouse, to make payments described in the definition "retirement income fund" out of or under the fund after the death of the surviving spouse, where that other spouse is alive at that time;

The definition "annuitant" in subsec. 146.3(1) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 84(1), applicable to deaths occurring after 1990. The definition formerly read:

"annuitant" under a retirement income fund at any particular time means the individual to whom the carrier has undertaken to make the payments described in the definition "retirement income fund" in this subsection out of or under the fund;

Forms: RC4178: Death of a RRIF annuitant [guide].

(a) a person licensed or otherwise authorized under the laws of Canada or a province to carry on in Canada an annuities business,

(b) a corporation licensed or otherwise authorized under the laws of Canada or a province to carry on in Canada the business of offering to the public its services as trustee,

(a) such amounts paid out of or under the fund after the death of the last annuitant thereunder to the legal representative of that annuitant

(i) as would, had they been paid under the fund to the individual, have been refunds of premiums (in this paragraph having the meaning assigned by subsection 146(1)) if the fund were a registered retirement savings plan that had not matured before the death, and

(ii) as are designated jointly by the legal representative and the individual in prescribed form filed with the Minister, and

(b) amounts paid out of or under the fund after the death of the last annuitant thereunder to the individual that would be refunds of premiums had the fund been a registered retirement savings plan that had not matured before the death;

"minimum amount" under a retirement income fund for a year means, for the year in which the fund was entered into, a nil amount, and, for any other year, the amount determined by the formula

where

B is

(a) where the first annuitant under the fund elected in respect of the fund under paragraph (b) of the definition "minimum amount" in this subsection, as it read before 1992, or under subparagraph 146.3(1)(f)(i) of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, to use the age of another individual, the prescribed factor for the year in respect of the other individual,

(b) where paragraph (a) does not apply and the first annuitant under the fund so elects before any payment has been made under the fund by the carrier, the prescribed factor for the year in respect of an individual who was the spouse or common-law partner of the first annuitant at the time of the election, and

(c) in any other case, the prescribed factor for the year in respect of the first annuitant under the fund, and

C is, where the fund governs a trust, the total of all amounts each of which is

(a) a periodic payment under an annuity contract held by the trust at the beginning of the year (other than an annuity contract described at the beginning of the year in paragraph (b.1) of the definition "qualified investment") that is paid to the trust in the year, or

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 146.3(2) outlines the conditions that must be satisfied in order for a retirement income fund to be registered as a RRIF.

Paragraph 146.3(2)(c) refers to a carrier who "is a person referred to as a depository in section 146". This paragraph is amended to replace the word "depository" with the word "depositary", which is the term used in section 146.

(i) the carrier has no right of offset as regards the property held in connection with the fund in respect of any debt or obligation owing to the carrier, and

(e.1) where the fund does not govern a trust or the fund governs a trust created before 1998 that does not hold an annuity contract as a qualified investment for the trust, the fund provides that if an annuitant, at any time, directs that the carrier transfer all or part of the property held in connection with the fund, or an amount equal to its value at that time, to a person who has agreed to be a carrier of another registered retirement income fund of the annuitant or to a registered pension plan in accordance with subsection (14.1), the transferor shall retain an amount equal to the lesser of

(i) the fair market value of such portion of the property as would, if the fair market value thereof does not decline after the transfer, be sufficient to ensure that the minimum amount under the fund for the year in which the transfer is made may be paid to the annuitant in the year, and

(ii) the fair market value of all the property;

(e.2) where paragraph (e.1) does not apply, the fund provides that if an annuitant, at any time, directs that the carrier transfer all or part of the property held in connection with the fund, or an amount equal to its value at that time, to a person who has agreed to be a carrier of another registered retirement income fund of the annuitant or to a registered pension plan in accordance with subsection (14.1), the transferor shall retain property in the fund sufficient to ensure that the total of

(B) an annuity contract described, immediately after the transfer, in paragraph (b.1) of the definition "qualified investment" in subsection (1), and

(ii) all amounts each of which is a reasonable estimate, as of the time of the transfer, of the amount of an annual or more frequent periodic payment under an annuity contract (other than an annuity contract described in clause (i)(B)) that the trust may receive after the transfer and in the year of the transfer

(f) the fund provides that the carrier shall not accept property as consideration thereunder other than property transferred from

(i) a registered retirement savings plan under which the individual is the annuitant,

(ii) another registered retirement income fund under which the individual is the annuitant,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 104(3), will add subpara. 146.3(2)(f)(viii), applicable after March 20, 2003.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Paragraph 146.3(2)(f) prohibits a RRIF from receiving property, other than property transferred from sources listed in that paragraph. The paragraph is amended so that a RRIF may receive property transferred directly from a deferred profit sharing plan (DPSP) in accordance with subsection 147(19). This amendment is consequential on an amendment to subsection 147(19) that permits direct transfers from DPSPs to RRIFs. For more details, see the commentary to that subsection.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 104(4), will amend the opening words of subsec. 146.3(5.1) to read as above, applicable to 2001 et seq. except that, if a taxpayer and a person have jointly elected under s. 144 of the Modernization of Benefits and Obligations Act [S.C. 2000, c. 12; see the transitional rules reproduced in the History to 248(1)"common-law partner"], in respect of the 1998, 1999 or 2000 taxation years, it applies to the taxpayer and the person in respect of the applicable taxation year and subsequent taxation years.

Technical Notes (July 2010): In 2000, the Act was amended to include common-law partners, but some provisions, including subsection 146.3(5.1), were overlooked. This subsection is therefore amended to correct this omission. The amendment applies, in general, to the 2001 and subsequent taxation years. However, it may apply as of 1998 if the common-law partners jointly choose to be deemed as such, beginning in that year, for the purposes of the application of the Act.

(b) the particular amount, and

(c) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of the fund that is required, in the year and at or before that time, to be included in the income of the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner

exceeds

(ii) the minimum amount under the fund for the year.

(a) the premium or part thereof, as the case may be, shall, for the purposes of subsections (5.1) and 146(8.3) after that time, be deemed not to have been a premium paid to a registered retirement savings plan under which the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner was the annuitant (within the meaning assigned by subsection 146(1)); and

Proposed Amendment — 146.3(9) opening words

(9) Tax payable on income from non-qualified investment — If a trust that is governed by a registered retirement income fund holds, at any time in a taxation year, a property that is not a qualified investment,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 104(5), will amend the opening words of subsec. 146.3(9) to read as above, applicable to 2003 et seq.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 146.3(9) provides that, if a trust governed by a RRIF acquires a non-qualified investment, any income earned by the trust from the investment is taxable under Part I.

Subsection 146.3(9) is amended to clarify that income from property that was a qualified investment at the time it was acquired but later became non-qualified is also taxable in respect of the non-qualified period. This amendment, which applies to the 2003 and subsequent taxation years, is consistent with the tax treatment of income earned by RRSP trusts from non-qualified investments under subsection 146(10.1).

(a) tax is payable under this Part by the trust on the amount that its taxable income for the year would be if it had no incomes or losses from sources other than the property that is not a qualified investment or no capital gains or capital losses other than from the disposition of that property, as the case may be; and

(b) for the purposes of paragraph (a),

(i) "income" includes dividends described in section 83, and

(ii) paragraphs 38(a) and (b) shall be read without reference to the fractions set out therein.

Proposed Amendment — 146.3(9)(b)(ii)

(ii) paragraphs 38(a) and (b) are to be read as if the fraction set out in each of those paragraphs were replaced by the word "all".

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 104(6), will amend subpara. 146.3(9)(b)(ii) to read as above, in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subparagraph 146.3(9)(b)(ii) is reworded for clarity.

the property so used was included by virtue of subsection (7) in computing the income of a taxpayer who was the annuitant under the fund, there may be deducted in computing the income for a taxation year of the taxpayer who is at that time the annuitant, an amount equal to the amount, if any, remaining when

(a) the net loss (exclusive of payments by the trust as or on account of interest) sustained by the trust in consequence of its using or permitting to be used the property as security for the loan and not as a result of a change in the fair market value of the property is deducted from

(b) the amount so included in computing the income of a taxpayer in consequence of the trust's using or permitting to be used the property as security for the loan.

(a) the amended fund shall be deemed, for the purposes of this Act, not to be a registered retirement income fund; and

(b) the taxpayer who was the annuitant under the fund before it became an amended fund shall, in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year that includes that day, include as income received out of the fund at that time an amount equal to the fair market value of all the property held in connection with the fund immediately before that time.

(a) the beneficiary is determined to be contractually competent by a competent tribunal or other authority under the laws of a province or, in the issuer's opinion after reasonable inquiry, the beneficiary's contractual competence to enter into a disability savings plan is no longer in doubt; and

(b) the beneficiary notifies the issuer that the beneficiary chooses to become the holder of the plan.

History: Subsec. 146.4(1.5) added by 2012, c. 19, subsec. 6(4), in June 29, 2012.

(1.6) Entity replacing holder — If an entity described in subparagraph (a)(ii) or (iii) of the definition "qualifying person" in subsection (1) is appointed in respect of a beneficiary of a disability savings plan and a holder of the plan is a qualifying person solely because of paragraph (c) of that definition,

(a) the entity shall notify the issuer without delay of the entity's appointment;

(b) the holder of the plan ceases to be a holder of the plan; and

(c) the entity becomes the holder of the plan.

History: Subsec. 146.4(1.6) added by 2012, c. 19, subsec. 6(4), in force June 29, 2012.

(1.7) Rules applicable in case of dispute — If a dispute arises as a result of an issuer's acceptance of a qualifying family member who is a qualifying person solely because of paragraph (c) of the definition "qualifying person" in subsection (1) as a holder of a disability savings plan, from the time the dispute arises until the time that the dispute is resolved or an entity becomes the holder of the plan under subsection (1.5) or (1.6), the holder of the plan shall use their best efforts to avoid any reduction in the fair market value of the property held by the plan trust, having regard to the reasonable needs of the beneficiary under the plan.

History: Subsec. 146.4(1.7) added by 2012, c. 19, subsec. 6(4), in force June 29, 2012.

(2) Registered status — The conditions that must be satisfied for a disability savings plan of a beneficiary to be a registered disability savings plan are as follows:

(a) before the plan is entered into, the issuer of the plan has received written notification from the Minister that, in the Minister's opinion, a plan whose terms are identical to the plan would, if entered into by entities eligible to enter into a disability savings plan, comply with the conditions in subsection (4);

(b) at or before the time the plan is entered into, the issuer of the plan has been provided with the Social Insurance Number of the beneficiary and the Social Insurance Number or business number, as the case may be, of each entity with which the issuer has entered into the plan; and

(c) at the time the plan is entered into, the beneficiary is resident in Canada, except that this condition does not apply if, at that time, the beneficiary is the beneficiary under another registered disability savings plan.

Information Circulars: 99-1: Registered disability savings plans.

(3) Registered status nullified — A disability savings plan is deemed never to have been a registered disability savings plan if

(a) the issuer of the plan has not, on or before the day that is 60 days after the particular day on which the plan was entered into, provided notification of the plan's existence in prescribed form containing prescribed information to the specified Minister; or

(b) the beneficiary was, on the particular day, the beneficiary under another registered disability savings plan and that other plan has not been terminated on or before the day that is 120 days after the particular day or any later day that the specified Minister considers reasonable in the circumstances.

(v) an individual who is a legal parent of the beneficiary and was previously a holder of the plan;

(c) the plan provides that, where an entity (other than a legal parent of the beneficiary) that is a holder of the plan ceases to be a qualifying person in relation to the beneficiary at any time, the entity ceases at that time to be a holder of the plan;

(d) the plan provides for there to be at least one holder of the plan at all times that the plan is in existence and may provide for the beneficiary (or the beneficiary's estate, as the case may be) to automatically acquire rights as a successor or assignee of a holder in order to ensure compliance with this requirement;

(e) the plan provides that, where an entity becomes a holder of the plan after the plan is entered into, the entity is prohibited (except to the extent otherwise permitted by the Minister or the specified Minister) from exercising their rights as a holder of the plan until the issuer has been advised of the entity having become a holder of the plan and been provided with the entity's Social Insurance Number or business number, as the case may be;

(f) the plan prohibits contributions from being made to the plan at any time if

(i) the beneficiary is not a DTC-eligible individual in respect of the taxation year that includes that time, or

(n) the plan provides that when the total of all amounts paid under the Canada Disability Savings Act before the beginning of a calendar year to any registered disability savings plan of the beneficiary exceeds the total of all contributions made before the beginning of the calendar year to any registered disability savings plan of the beneficiary,

(i) if the calendar year is not a specified year for the plan, the total amount of disability assistance payments made from the plan to the beneficiary in the calendar year shall not exceed the amount determined by the formula set out in paragraph (l) in respect of the plan for the calendar year, except that, in calculating that total amount, any payment made following a transfer in the calendar year from another plan in accordance with subsection (8) is to be disregarded if it is made

(a) the Minister may waive the application of the relevant paragraph with respect to the failure, if it is just and equitable to do so;

(b) the Minister may deem the failure to have occurred at a later time;

(c) if the failure consists of the making of a contribution that is prohibited under any of paragraphs (4)(f) to (h), an amount equal to the amount of the contribution has been withdrawn from the plan within such period as is specified by the Minister and the Minister has approved the application of this paragraph with respect to the failure,

(i) the contribution is deemed never to have been made, and

(ii) the withdrawal is deemed not to be a disability assistance payment and not to be in contravention of the condition in paragraph (4)(i); or

(d) if the failure consists of the plan not being terminated by the time set out in paragraph (4)(p) and the failure was due to the issuer being unaware of, or there being some uncertainty as to, the existence of circumstances requiring that the plan be terminated,

(i) the Minister may specify a later time by which the plan is to be terminated (but no later than is reasonably necessary for the plan to be terminated in an orderly manner), and

(13) Obligations of issuer — The issuer of a registered disability savings plan shall,

(a) where an entity becomes a holder of the plan after the plan is entered into, so notify the specified Minister in prescribed form containing prescribed information on or before the day that is 60 days after the later of

(i) the day on which the issuer is advised of the entity having become a holder of the plan, and

(c) where the issuer becomes aware that the plan is, or is likely to become, non-compliant (determined without reference to paragraph (11)(c) and subsection (12)), notify the Minister and the specified Minister of this fact on or before the day that is 30 days after the day on which the issuer becomes so aware;

(d) exercise the care, diligence and skill of a reasonably prudent person to minimize the possibility that a holder of the plan may become liable to pay tax under Part XI in connection with the plan, and

(e) if the issuer enters into the plan with a qualifying family member who is a qualifying person solely because of paragraph (c) of the definition "qualifying person" in subsection (1),

(i) so notify the beneficiary under the plan without delay in writing and include in the notification information setting out the circumstances in which the holder of the plan may be replaced under subsection (1.5) or (1.6), and

Proposed Amendments — RDSPs

Federal Budget, Notice of Ways and Means Motion, March 29, 2012: Registered Disability Savings Plans

(1) That the provisions of the Act relating to registered disability savings plans be modified in accordance with the proposals described in the budget documents tabled by the Minister of Finance in the House of Commons on March 29, 2012.

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 29, 2012: Registered Disability Savings Plans

To ensure the ongoing effectiveness of Registered Disability Savings Plans (RDSPs), and in response to stakeholder comments received during the recent review of the RDSP, Budget 2012 proposes a number of changes to the rules governing these plans.

An RDSP may be established for an individual who is eligible for the Disability Tax Credit (DTC) [146.4(4)(f)(i), 146.4(1)"DTC-eligible individual", 118.3(1) — ed.]. The individual eligible for the DTC is the plan beneficiary [146.4(1)"disability savings plan" — ed.]. The plan holder is the individual who generally opens the RDSP and makes decisions regarding contributions, investments, and withdrawals. The plan holder can be the beneficiary or, if the plan is opened for a minor child, a parent. The plan holder can also be a legal representative of the beneficiary [146.4(1)"holder", "qualifying person" — ed.]

Parents, beneficiaries and others wishing to save on behalf of the beneficiary are allowed to contribute to an RDSP. Contributions to an RDSP are limited to a lifetime maximum of $200,000 [146.4(4)(g)(iii) — ed.]. Contributions are permitted until the end of the year in which a beneficiary attains 59 years of age [146.4(4)(g)(i) — ed.]

Annual RDSP contributions attract Canada Disability Saving Grants (CDSGs) at matching rates of 100%, 200%, or 300%, depending on the beneficiary's family income and the amount contributed, up to a lifetime maximum of $70,000 [Canada Disability Savings Act s. 6 — ed.]. An RDSP is eligible to receive CDSGs until the end of the year in which the beneficiary attains 49 years of age [Canada Disability Savings Regulations s. 2(c) — ed.]. The Government also provides up to $1,000 in Canada Disability Savings Bonds (CDSBs) annually to RDSPs established by low- and modest-income families, up to a lifetime maximum of $20,000. CDSBs are paid into RDSPs until the end of the year in which the beneficiary attains 49 years of age [Canada Disability Savings Regulations s. 3(d) — ed.].

Contributions to an RDSP are not deductible and are not included in the beneficiary's income when withdrawn. Investment income earned in an RDSP grows tax-free [146.4(5) — ed.]. CDSGs, CDSBs and investment income earned in an RDSP are included in the beneficiary's income for tax purposes when withdrawn from the RDSP [146.4(6) — ed.]. Each withdrawal from an RDSP comprises a taxable portion and a non-taxable portion based on the relative proportion of taxable assets (including CDSGs, CDSBs, and investment income) and non-taxable assets (private contributions) in the plan [146.4(7) — ed.]. RDSP withdrawals must commence by the end of the year in which the beneficiary attains 60 years of age [146.4(4)(k) — ed.].

Plan Holders

Proportional Repayment Rule

Under current rules, any CDSGs and CDSBs paid into an RDSP in the preceding 10 years generally must be repaid to the Government on any of the following events [Canada Disability Savings Regulations s. 5(1) — ed.]:

- any amount is withdrawn from the RDSP;
- the RDSP is terminated or deregistered; or
- the RDSP beneficiary ceases to be eligible for the DTC or dies.

This is known as the "10-year repayment rule". To ensure that RDSP funds are available to meet potential obligations under this rule, RDSP issuers must set aside an "assistance holdback amount" equal to the total CDSGs and CDSBs paid into the RDSP in the preceding 10 years less any CDSGs and CDSBs already repaid in respect of that 10-year period. When one of the events described above occurs, the required repayment is equal to the amount of the assistance holdback amount immediately preceding the event.

To provide greater access to RDSP savings for small withdrawals, while still supporting the long-term savings objective of these plans, Budget 2012 proposes to introduce a proportional repayment rule that will apply when a withdrawal is made from an RDSP. This rule will replace the 10-year repayment rule only in respect of RDSP withdrawals. The existing 10-year repayment rule will continue to apply where the RDSP is terminated or deregistered, or the RDSP beneficiary ceases to be eligible for the DTC or dies.

The proportional repayment rule will require that, for each $1 withdrawn from an RDSP, $3 of any CDSGs or CDSBs paid into the plan in the 10 years preceding the withdrawal be repaid, up to a maximum of the assistance holdback amount. Repayments will be attributed to CDSGs or CDSBs that make up the assistance holdback amount based on the order in which they were paid into the RDSP, beginning with the oldest amounts. This measure will apply to withdrawals made from an RDSP after 2013.

Example

Jeff opens an RDSP in 2009 and contributes $1,500 to his plan annually, attracting the maximum amount of CDSGs ($3,500) each year. In 2014, the assistance holdback amount for his plan equals $21,000.

In 2014, Jeff withdraws $600 from his RDSP. Under the 10-year repayment rule, the entire assistance holdback amount ($21,000) would have to be repaid. Under the proportional repayment rule, $1,800 of the assistance holdback amount will be repaid (approximately 9% of the repayment required under the 10-year repayment rule). The $1,800 repayment will come from CDSGs paid into Jeff's RDSP in 2009 and the plan's assistance holdback amount will be reduced to $19,200.

Maximum and Minimum Withdrawals

Budget 2012 proposes changes to the rules governing maximum and minimum withdrawals from RDSPs. These changes will provide greater flexibility in making withdrawals from an RDSP and ensure that RDSP assets are used to support the RDSP beneficiary during their lifetime.

There are two types of withdrawals that may be made from an RDSP: a discretionary disability assistance payment, which may be made at any time, subject to the plan terms [146.4(4)(m) — ed.] and certain restrictions under the tax rules; and a lifetime disability assistance payment (LDAP), which provides an ongoing stream of payments from the RDSP for a beneficiary.

LDAPs may commence at any time. Once started, they must be paid at least annually until either the RDSP is terminated or the beneficiary dies [146.4(1)"lifetime disability assistance payment" — ed.]. LDAPs must begin no later than the end of the year in which the beneficiary attains 60 years of age [146.4(4)(k) — ed.], so that the assets in the plan provide for the long-term financial security of the beneficiary during their lifetime. The maximum LDAP that can be withdrawn from the RDSP each year is determined by a formula (the LDAP formula) [146.4(4)(l) — ed.] that is based on the age of the beneficiary and the fair market value of the assets held in the RDSP.

Specific rules limit the maximum amount that may be withdrawn annually from RDSPs where CDSGs and CDSBs paid into the plan exceed private contributions made to the plan [146.4(4)(n) — ed.]. Such RDSPs are known as primarily government-assisted plans (PGAPs). Total withdrawals from a PGAP in a calendar year may not exceed the amount determined by the LDAP formula for the year. No such maximum withdrawal limits apply to non-PGAPs.

Budget 2012 proposes to increase the maximum annual limit for withdrawals from PGAPs [146.4(4)(n)(i) — ed.] to the greater of the amount determined by the LDAP formula and 10% of the fair market value of plan assets at the beginning of the calendar year. A PGAP beneficiary will continue to be eligible for the existing exemption from the maximum annual limit for withdrawals if a medical doctor certifies in writing that the beneficiary's state of health is such that, in the doctor's opinion, the beneficiary has a life expectancy of five years or less.

PGAPs are also subject to a minimum annual withdrawal requirement commencing with the calendar year in which the beneficiary attains 60 years of age [146.4(4)(n)(ii) — ed.]. For that calendar year and subsequent years, the total withdrawals from a PGAP must be at least equal to the amount determined by the LDAP formula for the year. For other RDSPs, there is no specified minimum withdrawal amount.

Budget 2012 proposes to extend to all RDSPs the minimum annual withdrawal requirement that currently applies only to PGAPs. Accordingly, once an RDSP beneficiary attains 60 years of age, the total withdrawals from the RDSP in a calendar year must be at least equal to the amount determined by the LDAP formula for the year.

These measures will apply after 2013.

Rollover of RESP Investment Income

To provide greater flexibility for parents who save in a Registered Education Savings Plan (RESP) [ITA 146.1 — ed.] for a child with a severe disability, Budget 2012 proposes to allow investment income earned in an RESP to be transferred on a tax-free (or "rollover") basis to an RDSP if the plans share a common beneficiary.

In order to qualify for this measure, the beneficiary must meet the existing age and residency requirements in relation to RDSP contributions. As well, one of the following conditions must be met:

- the beneficiary has a severe and prolonged mental impairment that can reasonably be expected to prevent the beneficiary from pursuing post-secondary education;
- the RESP has been in existence for at least 10 years and each beneficiary is at least 21 years of age and is not pursuing post-secondary education; or
- the RESP has been in existence for more than 35 years.

These are the existing conditions for receiving an accumulated income payment (AIP) from an RESP [146.1(2)(d.1), 146.1(2.2) — ed.]. An AIP is a lump-sum distribution of investment income earned in an RESP to the RESP subscriber, generally made in circumstances where the RESP beneficiary does not pursue post-secondary education and the RESP is being terminated. The AIP is included in the income of the RESP subscriber for regular income tax purposes [146.1(7.1) — ed.] and is also subject to an additional 20% tax [204.94(2) — ed.]. An RESP subscriber may reduce the amount of the AIP subject to tax by contributing a portion of the AIP to a Registered Retirement Savings Plan under specified conditions [204.94(2)C — ed.]

Under this proposal, when RESP investment income is rolled over to an RDSP, contributions in the RESP will be returned to the RESP subscriber on a tax-free basis. The subscriber can contribute these amounts to the RDSP (immediately or over time) if they so choose, potentially attracting CDSGs. [The carry forward of RDSP grants and bonds introduced in Budget 2010 allows RDSP beneficiaries to claim unused entitlements for CDSGs and CDSBs for the preceding 10 years (starting from 2008, the year RDSPs became available).] In addition, Canada Education Savings Grants and Canada Learning Bonds in the RESP will be required to be repaid to the Government and the RESP terminated by the end of February of the year after the year during which the rollover is made. As in the case of a contribution of an AIP to a Registered Retirement Savings Plan, the rollover amount will not be subject to regular income tax or the additional 20% tax.

The amount of RESP investment income rolled over to an RDSP may not exceed, and will reduce, the beneficiary's available RDSP contribution room [146.4(4)(g)(iii) — ed.]. The rollover amount will be considered a private contribution for the purpose of determining whether the RDSP is a PGAP, but will not attract CDSGs. The rollover amount will be included in the taxable portion of RDSP withdrawals.

This measure will apply to rollovers of RESP investment income made after 2013.

Termination of an RDSP following Cessation of Eligibility for the DTC

An RDSP may be established only for a beneficiary who is eligible for the Disability Tax Credit (DTC). If a beneficiary's condition factually improves such that the beneficiary does not qualify for the DTC for a taxation year (i.e., the beneficiary is DTC-ineligible throughout a full calendar year), the RDSP must be terminated by the end of the following year [146.4(4)(p) — ed.]. No contributions may be made to, and no CDSGs or CDSBs may be paid into, the RDSP once the beneficiary is DTC-ineligible. In addition, the 10-year repayment rule applies (with the required repayment being equal to the amount of the assistance holdback amount immediately preceding the beneficiary becoming DTC-ineligible) and any assets remaining in the RDSP must be paid to the beneficiary.

A beneficiary who becomes DTC-ineligible might, due to the nature of their condition, be eligible for the DTC for some later year and would be able to establish a new RDSP. Contribution room and repaid CDSGs and CDSBs are not restored in these circumstances.

To reduce the administrative burden on these beneficiaries and ensure greater continuity in their long-term saving, Budget 2012 proposes to extend, in certain circumstances, the period for which an RDSP may remain open when a beneficiary becomes DTC-ineligible.

This measure will apply to RDSPs where the beneficiary has become DTC-ineligible. In addition, a medical practitioner must certify in writing that the nature of the beneficiary's condition makes it likely that the beneficiary will, because of the condition, be eligible for the DTC in the foreseeable future.

Election

If an RDSP plan holder decides to take advantage of this measure, the plan holder will be required to elect in prescribed form and submit the election, along with the written certification, to the RDSP issuer. The RDSP issuer will then be required to notify Human Resources and Skills Development Canada that the election has been made. The election must be made on or before December 31st of the year following the first full calendar year for which the beneficiary is DTC-ineligible.

Results of an Election

Where an election is made, the following rules will apply commencing with the first full calendar year for which the beneficiary is DTC-ineligible:

- No contributions to the RDSP will be permitted, including under the proposed rule for the rollover of RESP investment income. However, a rollover of proceeds from a deceased individual's Registered Retirement Savings Plan or Registered Retirement Income Fund to the RDSP of a financially dependent infirm child or grandchild will still be permitted.
- No new CDSGs or CDSBs will be paid into the RDSP. If a beneficiary dies after an election has been made, the existing 10-year repayment rule will apply (with the required repayment being equal to the amount of the assistance holdback amount immediately preceding the beneficiary becoming DTC-ineligible, less any repayments made during or after the first full calendar year for which the beneficiary is DTC-ineligible).
- No new entitlements will be generated for the purpose of the carry-forward of CDSGs and CDSBs for years for which the beneficiary is DTC-ineligible.
- Withdrawals from the RDSP will be permitted, and will be subject to the proposed proportional repayment rule and the proposed maximum and minimum withdrawal rules as applicable. For years for which the beneficiary is DTC-ineligible, the assistance holdback amount will be equal to the amount of the assistance holdback amount immediately preceding the beneficiary becoming DTC-ineligible less any repayments made during or after the first full calendar year for which the beneficiary is DTC-ineligible.

Neither the certification required for an election, nor the election itself, will have any bearing on any determination of an individual's eligibility for the DTC. The sole purpose of the certification and election is to allow an RDSP to remain open for the years under election.

Duration of an Election

An election will generally be valid until the end of the fourth calendar year following the first full calendar year for which a beneficiary is DTC-ineligible. The RDSP must be terminated by the end of the first year for which there is no longer a valid election.

If a beneficiary becomes eligible for the DTC while an election is valid, the usual RDSP rules will apply commencing with the year for which the beneficiary becomes eligible. For example, contributions will be permitted and new CDSGs and CDSBs may be paid into the RDSP. Should the beneficiary become DTC-ineligible at some later time, a new election could be made.

This measure will apply to elections made after 2013.

RDSPs, that under current rules would have to be terminated before 2014 because the beneficiary has become DTC-ineligible and that have not yet been terminated, will not be required to be terminated until the end of 2014. Plan holders of such RDSPs may take advantage of this measure if they obtain the required medical certification and make an election on or before December 31, 2014.

Administrative Changes

Under current rules, when an RDSP is established, the issuer of the plan must notify Human Resources and Skills Development Canada within 60 days [146.4(13)(a) — ed.]. When an RDSP is transferred from one RDSP issuer to another, the transfer must be completed within 120 days of the new plan being established [146.4(3)(b) — ed.]. Budget 2012 proposes to replace these deadlines with a requirement that an RDSP issuer act "without delay" in notifying Human Resources and Skills Development Canada or the establishment of transfer of an RDSP. The elimination of these deadlines is intended to give issuers greater flexibility in complying with their obligations.

When an RDSP is transferred to a new issuer, the issuer of the original plan is required to provide a large amount of information to the new issuer [146.4(8)(c) — ed.]. Issuers are also required to file this information on a regular basis with Human Resources and Skills Development Canada [Canada Disability Savings Regulations s. 4(a) — ed.]. To reduce the administrative burden for issuers, Budget 2012 also proposes that Human Resources and Skills Development Canada, rather than the issuer of the original plan, be responsible for providing this information to the issuer of the new plan when an RDSP transfer occurs.

These measures will apply on Royal Assent to the enacting legislation.

In addition, Budget 2012 proposes that the Canada Disability Savings Regulations be amended to eliminate the 180-day deadline for an RDSP issuer to submit an application for a CDSG or a CDSB [Canada Disability Savings Regulations ss. 2(b)(ii), 3(c)(ii) — ed.].

This measure will apply on and after the day that the regulation amending the Canada Disability Savings Regulations is registered.

Review of the Registered Disability Savings Plan

Economic Action Plan 2012 proposes measures to ensure that Registered Disability Savings Plans continue to meet the needs of Canadians with severe disabilities and their families.

In July 2006, the Minister of Finance appointed the Expert Panel on Financial Security for Children with Severe Disabilities to consider how best to ensure the financial security of children with severe disabilities. The Panel submitted its report, A New Beginning, in December 2006.

The Government acted on the Panel's recommendations by announcing the introduction of a new tax-assisted Registered Disability Savings Plan (RDSP) in Budget 2007, which became available in December 2008.

The RDSP is widely regarded as a major policy innovation and positive development in helping to ensure the long-term financial security of children with severe disabilities. Since becoming available in 2008, nearly 55,000 RDSPs have been opened. This is due in part to the considerable efforts of financial institutions to make these plans available to Canadians. RDSPs are offered by 11 different financial institutions across the country, all of which have made a significant investment to offer the program.

Beneficiaries, their families and others have contributed over $220 million to these plans, and the Government has provided approximately $450 million in support through Canada Disability Savings Grants (CDSGs) and Canada Disability Savings Bonds (CDSBs).

In Budget 2011, the Government announced that it would undertake a review of the RDSP program in 2011, consistent with the commitment in Budget 2008 to review the program in three years to ensure that RDSPs are meeting the needs of Canadians with severe disabilities and their families.

The RDSP review was launched in October 2011. As part of the review, a consultation paper was released, which included a number of questions on which Canadians were invited to provide feedback. In response, the Government received more than 280 submissions from individuals and organizations. In addition, consultations were held with representatives from disability groups, financial institutions, and provincial and territorial governments, including public guardians and trustees. The Government wishes to thank those who participated in the review for their thoughtful input and suggestions.

Based on the feedback received during the review, Economic Action Plan 2012 proposes a number of measures to improve the RDSP. These measures will [for more detail see the Budget Supplementary Information excerpts above — ed.]:

- Provide greater access to RDSP savings for small withdrawals by replacing the requirement to repay any CDSGs and CDSBs paid into an RDSP within the 10 years preceding a withdrawal from the plan with a requirement to repay CDSGs and CDSBs at a fixed ratio to the amount withdrawn.
- Provide greater flexibility to make withdrawals from certain RDSPs by increasing the annual maximum withdrawal limit that applies to these RDSPs, and ensure that RDSP assets are used to support a beneficiary during their lifetime by requiring a minimum amount to be withdrawn from all RDSPs beginning the year a beneficiary attains 60 years of age.

- Provide greater flexibility for parents who save in Registered Education Savings Plans (RESPs) for children with disabilities by allowing investment income earned in an RESP to be transferred on a tax-free basis to an RESP beneficiary's RDSP.
- Provide greater continuity for long-term saving by RDSP beneficiaries who cease to qualify for the Disability Tax Credit in certain circumstances by extending the period that their plans may remain open.
- Improve the administration of the RDSP for financial institutions and beneficiaries by amending certain RDSP administrative rules.

Establishing Plans and Legal Representation

The RDSP has been highly successful due in part to the cooperation of provinces and territories in ensuring that RDSP benefits are not clawed back by reductions in social assistance payments.

However, a number of adults with disabilities have experienced problems in establishing a plan because their capacity to enter into a contract is in doubt. Questions of appropriate legal representation in these cases are a matter of provincial and territorial responsibility. In many provinces and territories, the only way that an RDSP can be opened in these cases is for the individual to be declared legally incompetent and have someone named as their legal guardian — a process that can involve a considerable amount of time and expense on the part of concerned family members, and that may have significant repercussions for the individual.

Some provinces and territories have instituted more streamlined processes to allow for the appointment of a trusted person, such as a parent, other relative, or friend, to manage resources on behalf of an individual with a disability, or have otherwise indicated that their system already provides sufficient flexibility to address these concerns. The Government of Canada recognizes and appreciates the leadership shown by the Governments of British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Newfoundland and Labrador, and Yukon in this regard. In addition, the Government of Canada is pleased that the Government of Alberta has recently indicated that it will examine ways to simplify access to the RDSP program.

The Government of Canada continues to encourage the Governments of Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, the Northwest Territories and Nunavut to examine whether streamlined processes would be suitable for their jurisdiction.

Given the importance of this issue to the success of the RDSP program, the Government of Canada will work with provinces and territories to develop a standardized, streamlined process that provinces and territories could adopt in order to facilitate and simplify the process of opening RDSPs for beneficiaries who lack contractual competence.

In the interim, while these processes are being developed, Economic Action Plan 2012 proposes to temporarily expand the definition of who may be the plan holder of an RDSP. Specifically, a beneficiary's spouse, common-law partner, or parent will be able to become the plan holder and open an RDSP on behalf of an adult who might not be able to open a plan due to concerns about their ability to enter into a contract. These rules will be in place until the end of 2016, to provide provinces and territories time to develop more appropriate, long-term solutions to address RDSP legal representation issues.

The changes to the RDSP will cost $3 million in 2012-13 and $6 million in 2013-14.

History: Subsec. 147(1.1) added by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 43(2), applicable after 1988.

(2) Acceptance of plan for registration — The Minister shall not accept for registration for the purposes of this Act any profit sharing plan unless, in the Minister's opinion, it complies with the following conditions:

(a) the plan provides that each payment made under the plan to a trustee in trust for the benefit of beneficiaries thereunder is the total of amounts each of which is required to be allocated by the trustee in the year in which it is received by the trustee, to the individual beneficiary in respect of whom the amount was so paid;

(a.1) the plan includes a stipulation that no contribution may be made to the plan other than

(i) a contribution made in accordance with the terms of the plan by an employer for the benefit of the employer's employees who are beneficiaries under the plan, or

(ii) an amount transferred to the plan in accordance with subsection (19);

(b) the plan does not provide for the payment of any amount to an employee or other beneficiary thereunder by way of loan;

(c) the plan provides that no part of the funds of the trust governed by the plan may be invested in notes, bonds, debentures, bankers' acceptances or similar obligations of

(i) an employer by whom payments are made in trust to a trustee under the plan for the benefit of beneficiaries thereunder, or

(ii) a corporation with whom that employer does not deal at arm's length;

(d) the plan provides that no part of the funds of the trust governed by the plan may be invested in shares of a corporation at least 50% of the property of which consists of notes, bonds, debentures, bankers' acceptances or similar obligations of an employer or a corporation described in paragraph (c);

(e) the plan includes a provision stipulating that no right or interest under the plan of an employee who is a beneficiary thereunder is capable, either in whole or in part, of surrender or assignment;

Proposed Amendment — 147(2)(e)

(e) the plan includes a provision stipulating that no right of a person under the plan is capable of any surrender or assignment other than

(i) an assignment under a decree, an order or a judgment of a competent tribunal, or under a written agreement, that relates to a division of property between an individual and the individual's spouse or common-law partner, or former spouse or common-law partner, in settlement of rights that arise out of, or on a breakdown of, their marriage or common-law partnership,

(ii) an assignment by a deceased individual's legal representative on the distribution of the individual's estate, and

(iii) a surrender of benefits to avoid revocation of the plan's registration;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 105(1), will amend para. 147(2)(e) to read as above, applicable after March 20, 2003.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 147(2) sets out the conditions that a profit sharing plan must satisfy in order to be registered as a DPSP. Paragraph 147(2)(e) requires that such a plan include a provision stipulating that no right of an employee who is a beneficiary under the plan is capable of surrender or assignment.

Paragraph 147(2)(e) is amended in two ways. First, it is amended to extend the application of the provision to require that the stipulation apply to all persons who have rights under a DPSP, not just employee beneficiaries. Second, it is amended to provide that the stipulation is not required to prohibit:

- an assignment under a court order or written agreement relating to the division of property on the breakdown of a marriage or common-law partnership;
- an assignment by a deceased individual's legal representative on the distribution of the individual's estate; and
- a surrender of benefits to avoid revocation of the plan's registration.

These new provisions are similar to the rule in Regulation 8502(f) that applies to registered pension plans (RPPs). The new provisions are, in part, consequential on amendments to subsection 147(19) that accommodate the division of DPSP assets on the breakdown of a marriage or common-law partnership.

(f) the plan includes a provision stipulating that each of the trustees under the plan shall be resident in Canada;

(g) the plan provides that, if a corporation licensed or otherwise authorized under the laws of Canada or a province to carry on in Canada the business of offering to the public its services as trustee is not a trustee under the plan, there shall be at least 3 trustees under the plan who shall be individuals;

(h) the plan provides that all income received, capital gains made and capital losses sustained by the trust governed by the plan must be allocated to beneficiaries under the plan on or before a day 90 days after the end of the year in which they were received, made or sustained, as the case may be, to the extent that they have not been allocated in years preceding that year;

(i) the plan provides that each amount allocated or reallocated by a trustee under the plan to a beneficiary under the plan vest irrevocably in that beneficiary,

(i) in the case of an amount allocated or reallocated before 1991, at a time that is not later than 5 years after the end of the year in which it was allocated or reallocated, unless the beneficiary becomes, before that time, an individual who is not an employee of any employer who participates in the plan, and

(ii) in the case of any other amount, not later than the later of the time of allocation or reallocation and the day on which the beneficiary completes a period of 24 consecutive months as a beneficiary under the plan or under any other deferred profit sharing plan for which the plan can reasonably be considered to have been substituted;

(i.1) the plan requires that each forfeited amount under the plan and all earnings of the plan reasonably attributable thereto be paid to employers who participate in the plan, or be reallocated to beneficiaries under the plan, on or before the later of December 31, 1991 and December 31 of the year immediately following the calendar year in which the amount is forfeited, or such later time as is permitted in writing by the Minister under subsection (2.2);

(j) the plan provides that a trustee under the plan inform, in writing, all new beneficiaries under the plan of their rights under the plan;

(k) the plan provides that, in respect of each beneficiary under the plan who has been employed by an employer who participates in the plan, all amounts vested under the plan in the beneficiary become payable

(i) to the beneficiary, or

(ii) in the event of the beneficiary's death, to another person designated by the beneficiary or to the beneficiary's estate, not later than the earlier of

(iii) the end of the year in which the beneficiary attains 71 years of age, and

(iv) 90 days after the earliest of

(A) the death of the beneficiary,

(B) the day on which the beneficiary ceases to be employed by an employer who participates in the plan where, at the time of ceasing to be so employed, the beneficiary is not employed by another employer who participates in the plan, and

(C) the termination or winding-up of the plan,

except that the plan may provide that, on election by the beneficiary, all or any part of the amounts payable to the beneficiary may be paid

(v) in equal instalments payable not less frequently than annually over a period not exceeding 10 years from the day on which the amount became payable, or

(vi) by a trustee under the plan to a licensed annuities provider to purchase for the beneficiary an annuity where

(A) payment of the annuity is to begin not later than the end of the year in which the beneficiary attains 71 years of age, and

(B) the guaranteed term, if any, of the annuity does not exceed 15 years;

(k.1) the plan requires that no benefit or loan, other than

(i) a benefit the amount of which is required to be included in computing the beneficiary's income,

(ii) an amount referred to in paragraph (10)(b),

(ii.1) an amount paid pursuant to or under the plan by a trustee under the plan to a licensed annuities provider to purchase for a beneficiary under the plan an annuity to which subparagraph (k)(vi) applies,

(iii) a benefit derived from an allocation or reallocation referred to in subsection (2), or

Proposed Repeal — 147(5.11)

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 105(2), will repeal subsec. 147(5.11), applicable to cessations of employment that occur after 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 147(5.1) sets out the employer contribution limits for DPSPs. In general terms, the maximum employer contributions in respect of an individual for a calendar year cannot exceed the lesser of: (i) 18% of the individual's compensation for the year from the employer; and (ii) ½ of the year's money purchase limit. For this purpose, "compensation" and "money purchase limit" are generally as defined in subsection 147.1(1). Additional cross-plan limits apply if the individual also participates in an RPP sponsored by the employer or in a DPSP or RPP sponsored by a non-arm's length employer.

If the contribution limits are not respected for a calendar year, the Minister of National Revenue may revoke the registration of the DPSP. In addition, the employer is denied a deduction for all contributions made in the year, except as expressly permitted in writing by the Minister.

Subsection 147(5.11) provides a special relieving rule that applies when an employee who is a beneficiary under a DPSP terminates employment with a participating employer in a calendar year. In this circumstance, for the purposes of determining whether the contribution limits have been satisfied, the employee's compensation can be based on the compensation for the immediately preceding year, if it is more than the compensation for the year of termination.

This rule recognizes that it is common practice for an employer to make contributions to a DPSP only after its fiscal year-end, since this is when profits are determined. This can often result in employer contributions being made based (in whole or in part) on employees' earnings in the previous calendar year, but being included in the employees' contribution limits for the current calendar year. This in turn can give rise to over-contributions when an employee terminates employment later in the year before having earned sufficient compensation to support the contribution. However, subsection 147(5.11) generally ensures that such over-contributions do not result in adverse tax effects by allowing the contribution limits to be based on the employee's compensation from the preceding calendar year.

There are, however, two policy concerns with the approach used in subsection 147(5.11). The first concern is that the provision deals only with over-contributions that involve employees who terminate employment. It does not provide relief for similar over-contributions that arise where an employee takes an unpaid leave of absence before having earned sufficient compensation to support any contributions that the employer had already made on his or her behalf. The second concern is that the provision allows DPSP contributions to be made in situations where there is no supporting employment income.

To address these concerns, subsection 147(5.11) is repealed and replaced by a broader relief mechanism in section 8301 of the Regulations [see Reg. 8301(2), (2.1) — ed.]. The new mechanism will provide relief in both of the situations described above by allowing over-contributions to be ignored for purposes of the DPSP contribution limits, provided the excess is refunded from the plan.

The repeal of subsection 147(5.11) applies to cessations of employment that occur in 2003 and subsequent calendar years, while the new refund mechanism in the Regulations applies for 2002 and subsequent calendar years. As a result, for excess contributions relating to cessations of employment that occur in 2002, employers will be entitled to relief either by relying on existing 147(5.11) or by using the new refund mechanism.

(6) Deferred plan not employees profit sharing plan — For a period during which a plan is a deferred profit sharing plan, the plan shall be deemed, for the purposes of this Act, not to be an employees profit sharing plan.

It is also amended to allow for direct transfers of DPSP assets to be made on behalf of a spouse or common-law partner, or former spouse or common-law partner, of an employee or former employee, where the transfer relates to a division of property arising on the breakdown of their marriage or common-law partnership.

(ii) an office in respect of which the individual is remunerated by the employer that is required (or that would be required but for paragraph 81(1)(a) as it applies with respect to the Indian Act) by section 5 or 6 to be included in computing the individual's income for the year, except such portion of the amount as Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), s. 28, will amend the portion of para. (a) of the definition "compensation" in subsec. 147.1(1) between subparas. (ii) and (iii) to read as above, applicable after 1990.

Technical Notes: Subsection 147.1(1) provides a number of definitions relating to registered pension plans, including the definition "compensation". As currently defined, "compensation" includes amounts that, but for paragraph 81(1)(a) as it applies with respect to the Indian Act, would be required by section 5 or 6 to be included in computing an individual's income. In other words, the existing definition includes as compensation amounts that are exempt from income tax under paragraph 81(1)(a) only as it applies with respect to the Indian Act.

The amended definition "compensation" extends the meaning of the term to also include amounts exempt from income tax under paragraph 81(1)(a) as it applies with respect to the Foreign Missions and International Organizations Act. This will accommodate participation in registered pension plans by employees whose compensation is tax-exempt because of that Act and ensure that the remuneration of these employees can be taken into account for the purposes of the pension adjustment limits in subsection 147.1(8) and any other applicable pension tax rules.

(b) a prescribed amount, or

(c) an amount acceptable to the Minister in respect of remuneration received by the individual from any employer for a period in the year throughout which the individual was not resident in Canada, to the extent that the amount is not otherwise included in the total;

(a) the recommendation is based on an actuarial valuation that complies with the following conditions, except the conditions in subparagraphs (iii) and (iv) to the extent that they are inconsistent with any other conditions that apply for the purpose of determining whether the contribution is an eligible contribution:

(i) the effective date of the valuation is not more than 4 years before the day on which the contribution is made,

(ii) actuarial liabilities and current service costs are determined in accordance with an actuarial funding method that produces a reasonable matching of contributions with accruing benefits,

(iii) all assumptions made for the purposes of the valuation are reasonable at the time the valuation is prepared and at the time the contribution is made,

(iv) the valuation is prepared in accordance with generally accepted actuarial principles,

Proposed Amendment — 147.2(7) opening words

(7) Letter of credit — For the purposes of this section and any regulations made under subsection 147.1(18) in respect of eligible contributions, an amount paid to a registered pension plan by the issuer of a letter of credit issued in connection with an employer's funding obligations under a defined benefit provision of the plan is deemed to be an eligible contribution made to the plan in respect of the provision by the employer with respect to the employer's employees or former employees, if

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), subsec. 29(1), will amend the opening words of subsec. 147.2(7) to read as above, applicable after November 5, 2010.

Technical Notes: Subsection 147.2 provides rules that govern the deductibility of contributions to registered pension plans (RPPs). Subsection 147.2(7) applies where, as a result of a default or failure under the terms of a letter of credit, the issuer of the letter of credit pays an amount to a registered pension plan. Subsection 147.2(7) generally treats the payment as if it had been an employer contribution and entitles the employer to a deduction for the amount of the payment.

Subsection 147.2(7) is amended, consequential on the introduction of new subsection 147.2(8), to ensure that the wording of those two subsections is consistent.

(a) the amount is paid under the letter of credit;

(b) the use of the letter of credit is permitted under the Pension Benefits Standards Act, 1985 or a similar law of a province; and

(c) the amount would have been an eligible contribution under subsection (2) if

(i) it had been paid to the plan by the employer, and

(ii) this section were read without reference to this subsection.

Related Provisions: 147.2(8) — Former employee of predecessor employer.

History: Subsec. 147.2(7) added by 2007, c. 2, s. 39, applicable after 2005.

Proposed Addition — 147.2(8)

(8) Former employee of predecessor employer — For the purposes of this section and any regulations made under subsection 147.1(18) in respect of eligible contributions, a former employee of a predecessor employer (as defined by regulation) of a participating employer in relation to a pension plan is deemed to be a former employee of the participating employer in relation to the plan if

(a) the former employee would not otherwise be an employee or former employee of the participating employer; and

(b) benefits are provided to the former employee under a defined benefit provision of the plan in respect of periods of employment with the predecessor employer.

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), subsec. 29(2), will add subsec. 147.2(8), applicable to contributions made after 1990.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.2(8) allows the deductibility of eligible contributions made to RPPs under subsections 147.2(1) and (2) and 147.1(18), and under related regulations, to apply appropriately in certain circumstances relating to the purchase of a business. The amendment ensures that contributions made by a participating employer to fund benefits in respect of former employees of a predecessor employer (referred to as the "vendor") are deductible. For example, the amendment is relevant to a situation where the purchase transaction involves the assignment of a defined benefit plan by the vendor to the participating employer (being the purchaser of the vendor's business) and the participating employer takes over the responsibility of funding benefits provided under the plan to the former employees of the vendor. By deeming the former employees of the vendor to be former employees of the participating employer, the amendment allows the participating employer to deduct eligible contributions made to the plan to fund benefits provided to these employees.

Under subsection 147.2(8), a former employee of the vendor is deemed to be a former employee of the participating employer if

- the former employee would not otherwise be an employee or a former employee of the participating employer; and
- benefits are provided to the former employee under a defined benefit provision of the plan in respect of periods of employment with the vendor.

Proposed Amendment — 147.3(6)(b)

(b) is transferred on behalf of a member who is entitled to the amount as a return of contributions made (or deemed by regulation to have been made) by the member under a defined benefit provision of the plan before 1991, or as interest (computed at a rate not exceeding a reasonable rate) in respect of those contributions; and

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), s. 30, will amend para. 147.3(6)(b) to read as above, applicable to transfers that occur after 1999.

Technical Notes: Subsection 147.3 provides rules governing the transfer of funds from a registered pension plan (RPP) to another RPP, an RRSP or a RRIF. Subsection 147.3(6) provides rules applicable to the transfer of member contributions under a defined benefit provision of an RPP. Theses rules contemplate only contributions that were actually made to the plan in question. This can create difficulties where member contributions are transferred from one plan to another as a result of a plan reorganization (for example, the splitting of one plan into two or more plans, the transfer of a group of members from one plan to another or the amalgamation of two or more plans). Paragraph 147.3(6)(b) is amended to ensure that subsection 147.3(6) and related provisions apply appropriately where member contributions are transferred from one plan to another. With the amendment, member contributions that were made to the former plan will be treated as having been made to the replacement plan for the purpose of permissible transfers and refunds.

For more information, see the commentary to the amendments to subsection 8500(9) of the Regulations.

(c) is transferred directly to

(i) another registered pension plan for the benefit of the member,

(ii) a registered retirement savings plan under which the member is the annuitant (within the meaning assigned by subsection 146(1)), or

(iii) a registered retirement income fund under which the member is the annuitant (within the meaning assigned by subsection 146.3(1)).

(13.1) There may be deducted in computing the income of an individual for the 1992 taxation year the lesser of

(a) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount included under subsection 146(8), (8.3) or (12) or 146.3(5), (5.1) or (11) in computing the individual's income for a taxation year ending after 1988 and before 1993, to the extent that the amount is not a prescribed withdrawal,

(B) included in computing the income of the individual for the year or a preceding taxation year, and

(C) deemed by paragraph (10)(b) or (c) to have been paid by the individual as a premium to a registered retirement savings plan,

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deducted under subsection 146(5) in computing the individual's income for a preceding taxation year, to the extent that the amount can reasonably be considered to be in respect of an amount referred to in subparagraph (i).

(i) the day on which the annuity payments are to begin under the contract is fixed and determined and is after the year in which the individual attains

(A) 69 years of age, where the individual had not attained that age before 1997, or

(b) the rights provided for under the contract are not materially different from those provided for under the plan as registered,

(d) either the plan is not a plan in respect of which the Minister may, under subsection 147.1(11), give a notice of intent to revoke the registration of the plan or the Minister waives the application of this paragraph with respect to the contract and so notifies the administrator of the plan in writing, and

(e) the individual does not acquire the interest as a consequence of a transfer of property from the plan to a registered retirement savings plan or a registered retirement income fund,

the following rules apply for the purposes of this Act:

(f) the individual is deemed not to have received an amount out of or under the registered pension plan as a consequence of acquiring the interest, and

(i) defer annuity commencement to no later than the end of the calendar year in which the individual in respect of whom the contract was purchased attains 71 years of age, or

(ii) enhance benefits under the annuity contract in connection with the demutualization (as defined by subsection 139.1(1)) of an insurance corporation that is considered for the purpose of section 139.1 to have been a party to the annuity contract, and

(b) the rights provided for under the contract are materially altered as a consequence of the amendment,

the following rules apply for the purposes of this Act:

(c) each individual who has an interest in the contract immediately before that time is deemed to have received at that time the payment of an amount under a pension plan equal to the fair market value of the interest immediately before that time,

(d) the contract as amended is deemed to be a separate annuity contract issued at that time otherwise than pursuant to or under a superannuation or pension fund or plan, and

(e) each individual who has an interest in the separate annuity contract immediately after that time is deemed to have acquired the interest at that time at a cost equal to the fair market value of the interest immediately after that time.

(3) New contract — For the purposes of this Act, where an annuity contract (in this subsection referred to as the "original contract") to which subsection (1) or paragraph 254(a) applies is, at any time, substituted by another contract,

(a) if the rights provided for under the other contract

(i) are not materially different from those provided for under the original contract, or

(ii) are materially different from those provided for under the original contract only because of an enhancement of benefits that can reasonably be considered to have been provided solely in connection with the demutualization (as defined by subsection 139.1(1)) of an insurance corporation that is considered for the purposes of section 139.1 to have been a party to the original contract, the other contract is deemed to be the same contract as, and a continuation of, the original contract; and

(b) in any other case, each individual who has an interest in the original contract immediately before that time is deemed to have received at that time the payment of an amount under a pension plan equal to the fair market value of the interest immediately before that time.

(4) RPP annuity contract beginning after age 69 — For the purposes of this Act, where, under circumstances to which paragraph 254(a) applied, an individual acquired before 1997 an interest in an annuity contract in full or partial satisfaction of the individual's entitlement to benefits under a registered pension plan, and payment of the annuity has not begun by the end of the particular year in which the individual attains 69 years of age,

(a) the interest is deemed not to exist after the particular year;

147.5 Pooled Registered Pension Plans — (1) Definitions — The following definitions apply in this section.

"administrator", of a pooled pension plan, means

(a) a corporation resident in Canada that is responsible for the administration of the plan and that is authorized under the Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act or a similar law of a province to act as an administrator for one or more pooled pension plans, or

(b) an entity designated in respect of the plan under section 21 of the Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act or any provision of a law of a province that is similar to that section.

Technical Notes: New section 147.5 provides the basic framework of income tax rules that will apply in relation to pooled registered pension plans (PRPPs). In general terms, PRPPs are intended to operate in a manner similar to multi-employer money-purchase registered pension plans, but with certain features drawn from the registered retirement savings plan and registered retirement income fund systems. The overall policy intent of the tax rules is to provide a new option for retirement savings — one that will be especially attractive to smaller employers and to self-employed individuals. Consequently, and in the interests of reducing costs for taxpayers, the rules are intended to be, in some respects, simpler than the existing tax rules for pensions.

New section 147.5, and the related tax rules applicable to PRPPs, will come into force on the day of the coming into force of the Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act.

New subsection 147.5(1) defines terms that are relevant for the purposes of new subsection 147.5.

An "administrator" of a PRPP is generally defined to be a corporation resident in Canada that has responsibility for the administration of a PRPP and that is authorized under the Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act or a similar law of a province to act as a PRPP administrator.

Related Provisions: Reg. 213 — Administrator must file information return.

"designated pooled pension plan", for a calendar year, means a pooled pension plan if at any time in the year (other than the year in which the plan became registered as a PRPP)

(a) the plan has fewer than 10 participating employers;

(b) the fair market value of the property held in connection with the accounts of all members of the plan employed by a particular participating employer exceeds 50% of the fair market value of the property held in connection with the plan;

(c) more than 50% of the members of the plan are employed by a particular participating employer; or

(d) it is reasonable to conclude that the participation in the plan of one or more participating employers occurs primarily to avoid the application of any of paragraphs (a) to (c).

Technical Notes: A "designated pooled pension plan" is generally defined to be a pooled pension plan that, at any time in a calendar year, has fewer than 10 participating employers, holds more than half of its property (by fair market value) for employees of a single employer, or has a plan membership that is concentrated with a single employer (i.e., more than 50% of plan members work for a single employer). For this purpose, new subsection 147.5(28) generally deems related employers, as well as various units of trade unions, to be a single employer.

Designated pooled pension plan status, which is anticipated to be fairly unusual, is relevant to the application of new subparagraph 147.5(3)(e)(ii), which generally precludes a designated pooled pension plan from holding investments in an employer that participates in the plan.

Related Provisions: 147.5(28) — Related employers (and union locals) deemed to be single employer.

"excluded investment" means a debt of Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province or of a municipality in Canada.

Technical Notes: An "excluded investment" is generally defined as a debt issued by Her Majesty in Right of Canada or a province, or by a Canadian municipality. Excluded investments may be disregarded for the purposes of paragraph 147.5(3)(f), which imposes a diversification requirement on PRPPs.

"member", of a pooled pension plan, means an individual (other than a trust) who holds an account under the plan.

Technical Notes: A "member" of a pooled pension plan is an individual who holds an account under the plan.

"participating employer", in relation to a pooled pension plan for a calendar year, means an employer that, in the year,

(a) makes contributions to the plan in respect of all or a class of its employees or former employees; or

(b) remits to the administrator of the plan contributions made by members of the plan under a contract with the administrator in respect of all or a class of its employees.

Technical Notes: A "participating employer" is generally defined as an employer who either makes contributions to a PRPP on behalf of its employees, or one who, under a contract with the PRPP's administrator, has set up an arrangement to facilitate employee contributions. This definition is therefore intended to apply to employers who, in effect, offer one or more PRPPs to their employees, but not to an employer who occasionally remits amounts to various PRPPs at the request of an employee.

For example, in 2019 an employer hires Keith, who has been in the workforce for 10 years and has organized his retirement savings through different periods of employment and self-employment in a single PRPP. Keith is working out well, and his employer awards him a $2,000 bonus. Keith asks if the employer could remit this amount directly to his PRPP and the employer agrees. In this case, Keith's employer would not be a participating employer for the purposes of Keith's PRPP.

The definition "participating employer" is relevant to the application of the definition "designated pooled pension plan" and to the related rules in new paragraph 147.5(3)(c) and new subparagraph 147.5(3)(e)(ii).

"pooled pension plan" means a plan that is registered under the Pooled Registered Pension Plan Act or a similar law of a province.

Technical Notes: A "pooled pension plan" is generally defined as a plan that has been registered under the Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act or a similar law of a province. This concept follows the same basic approach that is found with respect to other plans registered under the Act. Rules in the Act that apply to a plan that either has not yet been registered under the Act or whose registered status has been revoked refer to "pooled pension plans"; as do those rules that apply in situations where a plan may or not be registered. Rules in the Act that apply only to pooled pension plans with registered status under the Act refer to "pooled registered pension plans" or "PRPPs".

"pooled registered pension plan" or "PRPP" means a pooled pension plan that has been accepted for registration by the Minister for purposes of this Act, which registration has not been revoked.

Technical Notes: A "pooled registered pension plan" or "PRPP" is a pooled pension plan that has been accepted for registration by the Minister of National Revenue and that registration has not been revoked. Registration conditions for PRPPs are set out in new subsection 147.5(2).

Related Provisions: 6(1)(a)(i) — Employer's PRPP contribution not a taxable benefit; 18(11)(c) — Whether interest deductible on money borrowed to contribute to PRPP; 75(3)(a) — Reversionary trust rules do not apply to PRPP; 108(1)"trust"(a) — "Trust" does not include a PRPP for certain purposes; 118(7)"pension income"(a)(iii.2) — PRPP income qualifies for pension credit; 146(1)"unused RRSP deduction room"D(iii), 146(5)(b) — Employer contribution reduces RRSP contribution room; 147.5(8) — PRPP not taxed; 147.5(10) — Contributions deductible; 147.5(13) — Benefits taxable; 248(1)"retirement compensation arrangement"(a.1) — PRPP deemed not to be RCA; 248(1)"salary deferral arrangement"(a.1) — PRPP deemed not to be SDA.

"qualifying annuity", for an individual, means an annuity that

(a) is payable to

(i) the individual for the individual's life, or

(ii) the individual for the lives, jointly, of the individual and the individual's spouse or common-law partner and to the survivor of them for the survivor's life;

(b) is payable beginning no later than the later of the end of the calendar year in which the individual attains 71 years of age and the year in which the annuity is acquired;

(c) unless the annuity is subsequently commuted into a single payment, is payable

(i) at least annually, and

(ii) in equal amounts or is not so payable solely because of an adjustment that would, if the annuity were an annuity under a retirement savings plan, be in accordance with any of subparagraphs 146(3)(b)(iii) to (v);

(d) if the annuity includes a guaranteed period, requires that

(i) the period not exceed 15 years, and

(ii) in the event of the later of the death of the individual and that of the individual's spouse or common-law partner during the period, any remaining amounts otherwise payable be commuted into a single payment as soon as practicable after the later death; and

(e) does not permit any premiums to be paid, other than the premium paid from the PRPP to acquire the annuity.

Technical Notes: The term "qualifying annuity" is defined for the purposes of a transfer described in new paragraph 147.5(20)(c). A qualifying annuity may be purchased for the benefit of an individual described under new paragraph 147.5(20)(b). In that case, PRPP account proceeds used to purchase the annuity will not be included under new subsection 147.5(16) in the income of the person for whom the annuity was acquired. An annuity purchased from a PRPP account is a qualifying annuity if it satisfies the following five conditions:

- the annuity is payable either for the individual's life or for the joint lives of the individual and his or her spouse or common-law partner (paragraph (a));
- payments under the annuity begin by the end of the calendar year in which the individual attains 71 years of age, or the year of acquisition, whichever is later (paragraph (b));
- the annuity is payable at least annually and generally in equal installments (subject to permitted variations and increases described in subparagraphs 146(3)(b)(iii) to (v) (paragraph (c));
- any guarantee period (in relation to early death of the annuitant(s)) does not exceed 15 years and, if the annuitant(s) dies during the guarantee period, any amount payable is commuted into a single payment (paragraph (d)); and
- no premiums may be paid under the annuity, other than the payment from the PRPP to acquire the annuity (paragraph (e)).

Related Provisions: 147.5(22) — Where amount transferred from PRPP to acquire qualifying annuity.

"qualifying survivor", in relation to a member of a PRPP, means an individual who, immediately before the death of the member

(a) was a spouse or common-law partner of the member, or

(b) was a child or grandchild of the member who was financially dependent on the member for support.

Technical Notes: A "qualifying survivor", in relation to a deceased PRPP member, is an individual who was, immediately before the member's death, the spouse or common-law partner of the member, or a child or grandchild of the member who was financially dependent on the member. The determination of whether a child or grandchild is "financially dependent" is subject to the interpretation rule in subsection 146(1.1).

Related Provisions: 146(1.1) — Where child presumed not financially dependent.

"restricted investment", for a pooled pension plan, means

(a) a debt of a member of the plan;

(b) a share of, an interest in, or a debt of

(i) a corporation, partnership or trust in which a member of the plan has a significant interest, or

(ii) a person or partnership that does not deal at arm's length with the member of the plan or with a person or partnership described in subparagraph (i);

(c) an interest (or, for civil law, a right) in, or a right to acquire, a share, interest or debt described in paragraph (a) or (b); or

(d) prescribed property.

Technical Notes: A "qualifying survivor", in relation to a deceased PRPP member, is an individual who was, immediately before the member's death, the spouse or common-law partner of the member, or a child or grandchild of the member who was financially dependent on the member. The determination of whether a child or grandchild is "financially dependent" is subject to the interpretation rule in subsection 146(1.1).

Related Provisions: 147.5(29) — Meaning of "significant interest".

"single amount" means an amount that is not part of a series of periodic payments.

Technical Notes: A "single amount" paid from a PRPP is any payment that is not a part of a series of periodic payments from the PRPP. This is the same definition as is used in subsection 147.1(1) and is intended to have the same meaning.

"successor member" means an individual who was the spouse or common-law partner of a member of a PRPP immediately before the death of the member and who acquires, as a consequence of the death, all of the member's rights in respect of the member's account under the PRPP.

Technical Notes: A "successor member" means, in general terms, a surviving spouse or common-law partner who assumes all of the rights in respect of the PRPP account of the original plan member on that member's death. This concept, similar to a "successor holder" of a tax-free savings account, a successor annuitant of a registered retirement income fund (RRIF) or a designated beneficiary of a life insurance policy, will enable a surviving spouse or common-law partner who has obtained all of the member's rights to benefits under the PRPP to assume the deceased member's position in relation to the PRPP account without any further tax consequences related to the death of the member. Where this definition applies, new subsection 147.5(15) will govern the transfer of the rights under the plan and the other PRPP rules relating to succession will not apply.

(2) Registration conditions — The Minister may accept for registration a pooled pension plan for the purposes of this Act, but shall not accept for registration any plan unless application for registration is made in prescribed manner by the plan administrator and, in the Minister's opinion, the plan complies with the following conditions:

(a) the primary purpose of the plan is to accept and invest contributions in order to provide retirement income to plan members, subject to the limits and other requirements under this Act;

(b) a single and separate account is maintained for each member

(i) to which are credited all contributions made to the plan in respect of the member, and any earnings of the plan allocated to the member, and

(ii) to which are charged all payments and distributions made in respect of the member;

(c) the only benefits provided under the plan in respect of each member are benefits determined solely with reference to, and provided by, the amount in the member's account;

(d) all earnings of the plan are allocated to plan members on a reasonable basis and no less frequently than annually;

(e) all property held in connection with the plan is held in trust by the administrator for the members of the plan;

(f) no right of a person under the plan is capable of being assigned, charged, anticipated, given as security or surrendered, other than

(i) an assignment pursuant to a decree, order or judgment of a competent tribunal, or a under a written agreement, relating to a division of property between the member and the member's spouse or common-law partner or former spouse or common-law partner, in settlement of rights arising out of, or on a breakdown of, their marriage or common-law partnership, or

(ii) an assignment by the legal representative of a deceased individual on the distribution of the individual's estate;

(g) the plan requires that all amounts contributed or allocated to a member's account vest immediately and indefeasibly for the benefit of the member;

(h) the plan permits the payment of an amount to a member where the amount is paid to reduce the amount of tax that would otherwise be payable under Part X.1 by the member;

(i) any amount payable from an account of a member after the death of the member is paid as soon as practicable after the death;

(j) there is no reason to expect that the plan may become a revocable plan; and

(k) any prescribed conditions.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(2) sets out the conditions for registration of a PRPP. The introductory portion of subsection 147.5(2) requires that the Minister of National Revenue not accept a pooled pension plan for registration unless the application has been made in the prescribed manner (that is, in the manner and form determined by the Minister) and the Minister is satisfied that the plan meets all the registration conditions set out in the subsection.

New paragraph 147.5(2)(a) requires that the main purpose of a PRPP be to accept and invest contributions for the purpose of providing retirement income to the PRPP's members, subject to the limits (e.g., contribution limits) and requirements (e.g., investment restrictions) applicable to PRPPs under the Act.

New paragraph 147.5(2)(b) requires that a single and separate account be maintained for each PRPP member, that each account be credited with contributions made to the plan in respect of the member and investment earnings allocated to the member, and that each account be charged with all payments and distributions made out of the account in respect of the member.

New paragraph 147.5(2)(c) requires that the only benefits provided to any member of a PRPP be those that can be funded out of the member's account (similar to the rules that apply to money purchase accounts under registered pension plans). For further information, please see the commentary on new subsections 147.5(5) and (20), which relate to permissible benefits and transfers out of PRPPs.

New paragraph 147.5(2)(d) requires an annual (or more frequent) allocation of PRPP investment earnings to member accounts and that those earnings be allocated on a reasonable basis.

New paragraph 147.5(2)(e) requires that all property held in connection with a PRPP be held in trust by the administrator on behalf of the plan members. As a result, a PRPP is generally treated as a trust for tax purposes, the administrator is the trustee of that trust, the members are the beneficiaries, and the trust property is the property held in connection with the plan.

New paragraph 147.5(2)(f) requires a PRPP to include a stipulation that no right of a person under the PRPP is capable of being assigned, charged, anticipated, given as security or surrendered. However, the paragraph does allow an assignment (i.e., of all or a portion of a member's account) to a current or former spouse or common-law partner pursuant to a court order or written agreement on the breakdown of marriage or common-law partnership or an assignment by the legal representative of a deceased individual on the distribution of the individual's estate.

New paragraph 147.5(2)(g) requires that all contributions made to a member's account vest immediately and indefeasibly. This requirement is consistent with a requirement in the Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act and is included in order to avoid the complexities inherent in "pension adjustment reversal" rules that otherwise apply to registered pension plans. For example, if employer contributions did not vest immediately but instead could be re-distributed to the accounts of other members or be returned to the employer where an employee that was a plan member left employment before the end of a two-year period, it would be appropriate to have a mechanism that required the employer to calculate how much RRSP room should be restored to the member.

New paragraph 147.5(2)(h) requires that a PRPP permit a member of the PRPP to withdraw an amount from his or her member's account if tax would otherwise be payable by the member on that amount under Part X.1 of the Act.

Paragraph 147.5(2)(i) requires that any amount payable from a member's account after the death of the member be paid as soon as practicable after the member's death.

Paragraph 147.5(2)(j) requires that there be no reason to expect (e.g., based on a review of the application for registration) that the PRPP may become a revocable plan. See the commentary on subsections 147.5(3) and (4) — those subsections list various circumstances under which a PRPP becomes a revocable plan.

Paragraph 147.5(2)(k) allows additional registration conditions to be prescribed by regulation. No such additional conditions are currently contemplated.

Related Provisions: 147.5(3), (4) — Revocable plan; 147.5(7) — Amendments to plan; 172(3)(h) — Appeal of Minister's refusal to accept plan for registration; 204.2(5) — Withdrawal from PRPP allowed to reduce Part X.1 overcontribution tax. See also Related Provisions to 147.5(1)"pooled registered pension plan".

Regulations: 213 (administrator must file information return). None prescribed or proposed for 147.5(2)(k).

(3) Conditions applicable to PRPPs — A pooled registered pension plan becomes a revocable plan at any time that

(a) a contribution is made to the plan other than an amount

(i) paid by a member of the plan,

(ii) paid by an employer or former employer of a member of the plan in respect of the member, or

(iii) transferred to the plan in accordance with any of subsections (20), 146(16), 146.3(14.1), 147(19) and 147.3(1), (4) and (5) to (7);

(b) a contribution is made to the plan in respect of a member after the calendar year in which the member attains 71 years of age, other than an amount described in subparagraph (a)(iii);

(c) a participating employer makes contributions to the plan in a calendar year in respect of a member of the plan in excess of the RRSP dollar limit for the year, except in accordance with a direction by the member;

(d) a distribution is made from the plan other than

(i) a payment of benefits in accordance with subsection (5), or

(ii) a return of contributions made to avoid the revocation of the registration of the plan, to reduce the amount of tax that would otherwise be payable under Part X.1 by a member or to comply with any requirement under this Act;

(e) property is held in connection with the plan that

(i) the administrator knew or ought to have known was a restricted investment for the plan, or

(ii) in the case of a designated pooled pension plan, is a share or debt of, or an interest in, a participating employer of the plan or any person or partnership that does not deal at arm's length with a participating employer, or an interest (or, for civil law, a right) in, or a right to acquire, such a share, debt or interest;

(f) the administrator has not taken reasonable precautions to avoid holding, in connection with the plan, properties (other than excluded investments) that are shares or debts of, or interests in a non-arm's length group (or interests — or, for civil law, rights — in, or rights to acquire, such shares, debts or interests), the total fair market value of which properties is 10% or more of the total fair market value of all property held in connection with the plan, and, for this purpose, a non-arm's length group is a particular person or partnership together with any other person or partnership that does not deal at arm's length or is affiliated with the particular person or partnership;

(g) the administrator borrows money or other property for the purposes of the plan; or

(h) the plan or the administrator does not comply with a prescribed condition.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(3) sets out the circumstances under which the registered status of a PRPP becomes revocable by the Minister of National Revenue (i.e., the PRPP becomes a revocable plan).

Under new paragraph 147.5(3)(a), a PRPP becomes a revocable plan if it accepts a contribution in respect of a member that is not made by the member, made by an employer or former employer of the member, or transferred to the PRPP on behalf of the member under one of the listed transfer provisions.

Under new paragraph 147.5(3)(b), a PRPP becomes a revocable plan if it accepts a contribution in respect of a member after the year in which the member turns 71 years of age (other than one transferred to the PRPP on behalf of the member under one of the listed transfer provisions).

Under new paragraph 147.5(3)(c), a PRPP becomes a revocable plan if a participating employer makes contributions to a PRPP in respect of a plan member that exceed the RRSP dollar limit for the year, except where the member has given a direction for the employer to contribute a larger amount. Since the main method of ensuring that retirement savings contribution limits are respected in relation to PRPPs is the application of the RRSP over-contribution rules in Part X.1 of the Act, which rules apply in relation to individual members, the RRSP dollar limit has been selected as a reasonable safeguard against member over-contributions that would be subject to Part X.1. By giving a direction, an individual who knows that he or she has unused RRSP deduction room that is greater than the year's RRSP dollar limit, could, for example, direct that a large bonus payable by an employer be contributed by the employer to the member's PRPP account.

Under new paragraph 147.5(3)(d), a PRPP becomes a revocable plan if certain distributions are made from the plan. The distributions that cause a PRPP to become revocable are any distributions, other than

- payments of benefits described in subsection 147.5(5) (including any single amount payment that is transferred in accordance with subsection 147.5(20)), or
- payments to a member to permit the member to reduce the amount of tax that would otherwise be payable under Part X.1, certain returns of contributions, and payments made to comply with any requirement under the Act.

For further information, please see the commentary on paragraph 147.5(2)(h) and subsections 147.5(5), (20) and (21).

New paragraphs 147.5(3)(e) and (f) impose restrictions on the property that a PRPP may hold. These investment restrictions are intended to prevent most tax avoidance planning. As well, they provide a limited diversification requirement, without the introduction of an extensive qualified investment regime and the imposition of the associated compliance burden on administrators.

Under new subparagraph 147.5(3)(e)(i), an administrator is precluded from holding a property that the administrator knew or ought to have known was a "restricted investment". This rule is intended to prevent a plan administrator from participating in an arrangement whereby plan members contribute, or cause the PRPP to acquire, interests in a member's business or professional practice, with a view to streaming income to the PRPP. Subparagraph 147.5(3)(e)(i) is not meant to impose an obligation on administrators to make an exhaustive inquiry into the possible connections between a particular plan member and a given investment opportunity; but rather to prevent administrators from participating in arrangements that could be used to circumvent PRPP contribution limits or, in the case of older individuals, to systematically reduce the value of their PRPP accounts in order to avoid or reduce required PRPP withdrawals in retirement.

Example One — Ordinary Course Investing by PRPP

Tom is a graphic designer and has been saving for his retirement by contributing to a PRPP. At the end of 2020, Tom's PRPP savings are $35,000. In 2021, Tom marries Jane. Jane is the daughter of Ed and Sara, a wealthy couple who together directly hold a "significant interest" (i.e., more than 10% of a class of shares) in Pubco. Because of Ed and Sara's shareholdings, Tom and Jane are themselves considered to have a "significant interest" in Pubco. Tom's PRPP holds assets of over $500 million on behalf of thousands of Canadians. Among those assets, Tom's PRPP holds 1% of a class of shares of Pubco that trades publicly.

Although Jane has independent wealth, she also works as a physiotherapist in a small clinic, which has begun offering a PRPP to its employees. Jane has become a member of this PRPP. Jane's PRPP has a bond focus and holds Pubco bonds among its investments.

In these circumstances, the administrators of Tom's and Jane's PRPPs could not reasonably be expected to know about Tom's or Jane's connection to Pubco, nor that the PRPP's holdings of Pubco are restricted investments. Situations like this are meant to be accommodated and would not be considered to violate the rule in new subparagraph 147.5(3)(e)(i). As a result, neither PRPP would face adverse tax consequences, have obligations to make inquiries, nor have other compliance requirements as a result of holding shares or bonds of Pubco.

Example Two — Ordinary Course Investing by PRPP

Ed from Example One is an employee of Pubco — he is its chief executive officer. Pubco begins participating in a PRPP for its 5,000 employees. Pubco makes no special arrangements to exclude employees who are insiders or shareholders of Pubco and they contribute to the PRPP on the same basis as other employees. Pubco's PRPP is administered by a financial institution and has 80 other participating employers. The PRPP administrator has put 5% of the PRPP's assets into a mutual fund-style investing arrangement. The investment managers for the arrangement have discretion to choose investments based on agreed-upon parameters, and they purchase shares of Pubco. The investment managers have no knowledge of the membership of any of the PRPPs that are invested in the arrangement. Neither the PRPP administrator nor the investment managers could be expected to know that a member of the PRPP has a significant interest in Pubco. The PRPP would therefore not face any adverse tax consequences, nor have obligations to make inquiries or other compliance requirements as a result of holding the indirect interest in Pubco.

Example Three — Tax planned Arrangement

An individual approaches a PRPP administrator on behalf of a group of clients. The individual is promoting an investment strategy for PRPPs. He recommends that the PRPP acquire shares of classes F through Z of Acme Corporation. He indicates that if the PRPP acquires these shares: a) they will earn returns of 8–15% annually, depending on the class; and b) he will bring the administrator a new group of PRPP clients. An administrator of a PRPP is expected to recognize that unusual promotions of this nature may involve restricted investments. An administrator who acquired, on behalf of a PRPP, shares of classes F through Z of Acme Corporation, which in fact turned out to be restricted investments for the PRPP, without further inquiry into the financing and ownership of Acme Corporation, "ought to have known" that these investments were restricted investments for the PRPP.

Example 4 — Tax-planned Arrangement

A nationwide association that represents the interests of employees and self-employed individuals who work in a particular industry (for example, providing professional services) approaches a PRPP administrator about the possibility of establishing a PRPP for members of the association. The association indicates that it is interested in a PRPP that focuses on investing in the particular industry. Under these circumstances, it appears that many potential investments would be "restricted investments". Therefore, a failure by the administrator to make inquiries regarding whether any particular investment is restricted together with the acquisition of a restricted investment would be inconsistent with the administrator's obligations under subparagraph 147.5(3)(e)(i).

For further information, please see the commentary on the definition "restricted investment" and on new subsection 147.5(29).

New subparagraph 147.5(3)(e)(ii) applies only to "designated pooled pension plans" as defined in subsection 147.5(1). If a plan is a designated pooled pension plan, it will not be allowed to hold any investment in a participating employer or in a person or partnership that does not deal at arm's length with a participating employer. This rule is intended to prevent self-dealing arrangements such as the deduction by an employer of PRPP contributions, the value of which is returned to it in the form of an investment in the employer or a person or partnership that does not deal at arm's length with the employer. It is expected that PRPPs will generally have a large number of arm's length participants and that few PRPPs will be designated pooled pension plans. As a result, it is anticipated that this rule will rarely apply.

Under new subparagraph 147.5(3)(f), a PRPP becomes a revocable plan if, in general terms, its administrator fails to take reasonable precautions to avoid holding more than 10% of its assets in a particular "non-arm's length group". A non-arm's length group is a particular person or partnership, together with all other persons or partnerships that do not deal at arm's length, or are affiliated, with the particular person or partnership. Like subparagraph 147.5(3)(e)(i), this rule is not meant to impose an obligation on an administrator to make exhaustive inquiries into the potential linkages between various businesses that present themselves as investment opportunities for PRPPs. Instead, it is intended to prevent a PRPP from pursuing a policy of concentrating a large portion of its assets in investments in a single enterprise or non-arm's length group of enterprises.

Under new subparagraph 147.5(3)(g), a PRPP becomes a revocable plan if it borrows money or other property for the purposes of the plan. This requirement is intended to prevent a PRPP from borrowing (for example, from the administrator or a person related to a plan member) in order to increase the total assets under management for the benefit of plan members. Such an arrangement could be used as part of an arrangement to effectively circumvent PRPP contribution limits by earning investment returns on behalf of PRPP members on money borrowed at favourable interest rates.

(4) Non-payment of minimum amount — A PRPP becomes a revocable plan at the beginning of a calendar year if the total amount distributed from a member's account under the PRPP in the calendar year is less than the amount that would be the minimum amount for the calendar year under subsection 8506(5) of the Income Tax Regulations if the member's account were an account under a money purchase provision of a registered pension plan.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(4) sets out an additional circumstance where the registered status of a pooled registered pension plan becomes revocable by the Minister of National Revenue.

Under new subsection 147.5(4), a PRPP becomes a revocable plan if it fails to pay out the required minimum amount from a member's account for the year, determined as if the member's account were an account under a money purchase provision of a registered pension plan (RPP). That is, a PRPP that provides "variable benefits" is effectively required to pay out the same minimum amount to plan members who have attained 71 years of age as it would be if it were a defined contribution RPP that provided variable benefits.

(5) Permissible benefits — The following benefits may be provided under a pooled pension plan:

(a) the payment of benefits (in this section referred to as "variable benefits") to a member that would be in accordance with paragraph 8506(1)(e.1) of the Income Tax Regulations if the benefits were provided under a money purchase provision of a registered pension plan; and

(b) the payment of a single amount from the member's account.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(5) specifies the types of benefits that may be provided by a PRPP. In general terms, the only types of benefits that can be provided directly through a PRPP are "variable benefits" (as described in paragraph 8506(1)(e.1) of the Regulations, as if the benefits were being provided under the money purchase provision of an RPP) or the payment of a "single amount" (as defined in new subsection 147.5(1)).

(6) Additional conditions — The Minister may, at any time, impose reasonable conditions, in writing, applicable with respect to PRPPs, a class of PRPPs or a particular PRPP.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(6) allows the Minister of National Revenue to impose additional conditions on PRPPs in general, a class of PRPPs (for example, designated pooled pension plans) or a particular PRPP. This provision is equivalent to subsection 147.1(5), which provides the Minister with essentially the same power in relation to RPPs.

(7) Acceptance of amendments — The Minister shall not accept an amendment to a PRPP unless

(a) application for the acceptance is made in prescribed manner by the administrator of the PRPP; and

(b) the amendment and the PRPP as amended comply with the registration conditions specified in subsection (2).

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(7) provides that in order for an amendment to a PRPP to be accepted by the Minister of National Revenue, an application must be made in prescribed manner by the administrator and both the amendment and the PRPP as amended must comply with the registration conditions in subsection 147.5(2).

Related Provisions: 172(3)(i) — Appeal of Minister's refusal to accept amendment.

(8) Trust not taxable — No tax is payable under this Part by a trust governed by a PRPP on its taxable income for a taxation year, except that, if at any time in the year, it carries on a business, tax is payable under this Part by the trust on the amount that would be its taxable income for the year if it had no income or losses from sources other than the business, and for this purpose,

(a) all capital gains and capital losses from the disposition of property held in connection with the business are deemed to be income or losses, as the case may be, from the business; and

(b) the trust's income is to be computed without reference to subsections 104(6), (19) and (21).

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(8) creates a tax exemption for income earned by a PRPP. This exemption is subject to an exception in relation to businesses carried on by a PRPP. A PRPP that carries on a business is subject to tax on its income from that business and, for this purpose, paragraphs (a) and (b) provide special rules for calculating that income. In particular, paragraph (a) requires that gains and losses from the disposition of property held in the business be reported on income account, and paragraph (b) prevents the PRPP from using trust rules to allocate amounts to plan members.

Related Provisions: 149(1)(u.3) — No tax on PRPP; 253.1 — Limited partner not considered to carry on business of partnership.

(9) Obligations of administrator — The administrator of a PRPP shall exercise the care, diligence and skill of a reasonably prudent trustee to minimize the possibility that the registration of the PRPP may be revoked other than at the request of the administrator.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(9) requires that the administrator of a PRPP exercise the care, diligence and skill of a reasonably prudent person to minimize the possibility that the registration of the plan maybe be revoked by the Minister of National Revenue. If the administrator fails to comply with this obligation, the administrator will be subject to a penalty under subsection 162(7) of $25 for each day that the failure continues (subject to a $100 minimum and a $2,500 maximum).

(10) Employer contributions deductible — There may be deducted in computing a taxpayer's income for a taxation year, the total of all amounts each of which is a contribution made by the taxpayer in the year or within 120 days after the end of the year to a PRPP in respect of the taxpayer's employees or former employees to the extent that the contribution

(a) was made in accordance with the PRPP as registered and in respect of periods before the end of the year; and

(b) was not deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for a preceding taxation year.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(10) provides a deduction to an employer for its contributions to a PRPP in respect of its employees (or former employees). An employer contribution to a PRPP is deductible in computing the employer's income for a taxation year if the contribution is made in the year or within 120 days after the end of the year in respect of periods before the end of the year, is made in accordance with PRPP as registered, and was not deducted by the employer in computing its income for a previous year.

For further information, please see the related commentary on new paragraph 147.5(3)(b), which limits an employer's annual contribution in respect of each plan member to the RRSP dollar limit for the year (as defined in subsection 146(1)), except as otherwise directed by a member.

Related Provisions: 20(1)(q) — Employer's contribution deductible; 147.5(13) — Distribution from PRPP taxable; 204.2(1.2)I(c) — Employer's contribution included in cumulative excess RRSP amount.

(11) Member contributions — For the purposes of paragraphs 60(j), (j.1) and (l), section 146 (other than subsections (8.3) to (8.7)), paragraphs 146.01(3)(a) and 146.02(3)(a) and Parts X.1 and X.5, a contribution made by a member of a PRPP is deemed to be a premium paid by the member to an RRSP under which the member is the annuitant.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(11) deems an individual's contributions to the individual's account under a PRPP to be a premium paid to an RRSP of the individual for various purposes of the Act. Specifically, as a result of this new deeming provision:

- Paragraph 60(j) will permit an individual to claim a deduction for amounts transferred to an account of the individual under a PRPP where the amount is a lump sum payment out of an unregistered pension plan (attributable to services rendered by the individual or individual's spouse while a non-resident) and the amount was included in the individual's income under subparagraph 56(1)(a)(i).
- Paragraph 60(j.1) will provide a deduction, up to the limit specified under that paragraph, for the portion of a retiring allowance received by an individual that is contributed to a PRPP.
- Paragraph 60(l) will permit a qualified individual to claim a deduction for a specified portion of income received from retirement savings vehicles that are contributed to the individual's PRPP account. Note, however, that new subsections 147.5(20) and (21) allow a tax-deferred rollover for "qualifying survivors" without recourse to paragraph 60(l) deductions.
- References in section 146 to "premiums paid" are deemed to include contributions made to a PRPP. For example, subsections 146(5) and (5.1) will permit an individual to claim a deduction for contributions made to the individual's PRPP account.
- Pursuant to paragraphs 146.01(3)(a) and 146.02(3)(a), it will be possible to designate payments to a PRPP as repayments of amounts withdrawn under the Home Buyers' Plan or the Lifelong Learning Plan, subject to the conditions specified in those paragraphs, and if the PRPP permits such payments.
- For the purposes of applying the Part X.1 tax on non-deductible contributions to RRSPs, a PRPP member's contributions to his or her account are deemed to be contributions made to an RRSP. For further information, see the related commentary on section 204.02, which describes the application of Part X.1 to employer contributions made to PRPPs. For further information on the rules applicable to employer contributions to a PRPP member's account, please also see the commentary on paragraphs 6(1)(a), 20(1)(q), and 147.5(2)(g) and (3)(c).
- It will be possible for the Part X.5 tax on "accumulated income payments" from registered education savings plans to be reduced to the extent that the recipient of such a payment makes a deductible contribution to a PRPP for the year in which the payment is received.

(12) Member's account — For the purposes of paragraph 18(1)(u), subparagraph (a)(i) of the definition "excluded right or interest" in subsection 128.1(10), paragraph 146(8.2)(b), subsection 146(8.21), paragraphs 146(16)(a) and (b), subparagraph 146(21)(a)(i), paragraph (b) of the definition "excluded premium" in subsection 146.01(1), paragraph (c) of the definition "excluded premium" in subsection 146.02(1), subsections 146.3(14) and 147(19) and section 147.3, and of regulations made under 147.1(18), a member's account under a PRPP is deemed to be a registered retirement savings plan under which the member is the annuitant.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(12) deems an individual's account under a PRPP to be an RRSP under which the individual is the annuitant for various purposes of the Act and the Income Tax Regulations. As a result of this new deeming provision:

- Paragraph 18(1)(u) will prohibit an individual from claiming deductions for expenses related to services (e.g., administration services) provided in relation to the individual's account under a PRPP.
- An individual's benefit entitlement under a PRPP will be an "excluded right or interest" as defined in subsection 128.1(10) and therefore will be exempted from the deemed disposition rules that otherwise apply under section 128.1 when an individual immigrates to or emigrates from Canada.
- An amount transferred from a PRPP to an RRSP will be an "excluded premium" under subsections 146.01(1) and 146.02(1) that does not qualify as a repayment under the Home Buyers' Plan rules or Lifelong Learning Plan rules.

- Paragraph 146(8.2)(b) will provide an offsetting deduction where an individual withdraws a taxable amount from a PRPP that relates to the individual's non-deductible over-contributions to the individual's PRPP account.
- If over-contributions to a PRPP are subsequently withdrawn and deducted under subsection 146(8.2), those contributions, as a consequence of subsection 146(8.21), will be subsequently disregarded for the purposes of the attribution rules in subsections 146(8.3) and 146.3(5.1).
- Paragraphs 146(16)(a) and (b), subsections 146.3(14) and 147(19) and section 147.3 will permit direct transfers of amounts to a PRPP from any of an RRSP, a RRIF, a deferred profit sharing plan or an RPP.
- Under Parts LXXXIII and LXXXV of the Income Tax Regulations, transfers to and from an RRSP will be deemed to include transfers to and from a PRPP. For example, for purposes of past service pension adjustment regulations, a transfer to a PRPP would be taken into account in determining an "excess money purchase transfer" under subsection 8303(7.1) of the Regulations or a "money purchase transfer" under paragraph 8304(5.1)(g) of the Regulations.

(13) Taxable amounts — There shall be included in computing the income of a member of a PRPP for a taxation year the total of all amounts each of which is a distribution made in the year from the member's account under the PRPP, other than an amount described in subsection (21) or distributed after the death of the member.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(13) is the general rule that requires amounts distributed out of a member's account under a PRPP to be included in computing the member's income for the year of the distribution. Subsection 147.5(13) does not apply in respect of amounts distributed after the death of a member or amounts described in subsection 147.5(21), the rule that specifies the tax consequences of transfers described in subsection 147.5(20).

In cases where new subsection 147.5(15) applies, the surviving spouse or common-law partner (i.e., the successor member) effectively becomes the new member and takes over the deceased member's rights in relation to the PRPP account. Amounts received by the successor member after the death of the original member are included in the successor member's income under subsection 147.5(13). For further information regarding subsection 147.5(15), please see the commentary on new subsections 147.5(14) to (19).

Subsection 147.5(14) applies in cases where there is no successor member and, subject to new subsection 147.5(16), deems a distribution to have occurred from the PRPP account immediately before the member's death. In other words, even though subsection 147.5(13) only applies to amounts distributed before death, this deeming rule can cause an amount to be included in the deceased member's income. The result of the interaction of these rules in the context of the death of a PRPP member is that an income inclusion for the terminal year of a PRPP member will only occur to the extent that there is neither a successor member nor a transfer of PRPP property to a "qualifying survivor" under subsection 147.5(16) and in respect of amounts up to the fair market value of the PRPP account on death.

For further information, please see the commentary on those provisions below.

Related Provisions: 56(1)(z.3) — Inclusion in income from other sources; 204.2(1.2)(a) — Benefits reduce cumulative excess RRSP amount; 204.2(5) — Withdrawal from PRPP allowed to reduce Part X.1 overcontribution tax; Reg. 100(1)"remuneration"(b)(i) — No source withholdings on PRPP distribution that is not taxed.

(14) Treatment on death — no successor member — If a member of a PRPP dies and there is no successor member in respect of the deceased member's account under the PRPP, an amount, equal to the amount by which the fair market value of all property held in connection with the account immediately before the death exceeds the total of all amounts distributed from the account that are described in subsection (16), is deemed to have been distributed from the account immediately before the death.

Technical Notes: New subsections 147.5(14) to (19) provide rules that will apply on the death of a PRPP member. New subsections 147.5(20) to (22), which govern PRPP transfers, are also relevant in some situations involving the death of a PRPP member. In general terms, the tax results contemplated under the proposed rules are similar to those that apply under the existing RRSP/RRIF rules.

When a member of a PRPP dies, new subsection 147.5(14) provides that all the property held in the member's account is deemed to have been distributed immediately before the death. Since distributions from a member's account are included in the member's income under subsection 147.5(13), the effect of this rule is to include the value of the deceased member's account in income for his or her last taxation year (unless the exception in subsection 147.5(16) with respect to a "qualifying survivor" applies). For further information, please see the commentary on the definition "qualifying survivor" in subsection 147.5(1) and on subsections 147.5(15) to (19).

Related Provisions: 152(6)(f.3) — Reassessment to allow loss carryback; Reg. 100(1)"remuneration"(b)(i) — No source withholdings on PRPP distribution deemed made under 147.5(14).

(15) Treatment on death — successor member — If a member of a PRPP dies and there is a successor member in respect of the deceased member's account under the PRPP,

(a) the account ceases to be an account of the deceased member at the time of the death;

(b) the successor member is, after the time of the death, deemed to hold the account as a member of the PRPP; and

(c) the successor member is deemed to be a separate member in respect of any other account under the PRPP that the successor member holds.

Technical Notes: In order to provide flexibility without creating unintended tax outcomes, a number of rules are included. One of the basic objectives is to have relatively simple rules applicable to a large number of common situations. For example, two methods are provided for leaving PRPP assets to a surviving spouse on the death of a PRPP member.

Surviving spouse or common-law partner

If a surviving spouse or common-law partner acquires all of the deceased member's rights under the PRPP as "successor member", new subsection 147.5(15) will apply and none of the other succession rules are applicable. If, instead, a surviving spouse or common-law partner is not a successor member, new subsection 147.5(16) applies. Under subsection 147.5(16), a PRPP distribution to a "qualifying survivor" (which includes a spouse or common-law partner) is included in the qualifying survivor's income, except to the extent that the distribution is transferred in accordance with new subsections 147.5(20) and (21). These provisions provide a number of options for surviving spouses and common-law partners, including transferring the distribution to another PRPP account or to an RRSP. For more information regarding tax-deferred transfers, please see the commentary on subsections 147.5(20) to (22).

Other "qualifying survivor" — financially-dependent child or grandchild

In addition to surviving spouses or common-law partners, the other category of "qualifying survivor" is a financially-dependent child or grandchild. A distribution from a deceased's member's PRPP to a financially-dependent child or grandchild is generally included in the child or grandchild's income under new subsection 147.5(16). If the child or grandchild is financially dependent due to infirmity then, as is the case for surviving spouses or common-law partners, a tax-deferred transfer may be available under new subsections 147.5(20) and (21).

Infirm financially-dependent child or grandchild; child under age 18

Amendments to paragraph 60(l) and to subsection 60.02(1) permit deductions in computing income in relation to transfers in certain circumstances. For further information, please see the commentary on those amended provisions.

(16) Qualifying survivor — If, as a consequence of the death of a member of a PRPP, an amount is distributed in a taxation year from the member's account under the PRPP to, or on behalf of, a qualifying survivor, the amount shall be included in computing the survivor's income for the year, except to the extent that it is an amount described in subsection (21).

Technical Notes: See under 147.5(15).

Related Provisions: 56(1)(z.3) — Inclusion in income from other sources; 147.5(18) — Post-death decrease in value.

(17) Post-death increase in value — There shall be included in computing the income for a taxation year of a taxpayer who is not a qualifying survivor in relation to a member of a PRPP, the total of all amounts each of which is an amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount of a distribution made in the year from the member's account under the PRPP as a consequence of the member's death to, or on behalf of, the taxpayer, and

B is an amount designated by the administrator of the PRPP not exceeding the lesser of

(a) the amount of the distribution, and

(b) the amount by which the fair market value of all property held in connection with the account immediately before the death exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is the value of B in respect of any other distribution made from the account.

Technical Notes: As a consequence of the rules described above, most amounts distributed from the account of a deceased PRPP member will either be included in the income of the deceased member or a qualifying survivor, or will benefit from a tax-deferred transfer. New subsection 147.5(17) creates an income inclusion in the hands of the recipient of a distribution for amounts that have not been included in the income of any taxpayer under another rule and that have not been transferred in accordance with new subsections 147.5(20) to (22).

The amount of the income inclusion is determined by the formula A - B. Variable A is the amount being distributed from the account under the PRPP to the taxpayer. Variable B, which will in many cases reduce the income inclusion to nil, is the amount designated by the administrator in relation to the distribution. The amount designated by the administrator cannot exceed the lesser of two amounts. The first amount is the amount being distributed. The second amount is the amount by which the fair market value of all property held in the account immediately before death exceeds the total amounts designated for variable B in relation to all other distributions.

For example, assume that a PRPP member, Dave, directs by will that the first $100,000 of his PRPP account should be transferred to his wife, Emily, on his death. The remainder is left to his sister, Joanne. When Dave dies, his PRPP account has a fair market value of $150,000. As described above, $100,000 will be included in Emily's income under subsection 147.5(16), except to the extent that she transfers it in accordance with subsections 147.5(20) to (22). The remaining $50,000 will be included in Dave's income for his last taxation year. However, there are some delays in relation to the estate administration and by the time Dave's executor is ready to direct a distribution of the remainder of the account to Joanne, the remaining assets in the account are worth $62,000. The administrator applies the formula in subsection 147.5(17) as follows:

- On the first distribution (i.e., the distribution to Emily), variable A is $100,000 — the amount distributed. Variable B is also $100,000, because the amount distributed was less than the fair market value of the plan at Dave's death, and there are no other distributions to account for under paragraph (b) of variable B.
- On the second distribution (i.e., the distribution to Joanne), variable A is $62,000 — the amount distributed. Variable B is $150,000 minus the total of all amounts included in variable B in relation to all other distributions. Therefore, variable B is $150,000 minus $100,000 (the amount of variable B in relation to the distribution to Emily) or $50,000.
- In respect of the distribution to Joanne, the administrator designates $50,000 as the "tax-free" (i.e., previously recognized) portion of the distribution and Joanne includes $12,000 in her income for the year in which she receives the distribution, which represents the increase in value of the PRPP account after Dave's death.

Subsection 147.5(17) is worded in this way in order to ensure that it operates appropriately, even in situations of multiple distributions and fluctuating asset values. In the context of multiple distributions, the administrator of the PRPP is left with some flexibility to allocate tax consequences among beneficiaries of the estate. It is assumed that administrators will do so reasonably and in proportion to the various beneficiaries' interests in the estate.

A similar rule in new subsection 147.5(18) creates a deduction, available in computing the income of the deceased member, to the extent that the total amount distributed from the PRPP account, once the account is wound up, is less than the total amounts included in income or transferred under the other rules. New subsection 147.5(19) limits the availability of this deduction in circumstances where the last distribution occurs after the end of the year following the year in which the member dies. In those circumstances, the deduction is available only if it is approved by the Minister of National Revenue. These rules are very similar to existing subsections 146(8.92) and (8.93), which apply in respect of post-death RRSP losses.

Related Provisions: 56(1)(z.3) — Inclusion in income from other sources; 147.5(18) — Post-death decrease in value; 212(1)(h)(ii) — Amount designated is exempt from non-resident withholding tax; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

(18) Post-death decrease in value — There may be deducted in computing the income of a member of a PRPP for the taxation year in which the member dies, an amount not exceeding the amount determined, after all amounts payable from the member's account under the PRPP have been distributed, by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of the account

(a) included in the member's income under subsection (13) because of the application of subsection (14),

(b) included in the income of another taxpayer under subsection (16) or (17), or

(c) transferred in accordance with subsection (20) in circumstances described in subparagraph (20)(b)(iii); and

B is the total of all distributions made from the account after the member's death.

Technical Notes: See under 147.5(17).

Related Provisions: 146(8.92) — Parallel rule for RRSP; 146.3(6.3) — Parallel rule for RRIF; 147.5(19) — Exception; 152(6)(f.3) — Reassessment to allow loss carryback; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

(19) Subsec. (18) not applicable — Except where the Minister has waived in writing the application of this subsection with respect to all or any portion of the amount determined in subsection (18) in respect of a member's account under a PRPP, that subsection does not apply if the last distribution from the account was made after the end of the calendar year following the year in which the member died.

Technical Notes: See under 147.5(17).

(20) Transfer of amounts — An amount is transferred from a member's account under a PRPP in accordance with this subsection if the amount

(a) is a single amount;

(b) is transferred on behalf of an individual who

(i) is the member,

(ii) is a spouse or common-law partner or former spouse or common-law partner of the member and who is entitled to the amount under a decree, order or judgment of a competent tribunal, or under a written agreement, relating to a division of property between the member and the individual, in settlement of rights arising out of, or on a breakdown of, their marriage or common-law partnership, or

(iii) is entitled to the amount as a consequence of the death of the member and immediately before the death,

(A) was a spouse or common-law partner of the member, or

(B) was a child or grandchild of the member who was financially dependent on the member for support because of mental or physical infirmity; and

(c) is transferred directly to

(i) the individual's account under the PRPP,

(ii) another PRPP in respect of the individual,

(iii) a registered pension plan for the benefit of the individual,

(iv) a registered retirement savings plan or registered retirement income fund under which the individual is the annuitant, or

(v) a licensed annuities provider to acquire a qualifying annuity for the individual.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(20) provides conditions relating to the transfer of an amount from a PRPP member's account to certain other registered vehicles or for the purchase of a qualifying annuity. If those conditions are satisfied, subsection 147.5(20) allows the transfer to be made on a tax-deferred basis.

New paragraph 147.5(20)(a) requires that the amount be transferred in a "single amount", which is defined in subsection 147.5(1) as an amount that is not part of a series of periodic payments.

New paragraph 147.5(20)(b) sets out the individuals on whose behalf an amount from a member's account may be transferred:

- the member;
- a spouse or common-law partner or former spouse or common-law partner who is entitled to the amount as a result of a division of property after the breakdown of the marriage or common-law partnership;
- the spouse or common-law partner at the date of the member's death; or
- a child or grandchild of the member who was financially dependent on the member for support by reason of mental or physical infirmity.

New paragraph 147.5(20)(c) requires that the single amount from the PRPP account be transferred to the individual's account under a PRPP or RPP, to an RRSP or RRIF of the individual, or to a licensed annuities provider to acquire a "qualifying annuity" for the individual. For further information, please see the commentary on the definition "qualifying annuity" in subsection 147.5(1).

For information about rollovers to purchase a term annuity (to age 18) on behalf of a minor child who was financially dependent on a deceased PRPP member, please see the commentary on paragraph (60)(l).

Related Provisions: 146(1.1) — Where child presumed not financially dependent for 147.5(20)(b)(iii)(B); 146(21.2) — Saskatchewan Pension Plan deemed RRSP for purposes of 147.5(20)(c); 147.5(21) — Effect of 147.5(20) applying; 147.5(22) — Where amount transferred to acquire qualifying annuity; 204.2(1.2)(a)(iii) — Transfer under 147.5(20) excluded from cumulative excess RRSP amount; Reg. 8502(b)(iv) — RPP may accept transfer.

(21) Taxation of transfers — If subsection (20) applies to an amount transferred from a member's account under a PRPP on behalf of an individual,

(a) the amount shall not, by reason only of that transfer, be included in computing the income of the individual; and

(b) no deduction may be made under any provision of this Act in respect of the amount in computing the income of any taxpayer.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(21) provides for a tax-deferred transfer of an amount out of a PRPP if the transfer satisfies the conditions in subsection 147.5(20). Specifically, subsection 147.5(21) provides that such an amount transferred on behalf of an individual shall not be included in computing the individual's income and that no taxpayer may claim a deduction in respect of the amount.

Related Provisions: 212(1)(h)(iii.1)(A), 212(1)(h)(iv.1) — Transfer under 147.5(21) excluded from non-resident withholding tax on pension benefits.

(22) Taxation of qualifying annuity — If an amount is transferred in accordance with subsection (20) to acquire a qualifying annuity, there shall be included — under this section and not under any other provision of this Act — in computing an individual's income for a taxation year any amount received by the individual during the year out of or under the annuity or as proceeds from a disposition in respect of the annuity.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(22) governs the taxation of payments from a qualifying annuity acquired with funds transferred from a member's account under a PRPP in accordance with subsection 147.5(20). Any payments under the annuity contract are included in the recipient's income for the year in which they are received (there are no immediate tax consequences on the acquisition of the qualifying annuity). If the individual disposes of (e.g., commutes) the annuity, the proceeds from that disposition of the annuity are included in the individual's income for the year of disposition.

For further information, please see the commentary on subsection 147.5(20) and on the definition "qualifying annuity" in subsection 147.5(1).

(23) Notice of intent — The Minister may give notice (in subsections (24) and (25) referred to as a "notice of intent") to an administrator of a PRPP in writing that the Minister intends to revoke the registration of the plan as a PRPP if

(a) the plan does not comply with the conditions for registration in subsection (2);

(b) the plan is not administered in accordance with the terms of the plan as registered;

(c) the plan becomes a revocable plan;

(d) a condition imposed under subsection (6) that applies with respect to the plan is not complied with; or

(e) registration of the plan under the Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act or a similar law of a province is refused or revoked.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(23) provides that, as a first step in revoking the registration of a PRPP, the Minister of National Revenue must notify the administrator of the PRRP in writing of the Minister's intent to revoke the plan's registration as of a specified date. A notice of intent may be given if the Minister has determined that:

- the plan does not comply with registration conditions specified in new subsection 147.5(2);
- the plan is not administered in accordance with the terms of the plan as registered by the Minister;
- the plan is a revocable plan, as determined by any of the conditions specified in new subsections 147.5(3) or (4);
- a condition that has been imposed on the plan by the Minister (see new subsection (147.5(6)) is not complied with; or
- registration of the plan under the Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act or a similar law of a province (that requires registration under that law) has been refused or revoked.

(24) Date of revocation — The notice of intent shall specify the date on which revocation of a PRPP is to be effective, which date shall not be earlier than the earliest date on which one of the events described in subsection (23) occurs.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(24) requires that a notice of intent to revoke the registration of a PRPP must specify the date on which the proposed revocation will be effective. That date cannot be earlier than the earliest date on which a condition described in any of paragraphs 147.5(23)(a) to (e) applies to the PRPP. Upon receipt of a notice of intent, the plan administrator or a participating employer may, under amended subsection 172(3), appeal to the Federal Court of Appeal. For further information, see the commentary on subsection 172(3).

(25) Notice of revocation — At any time after 30 days after the day of mailing of the notice of intent to an administrator of a PRPP, the Minister may give notice (in this subsection and in subsection (26) referred to as a "notice of revocation") in writing to the administrator that the registration of the PRPP is revoked as of the date specified in the notice of revocation, which date may not be earlier than the date specified in the notice of intent.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(25) provides that, after the Minister of National Revenue has given a notice of intent to revoke the registration of a PRPP (under subsections 147.5(23) and (24)), the Minister may give a notice that the registration of the PRPP is revoked as of a specified date. That date cannot be earlier than the date stated in the notice of intent. As well, a notice of revocation cannot be given until after 30 days after the notice of intent was given.

(26) Revocation of registration — If the Minister gives a notice of revocation to the administrator of a PRPP, the registration of the PRPP is revoked as of the date specified in the notice of revocation, unless the Federal Court of Appeal or a judge of that Court, on application made at any time before the determination of an appeal pursuant to subsection 172(3), orders otherwise.

Technical Notes: Under new subsection 147.5(26), the registration of a PRPP is revoked as of the date specified in the Minister of National Revenue's notice of revocation given under subsection 147.5(25) unless, upon an application made before the determination of an appeal, the Federal Court of Appeal or a judge of that Court orders otherwise.

(27) Voluntary revocation — If the administrator of a PRPP so requests in writing, the Minister may give notice in writing to the administrator that the registration of the PRPP is revoked as of a specified date, which date may not be earlier than the date specified in the administrator's request.

Technical Notes: If a plan administrator applies for the revocation of the registration of a PRPP, new subsection 147.5(27) allows the Minister of National Revenue to revoke the registration of the PRPP. Where the application of this subsection is the reason for the revocation of the registration of a PRPP, the effective date of the revocation will not be earlier than the date specified in the administrator's request.

However, an administrator's voluntary request for revocation of registration does not prevent the Minister from giving a notice of intent to revoke the registration as of a date earlier than the date requested by the administrator if any of the conditions listed in subsection 147.5(23) are applicable at that earlier date. For further information, please see the commentary on subsections 147.5(23) to (26).

(28) Single employer — For the purposes of the definition "designated pooled pension plan" in subsection (1), all employers that are related to each other are deemed to be a single employer and all the structural units of a trade union, including each local, branch, national and international unit, are deemed to be a single employer.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(28) provides a rule, similar to existing rules that apply in the registered pension plan context (see, for example, subsection 8514(2.1) of the Regulations), that specify that all related employers — as well as various structural units of a trade union — are deemed to be a single employer for the purposes of the definition "designated pooled pension plan" in subsection 147.5(1).

(29) Significant interest — For the purposes of the definition "restricted investment" in subsection (1), a member of a pooled pension plan has a significant interest in a corporation, trust or partnership at any time if, at that time,

(a) in the case of a corporation, the member is a specified shareholder of the corporation; and

(b) in the case of a partnership or trust,

(i) the member is a specified unitholder of the partnership or the trust, as the case may be, or

(ii) the total fair market value of the member's interests in the partnership or the trust, as the case may be, together with all interests in the partnership or the trust held by persons or partnerships with whom the member does not deal at arm's length or is affiliated, is 10% or more of the fair market value of all interests in the partnership or the trust.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(29) provides the meaning of "significant interest", which is relevant in determining whether an investment is a restricted investment for a pooled pension plan. A member has a significant interest in a corporation if the member is a "specified shareholder" (within the meaning assigned by subsection 248(1)). A member has a significant interest in a partnership or trust if the member is a "specified unitholder" (within the meaning assigned to that term in the new definition added to subsection 248(1)) or if the member's interest in the partnership or trust is worth more than 10% of the total fair market value of all the interests in the partnership or trust.

(30) Regulations — other — The Governor in Council may make regulations

(a) prescribing conditions applicable to administrators;

(b) requiring administrators to file information returns respecting pooled pension plans;

(c) enabling the Minister to require any person to provide the Minister with information for the purposes and provisions of this Act relating to PRPPs; and

(d) generally to carry out the purposes and provisions of this Act relating to PRPPs.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.5(30) provides a regulation-making power to the Governor in Council. In particular, it authorizes regulations:

- prescribing conditions applicable to plan administrators;
- requiring information returns;
- allowing the Minister to require any person to provide information for the purpose of administering the provisions relating to PRPPs; and
- generally to carry out the purposes and provisions of the Act relating to PRPPs and the determination and reporting of specified amounts.

Application: The December 14, 2011 draft legislation, s. 12, will add s. 147.5, in force or deemed in force on the day of the coming into force of S.C. 2012, c. 16 (Bill C-25, Royal Assent June 18, 2012). Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act.

Dept. of Finance news release 2012-067, June 12, 2012: Passage of Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act a Positive Step Towards Better Retirement Savings Options for Canadians

The Honourable Ted Menzies, Minister of State (Finance), today marked the passage through the House of Commons of Bill C-25: the Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act in Ottawa [non-tax measures — ed.].

"The Harper Government is committed to helping Canadians save for retirement," said Minister Menzies. "With today's passage of the Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act, we have taken a positive step towards meeting our goal of offering better retirement savings options for Canadians."

At the December 2010 meeting of Canada's finance ministers, there was unanimous agreement to pursue a framework for Pooled Registered Pension Plans (PRPPs). PRPPs are an effective and appropriate way to help bridge the existing gaps in the retirement system and provide a viable retirement savings option for Canadians who currently do not have access to a workplace pension plan.

The PRPP framework will be fully in place across Canada once Senate approval and provincial enabling legislation occurs. Once operational, PRPPs will offer a new low-cost, easily accessible, privately administered pension option. They will be available to employees — with or without a participating employer — as well as the self-employed.

Under a PRPP, most of the administrative and legal burdens associated with a pension plan will be borne by a qualified third-party administrator. These licensed administrators will be subject to a fiduciary standard of care, which will ensure that funds are invested in the best interests of plan members. PRPPs will also promote pension coverage through automatic enrolment where an employer offers a PRPP.

"Since these plans will involve large pooled funds, plan members will also benefit from the lower investment management costs — in effect, Canadians will be buying in bulk," said Minister Menzies. "Provinces can now easily and seamlessly use the federal legislation passed today as a model for their respective frameworks so that the system can get up and running for Canadians. It is my hope that all provinces will move to implement this viable low-cost pension option for hard-working families without delay."

Dept. of Finance news release 2011-134, Dec. 14, 2011: The Honourable Ted Menzies, Minister of State (Finance), today announced that the Government released for consultation a package of draft legislative proposals for changes to the Income Tax Act and the Income Tax Regulations to accommodate Pooled Registered Pension Plans (PRPPs).

In December 2010, there was unanimous agreement among provinces, territories and the federal government to move forward with the framework for PRPPs. The rules announced today will set the stage for all provinces to introduce legislation to implement PRPPs.

"I want to thank all our provincial partners for their work and engagement on this file," said Minister Menzies. "In particular, Quebec has been among our most engaged partners in crafting an innovative, new and low-cost savings option for those without access to a workplace pension plan."

PRPPs will be a broad-based, low-cost, defined contribution pension vehicle that will be available to employers, employees and self-employed individuals.

"The Government of Quebec welcomes the federal government's decision to quickly make changes to tax legislation to accommodate PRPPs. This announcement will allow us to fulfill our commitment made in the 2011-2012 budget to put in place new voluntary retirement savings plans," said Raymond Bachand, Quebec's Minister of Finance, Minister of Revenue and Minister responsible for the Montréal region.

The PRPP tax rules have been designed to be simple and straightforward and to promote low-cost plans. They will encourage take-up by employers and ultimately, greater pension coverage among Canadians.

The proposed tax rules for PRPPs will apply to both federally and provincially regulated PRPPs and will operate alongside the Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act.

The attached backgrounder outlines the key measures proposed in today's package, while explanatory notes provide further details.

Interested parties may submit comments on the package until February 14, 2012. The Government will then proceed with legislation at an early opportunity to implement the amendments, taking into account comments received.

Backgrounder: Key Measures Included in Income Tax Legislative Proposals in Respect of Pooled Registered Pension Plans

The income tax rules are being amended to accommodate Pooled Registered Pension Plans (PRPPs) in a manner consistent with the objective that such plans fit within the basic system of rules and limits for Registered Pension Plans (RPPs) and Registered Retirement Savings Plans (RRSPs). The proposals released today reflect the key objective that the rules for PRPPs be simple and straightforward to promote low-cost plans, take-up by employers and pension coverage among Canadians.

The proposed tax rules for PRPPs will apply to both federally and provincially regulated PRPPs and will operate alongside the Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act, which will govern federally regulated PRPPs. The PRPP Act was introduced in Parliament on November 17, 2011.

The key elements of the proposed PRPP tax rules are summarized below:

- An eligible PRPP administrator [147.5(1)"administrator" — ed.] will be defined as a corporation resident in Canada that is licensed to administer a PRPP under the PRPP legislation of Canada or the similar legislation of a province.
- There will be no employer-employee relationship required for participation in a PRPP [147.5(2) — ed.]. This will permit employees whose employer has no involvement with a plan, as well as self-employed individuals, to participate in a PRPP.
- Contributions to a PRPP made by employers, employees and self-employed individuals will generally be deductible for tax purposes [147.5(10), (11) — ed.]. All PRPP contributions for a year made by and on behalf of a PRPP member will be limited to the member's available RRSP contribution limit for the year [147.5(11) — ed.].
- To help prevent situations where large employer contributions might create over-contributions for a PRPP member in relation to the member's RRSP limit, annual employer contributions to a PRPP in respect of an employee will be limited to a maximum of the RRSP dollar limit for the year, unless the employee directs the employer to contribute more than this amount [147.5(3)(c) — ed.].
- Employers will be permitted to make direct contributions to a PRPP in respect of an employee [147.5(3)(a)(ii) — ed.], which will be excluded from salaried compensation (like employer contributions to an RPP) [6(1)(a)(i) — ed.]. Immediate vesting of employer PRPP contributions will be required [147.5(2)(g) — ed.]. There will be no requirement for an employer to make a minimum contribution to a PRPP. Since PRPP contributions will be made under a member's available RRSP limit, there will be no requirement for an employer to report pension adjustments in respect of employer and employee contributions, as is required in respect of employer and employee contributions to an RPP.

- There will be no "qualified investment" rules for PRPPs. Instead, some general rules will apply to ensure that investments are reasonably diversified [147.5(3)(f) — ed.] and do not present risks of self-dealing [147.5(1)"restricted investment", 147.5(3)(e) — ed.]. For large PRPPs, the administrator will be required to avoid intentionally acquiring investments in which a member has a significant interest. They will also be required to take reasonable precautions to avoid concentrating more than 10% of plan assets in a particular business (or non-arm's length group of businesses) [147.5(3)(f) — ed.]. Since there are no legislated restrictions on the size of a PRPP, small PRPPs (generally those with fewer than 10 unrelated employers participating [147.5(1)"designated pooled pension plan" — ed.]) will be required to comply with those two rules, and to avoid holding investments in participating employers in connection with the PRPP [147.5(3)(e)(ii) — ed.].

- The existing transfer rules for defined contribution RPPs (governing transfers between RPPs and between an RPP and an RRSP, Registered Retirement Income Fund (RRIF) and certain other registered plans), with some exceptions, will generally apply to a PRPP [147.5(20) — ed.].

  [Depending on the specific locking-in requirements for PRPPs under the federal PRPP Act and similar provincial legislation, locking-in requirements may apply to an RRSP or RRIF that receives a transfer of PRPP funds.]

- Pension payment or decumulation options will be limited to those currently available to defined contribution RPPs (that is, the purchase of a life annuity for the member, the transfer of the member's PRPP account funds to an RRSP or RRIF, or the payment of variable benefits (RRIF-type payments) from the member's PRPP account) [147.5(5) — ed.].

- A deceased PRPP member's spouse or common-law partner [147.5(1)"successor member" — ed.] will be permitted to become a successor PRPP member, taking over ownership of the deceased member's PRPP account funds and making ongoing decisions in respect of those funds as a member of the plan [147.5(15) — ed.]. Alternatively, a surviving spouse or common-law partner will be permitted to transfer the funds to his or her own RRSP, RRIF, PRPP account or RPP account, or to use the funds to acquire a qualifying annuity [147.5(20)(b)(iii)(A) — ed.]. These latter options (plus the option of transferring the funds to a Registered Disability Savings Plan (RDSP) to the extent RDSP contribution room is available) will also be permitted for an infirm financially dependent child or grandchild of the deceased member [147.5(20)(b)(iii)(B) — ed.].

In addition, the Goods and Services Tax/Harmonized Sales Tax (GST/HST) rules under the Excise Tax Act will be amended to ensure that PRPPs are subject to the same GST/HST treatment as RPPs. As a result, PRPPs would be treated as investment plans for GST/HST purposes [ETA 149(5)(a) — ed.]. Also, PRPPs with members resident in an HST province and in at least one other province would generally determine their liability for the provincial component of the HST under the special attribution method for selected listed financial institutions [ETA 225.2 — ed.]. It is proposed that amendments to the GST/HST rules under the Excise Tax Act be implemented concurrently with the income tax amendments.

The accompanying explanatory notes provide additional details regarding the proposed legislative amendments to the Income Tax Act.

It is proposed that these changes come into force at the same time as the PRPP Act. The Government intends to introduce legislation in respect of these proposals at an early opportunity.

Dept. of Finance news release 2011-119, Nov. 17, 2011: Harper Government Introduces the Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act

The Honourable Ted Menzies, Minister of State (Finance), and the Honourable Christian Paradis, Minister of Industry, today announced that the Government of Canada is introducing changes to Canada's pension landscape that will make saving for retirement easier for millions of Canadians.

Legislation was introduced today in Parliament, implementing the federal portion of the Pooled Registered Pension Plan (PRPP) framework. [This was Bill C-25, with only the non-tax changes — ed.] Since PRPPs are particularly applicable to small business, Minister Menzies delivered his remarks at a small radio station without a company pension plan.

"Today marks a major milestone in our efforts to ensure the ongoing strength of Canada's retirement income system by providing a pension option for the many workers, like those here at Canadian Multicultural Radio, who currently do not participate in a company pension plan," said Minister Menzies. "Incredibly, just over 60% of Canadians do not have a workplace pension plan. Canadians work hard to realize their retirement dreams, and PRPPs will offer them a new, low-cost and accessible pension option to help meet their goals."

"We are thrilled at the opportunity to provide our staff with an option for retirement savings," said Thomas Lambert, Chief Executive Officer of Canadian Multicultural Radio. "The PRPP is just the kind of option we've been searching for. With the savings on the administrative costs we can incentivize our staff towards better retirement savings."

PRPPs are the outcome of several years of cooperation, research and consultations by Canada's finance ministers on the best ways to ensure the long-term strength of Canada's retirement income system.

"If you invest in a PRPP you will benefit from lower investment management costs associated with the large scale of these funds," said Minister Menzies. "Essentially, you will be buying in bulk. This will leave you with more cash in your pocket when you retire."

Provincial enabling legislation will need to be introduced for the framework to become fully operational.

"Canadians want their governments to act on their priorities and deliver results on a timely basis, and the PRPP is a prime example of what we can accomplish for Canadians when governments work together," said Minister Paradis. "The Government of Canada is therefore confident that the provincial side of the framework will soon be in place to help Canadians reach their retirement objectives."

In addition, the tax rules for PRPPs are being developed by the Government of Canada and will be released in draft for comment shortly. The PRPP tax rules will apply to both federally and provincially regulated PRPPs.

Backgrounder: How Pooled Registered Pension Plans Will Address Gaps in Canada's Retirement Income System

The Government of Canada has been working with provinces and territories on ways to ensure the ongoing strength of the country's retirement income system.

Their federal-provincial Research Working Group on Retirement Income Adequacy found that some Canadian households, especially modest- and middle-income households, may be at risk of undersaving for retirement.

There are a number of factors that may be contributing to this risk, including declining participation in employer-sponsored Registered Pension Plans (RPPs). The proportion of working Canadians with such plans has declined from 41 per cent in 1991 to 34 per cent in 2007.

Some Canadians may also be failing to take advantage of the discretionary savings opportunities offered to them through individual structures like Registered Retirement Savings Plans (RRSPs). Participation in RRSPs reached a peak of 45 per cent of the labour force in 1997 before levelling off to 39 per cent in 2008.

While aggregate RPP/RRSP participation rates for middle- and higher-income earners are quite high, the research indicated that a portion of Canadians may not be saving enough.

In December 2010, federal, provincial and territorial Finance Ministers agreed to move forward to introduce a new type of broad-based privately administered pension arrangement — called Pooled Registered Pension Plans, or PRPPs — as an effective and appropriate way to help bridge existing gaps in the retirement system.

PRPPs will address this gap in the retirement income system by providing a new, accessible, large-scale and low-cost defined contribution pension option to employers, employees and the self-employed. They will allow individuals who currently may not participate in an employer-sponsored pension plan, such as the self-employed and employees of companies that do not offer a pension plan, to make use of this new option.

This is especially important for small business owners and their employees, who will now have access to a large-scale, low-cost pension plan for the very first time — with professional administrators working to ensure that funds are invested in the best interests of plan members.

Since these plans will involve large pooled funds, plan members will benefit from the lower investment management costs associated with the scale of these funds. Essentially, they will be buying in bulk.

The design of these plans will also be straightforward. They are intended to be largely harmonized from province to province, which will also facilitate lower administrative costs.

These features will remove barriers that might have kept some employers in the past from offering pension plans to their employees and that prevented employees and self-employed individuals from participating in large-scale pension plans.

Backgrounder: The Retirement Income Landscape in Canada

Built on a Strong Foundation

Canada's retirement income system has been recognized around the world by expert groups like the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) as a model that succeeds in reducing poverty among Canadian seniors and in providing high levels of income replacement to retired workers.

Taken together, the system is based on a balanced mix of public and private responsibility, as well as compulsory and voluntary vehicles, that:

1. provides a basic minimum pension for Canadians
2. ensures a minimum amount of earnings replacement for working Canadians, and
3. offers additional opportunities for voluntary retirement saving.

It both supports and draws upon the strength of a sound financial sector.

And it complements the Government's overall economic objectives of jobs and growth.

The success of this model rests on its three-pillar approach:

The first pillar is made up of the Old Age Security (OAS) and Guaranteed Income Supplement (GIS) programs, which provide a basic minimum income for seniors. This is essentially the "safety net" pillar of the system. As such, benefits are phased out as income rises. The federal government currently provides $39 billion in OAS/GIS benefits per year to about 5 million Canadians out of general revenues. Both OAS and GIS benefits are adjusted for inflation on a quarterly basis.

The second pillar is the Canada Pension Plan (CPP) and the Québec Pension Plan (QPP). These are mandatory, public, defined benefit pension plans that provide a basic level of earnings replacement for all Canadian workers. There are currently 16.5 million workers contributing to the CPP/QPP, with these programs paying $44 billion in benefits per year to 6.5 million beneficiaries. Both plans provide a "defined benefit" in retirement based on an individual's earnings. They are financed by employer and employee contributions, the contribution rate being 9.9 per cent of earnings, shared equally between employees and employers. Both plans also provide ancillary benefits, such as disability and survivor benefits.

Unlike the first-pillar programs, the CPP is not funded from general government revenues. Rather, operating at arm's length from governments, the Canada Pension Plan Investment Board is responsible for prudently investing CPP contributions not being used to pay current benefits in a diversified portfolio of assets to serve the best interests of CPP contributors and beneficiaries.

Canada's 13 provincial and territorial Finance Ministers, along with the federal Minister of Finance, completed their most recent statutory triennial review of the plan on May 25, 2009 and concluded that the CPP is sustainable for the next 75 years at the current contribution rate.

The third pillar of Canada's retirement income system includes tax-assisted private savings opportunities to help and encourage Canadians to accumulate additional savings for retirement.

This includes Registered Pension Plans (RPPs) and Registered Retirement Savings Plans (RRSPs).

RPPs are sponsored by employers, on a voluntary basis, and can be either defined contribution or defined benefit, with employers (and often employees) responsible for making contributions.

RRSPs are voluntary, individual, defined contribution savings plans. Employers may provide a "group RRSP" for employees, and may remit a share of contributions on behalf of their employees.

Contributions to RPPs and RRSPs are deductible from income for tax purposes and investment income earned in these plans is not subject to income tax. Pension payments and withdrawals are included in income and taxed at regular rates.

To provide comparable retirement savings opportunities to Canadians regardless of the type of plan in which they participate, RPP and RRSP contributions and benefits are subject to comprehensive integrated annual limits. The annual contribution limits for RRSPs and defined contribution RPPs are designed to allow a retirement income comparable to that obtainable from a defined benefit RPP. Unused RRSP contribution room is fully carried forward to be available in future years.

The cost of tax assistance provided on retirement savings is currently estimated at approximately $20 billion per year in forgone revenue for the federal government, and about half that amount in forgone provincial revenue.

All in all, these three pillars of Canada's retirement income system work together to support Canadians' retirement in a way that is effective and fair.

Shoring up the Pillars

The Government of Canada has taken ongoing action to enhance some of the existing structures of this system — ones with a proven record of effectiveness.

- In 2009, it consulted Canadians from coast to coast and introduced a number of changes to the framework for federally regulated RPPs. Improvements included ensuring that an employer fully funds benefits if the pension plan is terminated and providing sponsors of defined benefit pension plans more funding flexibility.
- Also in 2009, Canada's governments completed their mandated triennial review of the CPP, which modernized the plan to better reflect how Canadians currently live, work and retire.
- Just recently, the 2011 budget announced a new GIS top-up benefit for Canada's most vulnerable seniors. Seniors with little or no income other than OAS and GIS are receiving additional annual benefits of up to $600 for single seniors and $840 for couples, benefitting 680,000 seniors across Canada.

Several improvements were also introduced to the tax rules for RPPs and RRSPs to support work and saving by older Canadians and to provide sponsors of defined benefit pension plans with more funding flexibility.

The Government also introduced measures that complement these improvements.

All told, it provided $2.3 billion in additional annual targeted tax relief to seniors and pensioners through measures such as pension income splitting, increases in the Age Credit amount, and a doubling of the maximum amount of income eligible for the Pension Income Credit.

And it introduced the Tax-Free Savings Account, a flexible, registered general-purpose savings vehicle that allows Canadians to earn tax-free investment income to more easily meet their lifetime savings needs, including retirement savings.

The Research Working Group on Retirement Income Adequacy

However, concerns related to retirement income adequacy and pension coverage emerged in the wake of the 2008 financial crisis and with the release of several expert reports examining the effectiveness of provincial legislative frameworks for employer-sponsored RPPs.

In response, together with the provinces and territories, the Government of Canada embarked on an examination of the question of retirement income adequacy.

Canada's Finance Ministers began by setting up a joint federal-provincial research working group in May 2009 to conduct an in-depth examination of retirement income adequacy in Canada.

The group's summary report concluded that overall, the Canadian retirement income system is performing well and providing Canadians with an adequate standard of living upon retirement.

It indicated that most low-income seniors have adequate income replacement from public pensions, with annual retirement incomes equal to — or in some cases more than — income earned during their working lives.

A 2009 OECD paper cited in the report shows that the Canadian poverty rate in the mid-2000s among seniors was, at 4.4 per cent, one of the lowest in the OECD, compared to an OECD average of 13.3 per cent (the poverty rate is defined as 50 per cent of median income in a country).

The disposable income of Canadians aged 65 years or over is about 90 per cent of the average disposable income of all Canadians, third highest of selected OECD countries.

However, the report also found that some Canadian households, especially modest- and middle-income households, may be at risk of undersaving for retirement.

With these findings in hand, Ministers tasked senior officials to work collaboratively to analyze the wide range of ideas that had been put forward with a view to effectively addressing the issues identified in the research report.

To support this work, the Government of Canada launched online consultations and a series of cross-country roundtable discussions, speaking engagements and town hall meetings to gather input directly from Canadians on ensuring the ongoing strength of Canada's retirement income system.

The Introduction of the PRPP Framework

The results of this exhaustive research effort were the focus for discussion at the Finance Ministers Meeting in December 2009.

In June 2010, following the analysis of various proposals and consultations, federal, provincial and territorial governments agreed to continue work reviewing options to improve the CPP, including considering a modest expansion to the program, and to look at other ways to improve Canada's retirement income system.

However, employers, especially small businesses, raised concerns about accommodating the increased mandatory deductions that would be associated with an expanded CPP at a time of tentative recovery, and its impact on hiring decisions and the broader economy.

As an expansion would require higher CPP contributions from employees, employers and the self-employed, given the continuing fragility of Canada's economic recovery, the Government understands that now is not the time to increase CPP contributions.

This led to priority being given to the PRPP framework and the announcement of the initiative at the subsequent Finance Ministers Meeting in December 2010.

Implementing the PRPP Framework

As the PRPP framework was being developed, officials engaged with key stakeholders to ensure these new plans will meet the needs of employees, employers and those entities that may offer PRPPs once they are implemented.

Minister of State (Finance) Ted Menzies met directly with provincial and territorial Finance Ministers across Canada in support of this process.

Legislation implementing the federal portion of the PRPP framework was introduced in Parliament on November 17, 2011.

Provinces will need to introduce their own enabling legislation.

In addition, the tax rules for PRPPs are being developed by the Government of Canada and will be released in draft for comment shortly. The PRPP tax rules will apply to both federally and provincially regulated PRPPs.

Canadians want their governments to act on their priorities and deliver results on a timely basis, and the PRPP is a prime example of what can be accomplished for Canadians when they do.

The Government of Canada is looking forward to provinces implementing the framework in a timely manner to help Canadians reach their retirement objectives.

Dept. of Finance news release 2011-057, July 18, 2011: Harper Government Helping Canadians Save for Retirement

The Honourable Ted Menzies, Minister of State (Finance), today spoke to a small business and its employees, Swiss Master Chocolatier, in Toronto about how Pooled Registered Pension Plans (PRPPs) will strengthen Canada's retirement income system, as he begins a summer tour to consult with key stakeholders and Canadians.

"PRPPs will play a critical role in improving the range of retirement savings options available to Canadians by providing a low-cost retirement savings opportunity for employees as well as the self-employed," said Minister Menzies. "This is especially important for small business and its employees who will now have access to a private pension plan for the very first time."

At their meeting in Kananaskis last December, Canada's Finance Ministers agreed on a framework for the introduction of PRPPs as part of their collaborative efforts to ensure the ongoing strength of Canada's retirement income system.

"Canada's Finance Ministers opted to prioritize the PRPP framework because it was considered the most effective and targeted way to help millions of Canadians who have not previously had access to a company pension plan," said Minister Menzies.

"I am meeting directly with provincial and territorial finance ministers across Canada over the summer in support of this process in advance of the next Finance Ministers Meeting," said Minister Menzies. "Additionally, officials continue to work with key stakeholders to ensure the framework for these new plans will meet the needs of employees, employers and those financial institutions that may offer PRPPs once they are implemented."

"Our ongoing efforts to improve Canada's retirement system will also benefit from the valuable advice of Canadians," said Minister Menzies. "I look forward to hearing their views on where we should focus our efforts to keep our retirement income system fair, effective and supportive of our agenda for creating jobs and growth, so that Canadians will have everything they need to reach their full potential."

Speech by the Honourable Ted Menzies, Minister of State (Finance), Delivered at Swiss Master Chocolatier

In the last election, Canadians gave us a strong mandate to continue advancing our Economic Action Plan.

Since the Plan was introduced in 2009, Canada's economy has been spared the worst of the global recession and has remained on the right track.

About 590,000 more Canadians are working today than in July 2009, the best record in the G7.

We have experienced 7 straight quarters of economic growth and the IMF forecasts that Canada's economic growth will continue to be one of the strongest among G-7 countries this year and next.

Canadians can be assured that, in our new mandate, we will continue to keep our focus squarely on the economy — and keeping it on the right track.

Indeed, Canada's Economic Action Plan is entering its next phase, A Low-Tax Plan for Jobs and Growth.

This phase represents our continued efforts to create the right conditions for more long-term jobs and stronger economic growth, all the while steadily eliminating the deficit and returning to surplus.

It also focuses on ensuring that families, seniors, and everyday Canadians have enough money saved when they retire.

All Canadians want and expect their government to focus on ensuring the long-term strength of Canada's retirement income system.

And trust me . . . this government has been working hard on that.

Our latest action is a major initiative that will really benefit many Canadians that don't have the same security of work pension as others – Pooled Registered Pension Plans, or PRPPs.

What are PRPPs you ask?

PRPPs are a new kind of defined contribution pension plan that will be available to employers, employees and the self-employed.

PRPPs will play a critical role in improving the range of retirement options available to Canadians by providing a low cost retirement savings option vehicle.

This is especially important to small business and its employees who will now have access to a low cost private pension plan for the very first time.

Because many small business employees and employers will "pool" their pensions a lower management cost will be achieved. People like you will be buying bulk.

It is an idea whose time has come and I am happy to be able to go to every province and territory in this country and talk about the need for retirement savings and what your government is doing to help you meet your retirement goals.

In short, PRPPs will be efficiently managed, privately administered pension arrangements that will provide greater choice to employers and individuals, thereby promoting pension coverage and retirement saving.

And that is also why federal, provincial and territorial governments are working to implement PRPPs as soon as possible.

As I mentioned, PRPPs are the latest in a series of important steps your government has taken to strengthen Canada's retirement income system.

While this system is already recognized around the world by experts like the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) as a model that succeeds in reducing poverty among seniors and in providing high levels of income replacement to seniors. We recognise, however, that we can always do more.

That is why we have already made a number of targeted improvements to this system:

- In 2009 we introduced changes to the framework for federally regulated pensions. I went coast to coast and consulted with Canadians about these pensions and what improvements we could make. The feedback we received was tremendous and resulted in many reforms. Reforms like, ensuring that an employer fully fund benefits if the pension plan is terminated.
- We introduced the Tax-Free Savings Account, which is widely acknowledged to be the most significant private savings investment vehicle since the introduction of the RRSP.
- And just recently, Budget 2011 announced a new GIS top-up benefit for the most vulnerable seniors. Seniors with little or no income other than OAS and GIS will receive additional annual benefits of up to $600 for single seniors and $840 for couples. This measure will further improve the financial security and well-being of more than 680,000 seniors across Canada and is the most significant increase to the GIs in 25 years.

All told we provided $2.3 billion in additional targeted tax relief to seniors and pensioners this fiscal year — measures like pension income splitting, increases in the Age Credit amount, and a doubling of the maximum amount of income eligible for the Pension Income Credit.

Where does the PRPP fit in?

The answer to that takes us back to May of 2009 when Canada's finance ministers set up a joint federal-provincial research working group to conduct an in-depth examination of the retirement income system in Canada.

I was honoured to serve as its Chair.

And we were all fortunate to have Professor Jack Mintz of the University of Calgary, one of Canada's leading economists and an expert in the field, as the working group's Research Director. He also helped author a report on this study.

The report found that some modest and middle-income individuals may be achieving a lower overall income replacement rate.

With these findings in hand, we worked collaboratively to analyze the wide range of ideas that had been put forward to effectively address the shortcomings identified in the research report.

The results of this exhaustive research effort and extensive consultations with Canadians led to Finance Ministers agreeing upon a framework for PRPPs in late 2010.

Canada's finance ministers opted to prioritize the PRPP framework over other options because it was considered the most effective and targeted way to address the prime areas for improvement identified in our working group's research.

Let me just conclude by saying that although PRPPs represent a major step forward in securing Canadians retirement income needs, our work on the retirement income system is ongoing. So this is the beginning of another cross country trip for me — this time to consult with Canadians on the best way forward for PRPPs.

Your government has acted to help Canadians weather the economic storm and, though the economic recovery remains fragile, we are acting to provide greater options for Canadians saving for retirement. It is never too soon to start saving. Thank you all for your time.

Here for Canada*, Conservative Party election platform (conservative.ca), April 2011: Helping Canadians Save for Retirement

Stephen Harper's Government has provided significant tax relief for seniors and pensioners, to help ensure a good quality of life for our seniors.

But more is needed. Many Canadians are concerned about whether they are saving enough for retirement, and most Canadian workers lack workplace pensions.

Late last year, Stephen Harper's Government announced plans to provide additional help to Canadians saving for retirement, including self-employed Canadians, through a new, low-cost pension option.

A re-elected Stephen Harper Government will work with our provincial and territorial partners to implement the Pooled Retirement Pension Plan as soon as possible in our next term of office.

Dept. of Finance news release 2010-128, Dec. 20, 2010: Ensuring a Strong Retirement System, Support for Provinces and Territories While Moving Towards Budget Balance

The Honourable Jim Flaherty, Minister of Finance, today released the following statement at the close of his meeting with provincial and territorial Finance Ministers and ministers responsible for pensions:

"We had a very good meeting. I'd like to thank my provincial and territorial counterparts for their contribution to what was a candid, open and productive discussion.

"I'm particularly pleased to announce that we reached agreement on a framework for the introduction of a new kind of pension plan, called the Pooled Registered Pension Plan, or PRPP.

"This new private-sector retirement savings vehicle will improve the range of retirement savings options available to Canadians by providing a low-cost retirement savings opportunity for employees — with or without a participating employer — and the self-employed.

"PRPPs will be a major breakthrough for the Canadian pension market. They will make well regulated, low-cost, private-sector pension plans accessible to millions of Canadians who have up to now not had access to such plans.

"In fact, many employees of small- and medium-sized businesses and self-employed workers will now have access to a private pension plan for the very first time.

Over the coming months, federal-provincial-territorial officials will engage with key stakeholders to ensure the framework for these new plans will meet the needs of employees, employers and those financial institutions that may offer the arrangements.

"We also reviewed work done on a range of options for the Canada Pension Plan. We agreed that our officials should continue their work on CPP. We will come back at the June meeting to discuss options and concerns.

"Ministers also remain committed to fostering better financial literacy for Canadians. This includes helping people make more informed decisions as they save for retirement. Ministers agreed to review the report of the Task Force on Financial Literacy to be released in the new year and to work collaboratively to respond to the recommendations.

"In addition to retirement issues, we discussed the evolving economic situation at home and internationally, and the need for eliminating deficits and lowering debt as we transition towards sustained economic growth.

"As you know, there are encouraging signs of improvement across a range of indicators, particularly on the domestic front. Ministers agreed, however, that the situation remains fragile, with concern over mounting public debt in many countries and its implications for long-term growth.

"Working cooperatively allowed us to get Action Plan stimulus out on a timely basis and on target, so that it was effective in supporting Canada's economic recovery.

Framework for Pooled Registered Pension Plans

Introduction

Finance Ministers have made significant progress in reviewing and ascertaining where improvements may be made to retirement income adequacy in Canada. At the December 2009 Finance Ministers' Meeting in Whitehorse, Ministers received a summary report on retirement income adequacy research that was prepared by the Research Working Group [This group was chaired by Ted Menzies, parliamentary secretary to Minister Flaherty, and supported by research director Jack Mintz and Finance Ministers from British Columbia, Alberta, Manitoba, Ontario and Nova Scotia.], which Ministers created to expand the knowledge base underpinning the subject of retirement income adequacy. The report noted that certain Canadians may not be saving enough for retirement.

In order to address this, Ministers tasked federal, provincial and territorial officials to work collaboratively to examine, among other things, changes that would be required to permit defined contribution Pooled Registered Pension Plans (PRPPs) across Canada in order to improve the range of retirement saving options for Canadians.

Moving forward on PRPPs will provide Canadians with a new, low-cost, accessible vehicle to meet their retirement objectives. This will be particularly beneficial to Canadians that do not have the benefit of an employer sponsored pension plan, including the self-employed. This will allow more Canadians to access the benefits of being members of a Registered Pension Plan thereby supporting Canadians in retirement.

Examples: How PRPPs Will Benefit Canadians

John owns and operates a company that employs 10 people. John would like to offer a pension plan to his employees to help them prepare for retirement. However, given the small size of his business he does not have the expertise or resources to set up a plan.

PRPPs will be administered by a regulated financial institution thereby decreasing the cost and complexity for small employers in setting up such a plan. As a result, John will now be able to offer a pension plan to his employees, which will help them meet their retirement saving objectives.

Suzie is self-employed and is concerned that she does not have access to an employer sponsored pension plan to save for her retirement.

PRPPs will be accessible to those without an employer-employee relationship. As a result, Suzie will have the ability to participate in a large scale, pooled pension plan. This will allow her to better prepare for retirement benefiting from the advantages of PRPPs, including lower costs that result from large pooled funds.

Summary

This backgrounder sets out a framework for defined contribution PRPPs across Canada that will improve the range of retirement saving options to Canadians by:

- Providing a new accessible, straightforward and administratively low-cost retirement option for employers to offer their employees;
- Allowing individuals who currently may not participate in a pension plan, such as the self-employed and employees of companies that do not offer a pension plan, to make use of this new type of pension plan;
- Enabling more people to benefit from the lower investment management costs that result from membership in a large, pooled pension plan;
- Allowing for the portability of benefits that will facilitate an easy transfer between plans; and
- Ensuring that funds are invested in the best interest of plan members.

A high level of regulatory harmonization across the federal and provincial governments will be instrumental in increasing the scale of these plans and achieving low costs.

The potential tax changes that will be required to accommodate these plans will be developed and implemented by the federal government.

Administrators and Their Role

PRPPs will make it more attractive for employers, particularly SMEs, to offer pension plans to their employees because a third-party administrator will take on most of the responsibilities that employers bear in existing pension plans. The administrator will be responsible for the management of the pension fund and the day-to-day administration of the pension plan. This will include ensuring that the money being contributed into the plan is being managed prudently, that appropriate investment options are offered, and that plan members are informed of up-to-date plan information.

Eligible Administrators

Regulated financial institutions that are capable of taking on a fiduciary role [This would include trust and insurance companies and other financial institutions with a trust subsidiary.] will be eligible administrators of PRPPs.

- Regulated financial institutions that are capable of taking on a fiduciary role in order to act in the best interests of plan members will be eligible administrators of PRPPs. Regulated financial institutions are subject to a regulatory framework that promotes their sound operation and governance.
- Administrators will have the ability to provide plans suited to different types of members.

Duty of the Administrator

In order to protect the interests of plan members, the administrator will have a fiduciary duty to plan members.

- It is important to ensure that the best interests of plan members are protected. In light of this, the framework will provide for administrators to bear a fiduciary role in respect of the plan members.

Investments and Costs of Investments

PRPPs will be designed to result in large pools of capital with low costs, while helping members to construct portfolios consistent with each member's particular investment needs and objectives.

- Administrators will be responsible for investing the assets. While assets invested under a PRPP will be co-mingled for investment purposes, participants will have personal accounts for record-keeping purposes.
- Administrators will be responsible for evaluating and offering investment funds that permit a reasonable and prudent person to create an appropriate portfolio in respect of his or her own investment objectives and risk preferences including a low cost option. There will be a suitable low-cost default option for a broad group, and a manageable number of other investment options for members to choose from. A default option will be permitted to have some risk exposure and still be considered prudent under this framework for the purpose of the fiduciary duty.
- Upon enrolment, members will be given the opportunity to select an investment mix consistent with their retirement savings objectives. The administrator will provide the member with educational tools and other resources to permit him or her to make an informed choice.

Disclosure

Plain language disclosure of plan provisions and investment performance is critical for members to understand the nature of their participation in a PRPP.

- Administrators will be responsible for providing all members with certain information on a regular, periodic basis, including:
  - An annual statement;
  - Investment performance and relative risks;
  - All costs and fees;
  - Contributions, broken down between employer and employees where applicable;
  - Notice of any amendments to the plan;
  - An illustration of the level of retirement income that could be generated through the purchase of an annuity given the member's plan assets; and
  - Informing employees that are leaving the employer of their right to either keep their plan assets with the existing plan, or transfer the assets to some other retirement savings vehicle.

Management and Operational Responsibilities of Administrators

Administrators will generally be responsible for performing all of the required management and operational functions of a plan operating as a PRPP.

- Administrators will generally be responsible for performing all of the required management and operational functions of a plan operating as a PRPP. This will include:
  - Receiving contributions to a PRPP from both employers and individuals who participate; and
  - Responding to any enquiries from plan members on any element of the plan and their participation therein.
  - Administrators will also be largely responsible for ensuring compliance with the tax rules, particularly in respect of administrative and reporting requirements related to contributions.

Responsibilities of Employers

Employers that choose to offer a PRPP will be responsible for selecting a particular plan for their employees and enrolling their employees into the plan.

- An employer can choose to offer a PRPP to its employees, which could include making direct employer contributions to the plan, along with remitting contributions from the employee.
- Despite the intention to have the majority of administrative tasks performed by the administrator, there will be certain residual tasks that an employer that chooses to offer a PRPP would need to fulfill. These include:
  - Selecting a plan and enrolling its employees into that plan, which may involve a choice to move from one plan to another from time to time;
  - Determining a level of contributions at the employee level and, if applicable, the employer level;
  - Collecting and remitting contributions to the plan; and
  - Informing the administrator of new members and terminations of employment.
- Disclosure requirements will be largely borne by the administrator, but certain tasks would be necessarily assumed by the employer. Employers that offer a PRPP will be responsible for, among other things, informing their employees of any new participation in a PRPP or whether the employer has chosen to move to a new plan.
- Employers contributing directly to a PRPP will also have certain administrative responsibilities in relation to compliance with the pension tax rules.

Participation and Operation

Classes of Plan Members

There will be two classes of members eligible to participate: Employed Members will include employees of an employer that offers a PRPP and Individual Members will include the self-employed and employees of an employer that does not offer a PRPP. While investments will be common across all members, there will be certain administrative and regulatory differences between the two classes.

- While any individual will be eligible to join a particular plan, members who join by the virtue of an employment relationship with an employer will have somewhat differing administrative treatment. These plan members are referred to as "Employed Members".
- Employed Members will participate in such a PRPP much like defined contribution Registered Pension Plan members do at present. The employer may make direct contributions and will remit contributions on behalf of employees.
- The self-employed and employees of an employer that does not offer a PRPP are referred to as "Individual Members". In general, these members will be responsible for the tasks that would otherwise be borne by an employer, including making the choice to enrol, selecting contribution rates and remitting contributions to the plan.

Enrolment and Contributions

Where there is an employer that offers a PRPP, the employees of that employer may be enrolled in the plan and contributions will be made at a default level set by the employer. Individual Members will have to make a choice on their own on whether to join.

- An employer that chooses to offer a PRPP will enrol its employees (or certain classes thereof) into the plan it has chosen. The employer will select a default contribution rate.
- Employers may be permitted to enrol their employees into a PRPP during the tenure of the employee's employment, and not simply at the hiring stage. This may be accompanied with a provision allowing these employees to opt out shortly after being enrolled.
- Employed Members will make contributions on a regular, paycheque deduction basis (as is the case with Registered Pension Plans), but Individual Members may have the opportunity to make single, lump sum contributions in addition to the option of making periodic contributions.
- The framework will also provide that employers will have the ability to increase the employee's default contribution rate from time to time in order to allow contributions to increase along with salary, potentially subject to the employee's ability to opt out.

Portability of Member Benefits

The right of portability of member benefits will be required, subject to certain terms and conditions, similar to the present Registered Pension Plan framework (for Employed Members). There will be fewer restrictions on portability for Individual Members. An employer that offers a PRPP will have the ability to move to a new plan at its discretion.

- Portability of pension benefits is a key component of the PRPP framework and will facilitate an easy transfer between plans.
- Employers will have the ability to cease offering a particular plan to their employees at their discretion. This could be done by choosing to cease offering a PRPP altogether, or by choosing a new plan to offer its employees.
  - If the employer chooses to offer a new plan, then it will have the right to transfer all of its employees' accounts to the new plan, whereupon the employees will need to follow a new enrolment process by selecting new investments, among other things. This approach reflects the fact that it will be the employer's responsibility to select a particular plan.
- If an Employed Member terminates employment with a particular employer, that member could choose to remain in the particular PRPP or move his or her assets to another plan or another retirement savings vehicle.
- Individual Members participating in a PRPP on a voluntary basis could choose to move their assets at any time to another plan or retirement savings vehicle, subject to a minimum investment period that an administrator may wish to set. [A minimum investment period would permit the administrator to avoid incurring excess expense — which would be reflected in the overall cost borne by members — due to the administrative costs of processing frequent asset transfers.]

Locking-in

Locking-in provisions are intended to ensure that funds are available for retirement income purposes. Employer contributions will be locked-in. Some jurisdictions may also choose to allow employees to unlock their contributions under certain circumstances.

- There is a trade-off between encouraging take-up, providing flexibility, and promoting lower administrative costs of PRPPs. Under existing pension standards rules, contributions/savings are locked-in. Locking-in provisions are intended to ensure that funds are available for retirement income purposes.
- Employer contributions will be locked-in under PRPPs. Some jurisdictions may also choose to allow employees to unlock their contributions under certain circumstances (e.g. small amounts, financial hardship).

Mandatory Employer Participation

PRPPs will provide a vehicle for those jurisdictions that wish to require some employers to offer their employees access to a pension plan.

- Each jurisdiction will make a determination as to whether it wants to require employer participation.

Potential Tax Rule Modifications

The federal government will develop modifications to the tax rules to accommodate PRPPs, with the objective of ensuring that such plans fit within the basic system of rules and limits for Registered Pension Plans (RPPs) and Registered Retirement Savings Plans (RRSPs). The tax rule framework will apply to PRPPs in all jurisdictions.

- The basic approach will be to set out in the Income Tax Act the conditions for establishing a broad-based pension plan, which will essentially be a new type of defined contribution RPP. A PRPP will be subject to most of the existing rules applying to defined contribution RPPs (referred to as money purchase RPPs in the tax rules), but with some exceptions as well as new requirements to deal with its broad-based nature.
- The principal differences are that it will generally be administered by a third-party (consistent with the definition of eligible administrator under pension benefits standards rules) rather than a sponsoring employer, and it will allow contributions by self-employed persons and individuals without a participating employer. Recognizing the need to ensure ease of administration and compliance with existing RPP and RRSP limits, contributions will be permitted on the following basis:
  - Employers contributing directly to a PRPP and their employees will be permitted to make contributions under the RPP limits, with the corresponding requirement to report a pension adjustment in respect of those contributions, so as to parallel current treatment under the money purchase RPP rules.
  - Self-employed persons and other employees will contribute on the basis of their available RRSP limit.

Quebec Budget Papers, March 20, 2012: 2. MEASURES RELATING TO POOLED RETIREMENT SAVINGS

In this budget, the government is undertaking to table a bill so that the rules for the implementation of voluntary retirement savings plans can enter into force January 1, 2013.

These plans, whose purpose is to encourage more Quebecers to save for retirement, will enable all workers to have access to a private pension plan with all the advantages of a group plan offering professional management of savings by administrators subject to stringent requirements and low management fees as a result of the accumulation of a large volume of savings.

To encourage better retirement coverage while limiting the administrative burden on small employers, companies with at least five eligible employees will be required to offer a voluntary retirement savings plan unless they already offer their employees the possibility of contributing to a retirement savings plan through payroll deductions.

The federal government, for its part, tabled in the House of Commons, on November 17, 2011, Bill C-25, the Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act. This legislation will provide the framework for the creation of a new type of pooled pension plan for workers under federal jurisdiction and will have objectives similar to those of the voluntary retirement savings plan.

To reflect these new retirement savings vehicles, i.e. voluntary retirement savings plans and pooled registered pension plans, a series of amendments will have to be made to the tax legislation and regulations.

[For detail on Voluntary Retirement Savings Plans see the 32-page document Quebecers and Their Retirement" Accessible Plans For All, released with the Budget — ed.]

2.1 Québec's position on the federal tax rules relating to pooled registered pension plans

On December 14, 2011, the federal government published, for discussion, a set of legislative proposals designed to amend the Income Tax Act and the Income Tax Regulations to reflect pooled registered pension plans.

These proposals seek to amend the income tax rules so that pooled registered pension plans are included so as to ensure that these plans are compatible with the system of rules and limits applicable to registered pension plans and registered retirement savings plans.

The proposed tax rules apply to federally-regulated pooled registered pension plans as well as to those subject to provincial regulation, such as voluntary retirement savings plans, and will apply alongside the Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act, which will govern federally-regulated plans.

Since the reform of tax assistance for retirement savings implemented in the early 1990s, the tax rules relating to retirement savings that apply under Québec's tax system have been completely harmonized with those under the federal tax system.

Given the degree of complexity of the provisions introduced by this reform, for individuals, employers and the tax administration, harmonization with the federal measures has not resulted in the incorporation of all of these measures in Québec's legislation.

In the interests of simplification, the Taxation Act stipulates that a retirement savings plan that is registered by the Minister of Revenue of Canada and whose registration is in force is, as the case may be, a registered pension plan, a deferred profit sharing plan, a registered retirement savings plan or a registered retirement income fund for the purposes of Québec's tax system.

It also stipulates that the amounts that may be deducted notably on account of contributions or premiums to such plans are those allowed as deductions for the purposes of the federal tax system.

However, the federal rules relating to the taxation of amounts from these various retirement savings plans were incorporated into Québec's legislation.

Since pooled registered pension plans are retirement savings mechanisms, the approach that Québec intends to follow regarding harmonization with the federal tax measures relating to such plans is essentially the same as the one used following the reform of tax assistance for retirement savings.

Briefly, this approach would involve recognition of the registration of pooled pension plans by the Minister of Revenue of Canada, so that the registration conditions of these plans would not be incorporated into the Taxation Act. Accordingly, for the purposes of Québec's tax system, a pooled registered pension plan would be a pooled pension plan accepted for the purposes of the Income Tax Act by the Minister of Revenue of Canada as a pooled registered pension plan and whose registration is in force.

The federal measures relating to the deductibility of contributions to a pooled registered pension plan would be incorporated into the Taxation Act by means of a reference to the federal legislation, so that the amounts deductible on that account are those allowed as a deduction for the purposes of the federal tax system.

For their part, the federal measures relating to the tax treatment of amounts from a pooled registered pension plan and the income of the trust governed by such a plan would be incorporated into the Taxation Act.

Moreover, concerning the proposed consequential amendments to the federal legislation to reflect pooled registered pension plans, the harmonization decisions will depend essentially on whether or not provisions equivalent to those amended at the federal level are present in Québec's tax legislation and regulations.

Furthermore, provided the legislative proposals concerning pooled registered pension plans are adopted, Québec's tax legislation and regulations would be amended to incorporate some of the proposed measures. These amendments would apply on the same dates as those for the purposes of the federal measures to which they would be harmonized.

The following tables list the measures that would be retained and those that would not.

Ontario Budget, March 27, 2012: Pooled Registered Pension Plans

Pooled registered pension plans (PRPPs) are intended to make it easier to save for retirement by providing employees and the self-employed with a new type of simple, low-cost savings vehicle that is professionally managed and portable. Pooled registered pension plans are intended to:

- encourage employer participation;
- increase employee coverage;
- simplify investment choices; and
- reduce fees through economies of scale.

Federal Legislation

On November 17, 2011, the federal government introduced Bill C-25, the Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act, as a first step in setting out the legislative framework for PRPPs that applies to federally regulated industries and employment in the territories. The federal government also announced proposed amendments to the federal Income Tax Act in December 2011 to accommodate PRPPs. Provincial legislation and regulations are required to implement PRPPs in Ontario and other provinces.

Ontario's Position on the Federal PRPP Model

Ontario believes that the protection of plan members is critical to the success of PRPPs. In a for-profit environment, priority must be given to the interests of plan members.

Ontario has a number of concerns with the federal model as currently proposed. For example:

- PRPPs may simply replace one form of retirement arrangement with another, instead of expanding retirement income savings and coverage;
- it is unclear if the PRPP's fiduciary framework adequately protects plan members;
- it is uncertain whether compulsory employee contributions would be flexible enough to allow for various life events, such as divorce or periods of financial hardship;
- the extent to which PRPPs could achieve their low-cost objective is unclear; and
- each province would need to establish an effective licensing and regulatory regime — the cost of regulation must be reasonable since these costs would be passed on to PRPP participants.

Ontario will continue to work collaboratively with other provinces and the federal government to develop this model. However, Ontario believes the implementation of pension innovation should be tied to CPP enhancement as part of a comprehensive approach.

Life Insurance Policies

148. (1) Amounts included in computing policyholder's income — There shall be included in computing the income for a taxation year of a policyholder in respect of the disposition of an interest in a life insurance policy, other than a policy that is or is issued pursuant to

(a) a registered pension plan,

(b) a registered retirement savings plan,

(b.1) a registered retirement income fund,

(b.2) a TFSA,

(c) an income-averaging annuity contract,

(d) a deferred profit sharing plan, or

(e) an annuity contract where

(i) the payment for the annuity contract was deductible under paragraph 60(l) in computing the policyholder's income, or

Proposed Addition — 148(1)(e)(i.1)

(i.1) the annuity contract is a qualifying trust annuity with respect to a taxpayer and the amount paid to acquire it was deductible under paragraph 60(l) in computing the taxpayer's income, or

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 106, will add subpara. 148(1)(e)(i.1), applicable after August 1992.

Para. 148(1)(e), as it applies after 1988 and before September 1992, is to be read as follows:

(e) an annuity contract

(i) the payment for which was deductible in computing the policyholder's income by virtue of paragraph 60(l), or

(ii) that is a qualifying trust annuity with respect to a taxpayer, the payment for which was deductible under paragraph 60(l) in computing the taxpayer's income,

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 148(1) requires the inclusion in income of certain amounts from the disposition of a life insurance policy, but excludes from this rule annuities described in paragraph 148(1)(e).

Paragraph 148(1)(e) describes

- an annuity the payment for which was deductible under paragraph 60(l) in computing the policyholder's income, and
- an annuity acquired by a policyholder in circumstances to which subsection 146(21) applies (i.e., an annuity described in paragraph 60(l) and acquired with funds paid out of the Saskatchewan Pension Plan).

An annuity described in paragraph 148(1)(e) is defined, by paragraph 304(1)(b) of the Regulations, to be a "prescribed annuity contract" and, as such, is not subject to the accrual rules set out in section 12.2. This treatment reflects the fact that the policyholder acquiring such an annuity does so with tax-deferred funds, and is generally meant to be taxed only when amounts are paid out of the annuity.

Subsection 148(1) is amended to include, in the annuities described in paragraph (e), an annuity that is a "qualifying trust annuity" with respect to a taxpayer (as defined in new subsection 60.011(2)), the payment for which was deductible by the taxpayer under paragraph 60(l). This reflects the fact that a qualifying trust annuity will typically be held by a trust, rather than by the taxpayer who is entitled to the deduction under paragraph 60(l), and ensures that it is treated, for tax purposes, in the same manner as if it were held by the taxpayer.

(ii) the policyholder acquired the annuity contract in circumstances to which subsection 146(21) applied, the amount, if any, by which the proceeds of the disposition of the policyholder's interest in the policy that the policyholder, beneficiary or assignee, as the case may be, became entitled to receive in the year exceeds the adjusted cost basis to the policyholder of that interest immediately before the disposition.

(1.1) Amount included in computing taxpayer's income — There shall be included in computing the income for a taxation year of a taxpayer in respect of a disposition of an interest in a life insurance policy described in paragraph (e) of the definition "disposition" in subsection (9) the amount, if any, by which the amount of a payment described in paragraph (e) of that definition that the taxpayer became entitled to receive in the year exceeds the amount that would be the taxpayer's adjusted cost basis of the taxpayer's interest in the policy immediately before the disposition if, for the purposes of the definition "adjusted cost basis" in subsection (9), the taxpayer were, in respect of that interest in the policy, the policyholder.

(c) where, as a consequence of a death, a disposition of an interest in a life insurance policy is deemed to have occurred under paragraph (b), the policyholder immediately after the death shall be deemed to have acquired the interest at a cost equal to the accumulating fund in respect thereof, as determined in prescribed manner, immediately after the death; and

(d) where at any time a life insurance policy last acquired after December 1, 1982, or a life insurance policy to which subsection 12.2(9) of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, applies by virtue of paragraph 12.2(9)(b) of that Act, ceases to be an exempt policy (otherwise than as a consequence of the death of an individual whose life is insured under the policy or at a time when that individual is totally and permanently disabled), the policyholder shall be deemed to have disposed of the policyholder's interest in the policy at that time for proceeds of disposition equal to the accumulating fund with respect to the interest, as determined in prescribed manner, at that time and to have reacquired the interest immediately after that time at a cost equal to those proceeds.

(a) in computing the adjusted cost basis of the policy,

(i) an amount paid by the policyholder or on the policyholder's behalf as or on account of premiums under the policy or to acquire an interest in the policy shall, to the extent that the amount was used by the insurer to acquire property for the purposes of the segregated fund, be deemed not to have been so paid, and

(ii) any transfer of property by the insurer from the segregated fund that resulted in an increase in the portion of its reserves for the policy that do not vary with the fair market value of the segregated fund shall be deemed to have been a premium paid under the policy by the policyholder; and

(3) Income inclusion on return of funds — Where at any particular time in a taxation year a particular amount is distributed (otherwise than as payment for the provision of funeral or cemetery services with respect to an individual) to a taxpayer from an arrangement that was, at the time it was established, an eligible funeral arrangement and the particular amount is paid from the balance in respect of the individual under the arrangement, there shall be added in computing the taxpayer's income for the year from property the lesser of the particular amount and the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the balance in respect of the individual under the arrangement immediately before the particular time (determined without regard to the value of property in a cemetery care trust);

B is the total of all payments made from the arrangement before the particular time for the provision of funeral or cemetery services with respect to the individual (other than cemetery services funded by property in a cemetery care trust); and

C is the total of all relevant contributions made before the particular time in respect of the individual under the particular arrangement (other than contributions in respect of the individual that were in a cemetery care trust).

Proposed Amendment — 148.1(3)C

where

D is the total of all relevant contributions made before the particular time in respect of the individual under the arrangement (other than contributions in respect of the individual that were in a cemetery care trust), and

E is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which

(a) an amount relating to the balance in respect of the individual under the arrangement that is deemed by subsection (4) to have been distributed before the particular time from the arrangement

exceeds

(b) the portion of the amount referred to in paragraph (a) that is added, because of this subsection, in computing a taxpayer's income.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 107(2), will amend the description of C in subsec. 148.1(3) to read as above, applicable to amounts that are transferred, credited or added after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 148.1 is amended to provide specific rules relating to transfers from one EFA account to another. In general terms, the changes are as follows: . . .

- The provision that requires EFA distributions to be included in income (subsection 148.1(3)) is amended to ensure that the determination of the amount that can subsequently be distributed from the transferor EFA account on a tax-free basis is reduced by the portion of the transferred amount that was not included in income (i.e., that portion of the transferred amount that represents a return of contributions).

These changes are described in more detail below. . . .

Subsection 148.1(3) provides for an income inclusion by a taxpayer in the event that there is a distribution of funds from an individual's EFA account to the taxpayer (otherwise than as a payment for the provision of funeral or cemetery services with respect to the individual). The amount of the income inclusion is the lesser of the distributed amount and a second amount. In general terms, this second amount is determined by the formula:

where

A is the balance in the EFA account immediately before the distribution,

B is the total of all payments made from the EFA account before the distribution for the provision of funeral or cemetery services, and

C is the total of all "relevant contributions" in respect of the EFA account that were made before the distribution.

For the purpose of the description of C, an amount is defined in subsection 148.1(1) to be a "relevant contribution" in respect of a particular EFA account if

- the amount was contributed to the particular EFA account otherwise than by way of transfer from another EFA account, or
- the amount was contributed to another EFA account (otherwise than by way of transfer) and subsequently transferred (either from the original or a subsequent EFA account) to the particular EFA account.

The effect of subsection 148.1(3) is to include in the income of the taxpayer the lesser of the amount received and an amount which generally represents the income accumulated in the EFA account. If the amount received by the taxpayer is greater than the amount included in the taxpayer's income, the excess generally represents a non-taxable refund of relevant contributions (represented by the variable C in the formula).

The description of C is amended so that its value is reduced, in effect, by any relevant contributions previously transferred from the EFA account to another EFA account. This ensures that the amount of the transferred relevant contribution (which, by virtue of subsection 148.1(3), can be distributed from the recipient EFA account tax-free) cannot also be used to support a subsequent tax-free withdrawal from the transferor EFA account.

The description of C is amended to provide that its value is determined by the formula

For this purpose, the value of D is the amount determined under the existing description of C. The value of E is the total of all amounts each of which is

- an amount which was previously transferred from the EFA account and deemed, by new subsection 148.1(4), to be a distribution minus

- the portion of the deemed distribution that was required, by subsection 148.1(3), to be included in computing a taxpayer's income.

Related Provisions: 12(1)(z.4) — Inclusion into income from property; 212(1)(v) — Withholding tax on payment to non-resident; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: Subsec. 148.1(3) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 177(6), applicable to 1993 et seq. Subsec. 148.1(3) formerly read:

> (3) Where at any particular time in a taxation year a particular amount is distributed (otherwise than as payment for the provision of funeral services with respect to an individual) to a taxpayer from an arrangement that was, at the time it was established, an eligible funeral arrangement and the particular amount is paid from the balance in respect of the individual under the arrangement, there shall be added in computing the taxpayer's income for the year from property the lesser of the particular amount and the amount determined by the formula

Proposed Addition — 148.1(4), (5)

(4) Deemed distribution on transfer — If at a particular time an amount relating to the balance in respect of an individual (referred to in this subsection and in subsection (5) as the "transferor") under an eligible funeral arrangement (referred to in this subsection and in subsection (5) as the "transferor arrangement") is transferred, credited or added to the balance in respect of the same or another individual (referred to in this subsection and in subsection (5) as the "recipient") under the same or another eligible funeral arrangement (referred to in this subsection and in subsection (5) as the "recipient arrangement"),

(a) the amount is deemed to be distributed to the transferor (or, if the transferor is deceased at the particular time, to the recipient) at the particular time from the transferor arrangement and to be paid from the balance in respect of the transferor under the transferor arrangement; and

(b) the amount is deemed to be a contribution made (other than by way of a transfer from an eligible funeral arrangement) at the particular time under the recipient arrangement for the purpose of funding funeral or cemetery services with respect to the recipient.

Related Provisions: 148.1(5) — No deemed distribution on transfer to same individual.

(5) Non-application of subsection (4) — Subsection (4) does not apply if

(a) the transferor and the recipient are the same individual;

(b) the amount that is transferred, credited or added to the balance in respect of the individual under the recipient arrangement is equal to the balance in respect of the individual under the transferor arrangement immediately before the particular time; and

(c) the transferor arrangement is terminated immediately after the transfer.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 107(3), will add subsecs. 148.1(4) and (5), applicable to amounts that are transferred, credited or added after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 148.1 is amended to provide specific rules relating to transfers from one EFA account to another. In general terms, the changes are as follows:

- A new provision (paragraph 148.1(4)(a)) deems the transferred amount to be distributed to the individual from whose EFA account the amount is transferred. However, if that individual is deceased, the amount is deemed to be distributed to the individual to whose EFA account the amount is transferred. This ensures that the transfer is included in income (to the extent that it does not exceed the income accumulated in the transferor account).
- A new provision (paragraph 148.1(4)(b)) deems the transferred amount to be a contribution made to the recipient EFA account other than by way of transfer. This ensures that the earnings portion of the transferred amount is not taxed again when it is distributed from the recipient EFA account. . . .
- A new provision (subsection 148.1(5)) provides that these new rules do not apply if the transferor and the recipient EFA accounts are in respect of the same person, the entire balance in the transferor account is transferred to the recipient account and the transferor EFA account is terminated immediately after the transfer.

These changes are described in more detail below. . . .

New subsection 148.1(4) contains rules that apply when an amount is transferred from one EFA account to another EFA account of the same or another person.

Paragraph 148.1(4)(a) deems the transfer to be a distribution from the transferor EFA account. If the individual from whose account the amount is transferred is alive at the time of the transfer, that individual is deemed to be the recipient of the distribution. Otherwise, the recipient is deemed to be the individual to whose EFA account the amount is transferred. This deeming provision ensures that subsection 148.1(3) applies to the transfer. Consequently, the transferred amount will be included in computing the income of the deemed recipient, except to the extent that the transferred amount exceeds the income accumulated in the transferor EFA account.

Paragraph 148.1(4)(b) deems the amount transferred to be a contribution made (otherwise than by way of transfer) under the recipient EFA account. This ensures that the income portion of the transferred amount (which is included in income, under subsection 148.1(3), as a distribution from the transferor account) is considered to be a "relevant contribution" in respect of the recipient EFA account (which it would not otherwise be, because of the definition "relevant contribution" in subsection 148.1(1)). This allows it to subsequently be withdrawn from the recipient EFA account on a tax-free basis.

New subsection 148.1(5) provides that new subsection 148.1(4) does not apply when the entire balance of an individual's EFA account is transferred to another EFA account of the same individual and the transferor EFA account is terminated immediately after the transfer. Consequently, there will be no deemed distribution resulting from such a transfer.

The following examples illustrate the application of the amendments to subsection 148.1.

Paul sets up an EFA account for the pre-funding of his funeral expenses. He contributes $10,000 to his account, and earns $7,000 of interest in the account. Paul transfers $3,000 to an EFA account which he establishes for his daughter, Gaby.

The transferred amount is deemed to be a distribution to Paul under new paragraph 148.1(4)(a). Consequently, Paul includes in his income, under subsection 148.1(3), an amount of $3,000, which is the lesser of

- $3,000, which is the amount distributed, and
- $7,000, which is the amount determined by the formula under subsection 148.1(3):

A + B – C (where C = D – E) = $17,000 + $0 – ($10,000 – $0)

The transfer is treated, in effect, as a distribution of a portion of the income accumulated in the plan.

Under new paragraph 148.1(4)(b), the transferred amount is also deemed to be a contribution made, other than by way of transfer, to Gaby's EFA account. Thus, the $3,000 is considered to be a relevant contribution in respect of Gaby's EFA account, and can subsequently be withdrawn tax-free.

Example 2

The facts are the same as in Example 1, except that Paul transfers $13,000 to Gaby's EFA.

The transferred amount is deemed to be a distribution to Paul under new paragraph 148.1(4)(a). Consequently, Paul includes in his income, under subsection 148.1(3), an amount of $7,000, which is the lesser of

- $13,000, which is the amount distributed, and
- $7,000, which is the amount determined by the formula under subsection 148.1(3):

The transfer is treated, in effect, as a distribution of all of the income accumulated in the plan ($7,000), which is taxable, plus a return of a portion of the relevant contributions in respect of the EFA ($6,000), which is not taxable.

Under new paragraph 148.1(4)(b), the transferred amount is also deemed to be a contribution made, other than by way of transfer, to Gaby's EFA account. This has no particular significance with respect to the portion of the transfer that represents relevant contributions in respect of Paul's EFA account, since this amount would be considered to be a relevant contribution to Gaby's EFA account under the existing rules. However, it does have significance with respect to the portion of the transfer that represents income in Paul's EFA account, in that it allows that portion to become a relevant contribution in respect of Gaby's EFA account which can then be withdrawn from Gaby's account tax-free.

The facts are the same as in Example 2. After the transfer of $13,000, the balance in Paul's EFA account is $4,000, all of which represents relevant contributions in respect of the account. Over the next few years, the account earns an additional $2,500 of interest. Paul then withdraws the entire balance from the account.

The withdrawal is a distribution under subsection 148.1(3). Consequently, Paul includes $2,500 in his income, which is the lesser of:

- $6,500, which is the amount of the withdrawal, and
- $2,500, which is the amount determined by the formula under subsection 148.1(3):

A + B – C (where C = D – E) = $6,500 + 0 – ($10,000 – $6,000)

The value of E ($6,000) is the excess of the amount that was previously transferred and to which subsection 148.1(4) applied ($13,000) over the portion of that amount that was included in income under subsection 148.1(3) ($7,000).

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 108(1), will amend para. 149(1)(d.5) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after May 8, 2000.

Notwithstanding subsec. 152(4) to (5), any assessment of a taxpayer's tax payable under the Act for any taxation year that began before February 27, 2004 is to be made that is necessary to give effect to the amendment.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Paragraph 149(1)(d.5) exempts from tax, subject to an income test, the taxable income of any corporation, commission or association at least 90% of the capital of which is owned by one or more municipalities in Canada.

In accordance with the Tax Court of Canada decision in Otineka Development Corporation Limited and 72902 Manitoba Limited v. The Queen, 94 D.T.C. 1234, [1994] 1 C.T.C. 2424, an entity could be considered a municipality for the purpose of this paragraph on the basis of the functions it exercised. More recently, however, the decision in Tawich Development Corporation v. Deputy Minister of Revenue of Que- bec, [1997] 2 C.N.L.R. 187 (Que. Civil Chamber), aff'd 2001 D.T.C. 5144 (Que. C.A.), a decision under the Taxation Act (Quebec), held that an entity could not attain the status of a municipality by exercising municipal functions but only by statute, letters patent or order. From a tax policy perspective, it is desired that the entities previously entitled to the exemption on the basis of the Otineka decision continue to have access to the exemption. This amendment resolves the uncertainty resulting from the two conflicting cases. The exemption in paragraph 149(1)(d.5) is therefore extended to include any corporation, commission or association at least 90% of the capital of which was owned by one or more entities each of which is a municipal or public body performing a function of government in Canada, which is consistent with the bodies described in paragraph 149(1)(c).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Sept. 10, 2002:

Dear [xxx]:

I am writing to inform you of my intention to recommend to the Minister of Finance that, as a result of the recent decision of the Quebec Court of Appeal in Tawich Development Corporation v. Deputy Minister of Revenue of Quebec ([2000] 3 C.N.L.R. 383), the federal Income Tax Act (ITA) be amended to provide that certain exemptions and deductions currently applicable in respect of municipalities also be applied in respect of municipal or public bodies performing a function of government in Canada. Prior to discussing this matter with my Minister, though, I want to set out the relevant background information for you and solicit your views.

Under paragraph 149(1)(d.5) of the ITA, no tax is payable under Part I on the taxable income of a corporation, commission or association owned by a municipality. Until recently, Indian Act bands were often considered municipalities for income tax purposes on the basis of the functions they exercised and, on this basis, many corporations owned by Indian Act bands were exempted from Part I tax under paragraph 149(1)(d.5). However, as a result of the decision in Tawich, in which the court held that an entity can only attain the status of a municipality through constituting documents of a province, the Canada Customs and Revenue Agency (CCRA) has advised us that it could no longer treat Indian Act bands as municipalities for income tax purposes. Therefore, without legislative changes, corporations owned by Indian Act bands would no longer be exempt from Part I tax under paragraph 149(1)(d.5).

In order to ensure the continued application of an exemption from Part I tax for Indian Act band corporations, I am prepared to recommend expanding the exemption under paragraph 149(1)(d.5) (and related provisions under section 149) to include corporations, commissions and associations owned by a municipal or public body performing a function of government. This will have the effect of ensuring that the taxable income of corporations owned by Indian Act bands continues to be exempt from Part I tax insofar as Indian bands are public bodies performing a function of government in Canada. The current geographic restriction found in paragraph 149(1)(d.5) will also apply to corporations, commissions and associations owned by a municipal or public body performing a function of government. Therefore, the exemption from Part I income tax will only be available to Indian Act band corporations, commissions and associations that earn substantially all of their taxable income on reserve.

In addition, under current subsections 110.1(1) and 118.1(1) of the ITA, corporations may deduct amounts from taxable income that constitute a charitable or ecological gift to, inter alia, a municipality. I am also prepared to recommend expanding the scope of these provisions to also allow deductions for charitable or ecological gifts to a municipal or public body performing a function of government in Canada. It is my understanding that this proposal is consistent with what is currently the administrative practice of the Canada Customs and Revenue Agency (CCRA).

My officials have informed me that these proposed amendments should have little, if any, impact on either federal or provincial revenues insofar as what is proposed is to legislate what has been a long-standing administrative practice. If you would like further information on this proposal, please contact Mr. Paul Rochon ((613) 996-9447), Director of Intergovernmental Tax Policy, Research and Evaluation Division or we can discuss this matter at the meeting of the Federal-Provincial Committee on Taxation on October 4, 2002.

Sincerely,

Stephen R. Richardson [Senior Assistant Deputy Minister]

(d.6) subsidiaries of municipal corporations — subject to subsections (1.2) and (1.3), a particular corporation all of the shares (except directors' qualifying shares) or of the capital of which was owned by one or more entities (referred to in this paragraph as "qualifying owners") each of which is, for the period, a corporation, commission or association to which paragraph (d.5) applies, a corporation to which this paragraph applies, a municipality in Canada, or a municipal or public body performing a function of government in Canada, if no more than 10% of the particular corporation's income for the period is from activities carried on outside

Technical Notes: Paragraphs 149(1)(c) to (d.6) exempt from tax under Part I of the Act the taxable income of any corporation, commission or association the shares or the capital of which are owned 100% (or in some cases 90%) by the federal or provincial Crown, by municipalities and public bodies performing a function of government in Canada, or by Crown corporations, municipal corporations or certain other corporations jointly or indirectly held by the Crown or municipalities in Canada.

Currently, a corporation that is jointly held by a municipality directly and a municipal corporation (i.e., by a municipality indirectly through a municipal holding corporation) with neither shareholder holding an interest of at least 90% is not captured by the exemptions from Part I tax under paragraphs 149(1)(c) to (d.6).

Paragraph 149(1)(d.6) is amended such that a particular corporation will be exempt from tax under Part I of the Act if all of the shares (except directors' qualifying shares) or of the capital of the particular corporation are owned by one or more entities each of which is a corporation, commission or association to which paragraph (d.5) applies, a corporation to which paragraph (d.6) applies, a municipality in Canada, or a municipal or public body performing a function of government in Canada (collectively referred to as "qualifying owners") provided the remaining existing conditions of that paragraph are satisfied. The particular corporation will qualify for exempt status under that paragraph only if no more than 10% of its income is from activities carried on outside the geographic boundaries of its qualifying owners.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 5, 2004:

Dear [xxx]:

I am responding to your letter to me of March 17, 2004 and discussions with Stephanie Smith concerning the tax-exempt status of an amalgamated corporation ("[xxx]"). Once amalgamated, [xxx] will be approximately 59% owned by Municipality A and 41% owned by Municipality B. However, while Municipality A will directly own 59% of [xxx] Municipality B will indirectly own 41% of [xxx] due to the interposition of a [xxx] which is wholly owned by Municipality B.

In general, paragraphs 149(1)(c) through (d.6) of the Act exempt from tax under Part I of the Act municipalities in Canada, Crown corporations and municipal corporations, as well as certain other corporations jointly or indirectly owned by the Crown or municipalities in Canada. With respect to corporations owned by municipalities, the following combinations are provided for in the Act:

- paragraph 149(1)(d.3) — a corporation not less than 90% of the shares of which are owned by one or more municipalities in Canada in combination with one or more persons each of which is Canada, a province, a corporation all of the shares of which are owned by Canada or a province, or a wholly-owned subsidiary of such a corporation;
- paragraph 149(1)(d.5) — subject to an income and control test, a corporation not less than 90% of the capital of which is owned by one or more municipalities in Canada;
- paragraph 149(1)(d.6) — subject to an income and control test, a corporation all of the shares of which are owned by one or more persons each of which is a corporation to which paragraph 149(1)(d.5) or (d.6) itself applies.

You have asked us to recommend an amendment to the Act such that a corporation all of the shares of which are held by a combination of municipalities and corporations described in paragraph 149(1)(d.5) of the Act, will also qualify as a tax exempt corporation.

We consider the requested amendment to be consistent with the underlying policy objective of the provision; consequently, we are prepared to recommend that the Income Tax Act be amended to provide that a corporation will be exempt from tax under Part I of the Act provided that all of the shares of the corporation are owned by one or more municipalities in Canada in combination with one or more persons each of which is a corporation to which paragraph 149(1)(d.5) or 149(1)(d.6) applies for the period. Furthermore, our recommendation would be that the amendment be effective after April 30, 2004.

While I cannot offer any assurance that our recommendation in this matter will be accepted, I hope our statement of intent in this letter will be helpful in responding to your concern.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislative Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 149(1)(o.2)(iii)(B)

(B) that had not accepted deposits or issued bonds, notes, debentures or similar obligations, and

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), s. 31, will amend cl. 149(1)(o.2)(iii)(B) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994.

Technical Notes: Subsection 248(26) identifies circumstances in which an obligation of a person (referred to as the "debtor") will be regarded as having been issued as a debt obligation of the debtor. This provision applies where a debtor becomes liable to repay borrowed money, or becomes liable to pay an amount (other than interest) as consideration for any property acquired by the debtor or services rendered to the debtor or an amount that is deductible in computing the debtor's income. Although introduced principally for the purposes of the debt forgiveness rules in section 80 and for certain other purposes, this rule has general application for the purposes of the Act.

Under clause 149(1)(o.2)(iii)(B), a tax-exempt pension investment corporation cannot issue debt obligations. The amendment to clause 149(1)(o.2)(iii)(B) ensures that a pension investment corporation does not lose its tax-exempt status solely by the operation of subsection 248(26).

(c) the exercise of the rights referred to in paragraph (b) would result in the entity not being a person described in any of paragraphs (1)(d.1) to (d.6) at the particular time, the entity is deemed not to be, at the particular time, a person described in any of paragraphs (1)(d) to (d.6).

History: Subsec. 149(1.1) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 145(6), applicable to taxation years and fiscal periods that begin after 1998 except that, where a corporation, commission or association so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before December 31, 2001 (six months after the end of the month of Royal Assent), the reference to "at a particular time" in the subsec. shall be read as a reference to "at any time after November 1999". Subsec. 149(1.1) formerly read:

(1.1) Paragraphs (1)(d) to (d.6) do not apply to a corporation, commission or association during a period in which a person other than Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province or a municipality in Canada had a right under a contract, in equity or otherwise, either immediately or in the future and either absolutely or contingently to, or to acquire, shares or capital of the corporation, commission or association.

Subsec. 149(1.1) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 178(4), applicable to taxation years and fiscal periods that begin after 1998.

(1.11) Election [to remain taxable — 1999 transition] — Subsection (1) does not apply in respect of a person's taxable income for a particular taxation year that begins after 1998 where

(a) paragraph (1)(d) did not apply in respect of the person's taxable income for the person's last taxation year that began before 1999;

(b) paragraph (1)(d.2), (d.3) or (d.4) would, but for this subsection, have applied in respect of the person's taxable income for the person's first taxation year that began after 1998;

(c) there has been no change in the direct or indirect control of the person during the period that

(i) began at the beginning of the person's first taxation year that began after 1998, and

(ii) ends at the end of the particular year;

(d) the person elects in writing before 2002 that this subsection apply; and

(e) the person has not notified the Minister in writing before the particular year that the election has been revoked.

Related Provisions: 149(1.12) — Vertical amalgamation.

History: Subsec. 149(1.11) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 145(6), applicable to taxation years and fiscal periods that begin after 1998 except that an election referred to in the subsec., as amended, filed with the Minister of National Revenue on or before December 31, 2001 (six months after the end of the month of Royal Assent), is deemed to have been filed in accordance with the subsection.

Proposed Addition — 149(1.12)

(1.12) Deemed election — If at any time there is an amalgamation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1)) of a corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "parent") and one or more other corporations (each of which in this subsection is referred to as the "subsidiary") each of which is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation of the parent, and immediately before that time the parent is a person to which subsection (1) does not apply by reason of the application of subsection (1.11), the new corporation is deemed, for purposes of subsection (1.11), to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the parent.

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 44(2), will add subsec. 149(1.12), applicable to amalgamations that occur after October 4, 2004.

Technical Notes: Subsection 149(1.11) allows a person that would otherwise become tax exempt because the conditions in any of paragraphs 149(1)(d.2) to (d.4) have been satisfied, to remain taxable by filing a written election to that effect. This subsection was added when the addition of paragraphs 149(1)(d.2) to (d.4) would have caused some previously taxable persons to become tax exempt. The election to remain taxable is required to have been made before 2002 and is effective only so long as, among certain other conditions, there is no change in the direct or indirect control of the electing person.

In the context of amalgamations, the Act generally treats an amalgamated corporation as a new corporation for income tax purposes. As such, if a particular corporation amalgamates with a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation pursuant to section 87, the effect of an election made by the particular corporation under subsection 149(1.11) would not be carried over to the new amalgamated corporation.

New subsection 149(1.12) is added to provide that if there is an amalgamation under subsection 87(1) between a parent corporation and one or more subsidiary wholly-owned corporations, and immediately before the amalgamation the parent is a person to which subsection 149(1) does not apply because of an election under subsection 149(1.11), the new corporation is deemed for the purposes of subsection 149(1.11) to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the parent corporation.

For this purpose, the term "subsidiary wholly-owned corporation" is to be read as it is defined under subsection 248(1).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 6, 2004:

Mr. Don Thompson, Vice President, Finance and Administration, SGI Canada Insurance Services Ltd., Regina, SK

Dear Mr. Thompson:

I am writing in response to your letter of October 4, 2004 to Mr. Denis Normand of the Business Income Tax Division and further to subsequent discussions with Stephanie Smith of the Tax Legislation Division concerning the election in subsection 149(1.11) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). You have asked us to amend the Act such that a new corporate entity formed as a result of an amalgamation, particularly in the case of a vertical amalgamation, is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, a predecessor parent corporation with respect to any election made by that predecessor parent corporation pursuant to subsection 149(1.11) of the Act.

Subsection 149(1.11) was added to the Act following an amendment to paragraph 149(1)(d) and the addition of paragraphs 149(1)(d.2) to (d.4). Those amendments caused some entities that were previously taxable to become exempt. The result was appropriate from a tax policy standpoint, however, it may not have been beneficial for a limited number of entities since it would trigger the application of subsection 149(10). As result, subsection 149(1.11) was added to allow an entity, that became exempt because of any of paragraphs 149(1)(d.2) to (d.4), to elect in writing to retain its taxable status. Two conditions apply for the entity to retain its taxable status: (i) the election had to be made before 2002 and (ii) there can be no change in the direct or indirect control of the entity.

You have brought to our attention the situation of SGI Canada Insurance Services Ltd. ("SGI"). SGI holds a Saskatchewan provincial insurers' licence and is licensed to conduct business in Manitoba and Ontario. SGI was affected by the addition of paragraphs 149(1)(d.2) to (d.4). SGI wanted to remain a taxable entity in order to obtain insurance licences in other provinces and therefore made an election in accordance with subsection 149(1.11). We assume that there has been no change in the direct or indirect control of SGI since the election was made. SGI wholly owns Coachman Insurance Company ("Coachman") which holds an [xxx] provincial insurers' licence. Coachman is a taxable entity.

SGI would like to amalgamate with Coachman pursuant to subsection 87(1) of the Act, to improve the capitalization of Coachman for regulatory purposes, to reduce administrative costs and to utilize losses carried forward in the corporate group. Although a windup would achieve the same objectives, and allow the election made by SGI under subsection 149(1.11) to remain intact, it is not feasible from a commercial standpoint because of the volume of contracts, licences, leases and other agreements that would have to be assigned.

In general, the Act treats an amalgamated corporation as a new corporation for tax purposes. There are some exceptions to this rule where, for specific purposes, the amalgamated corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation. Section 149 is not one of the exceptions.

SGI is of the view that the amalgamated company needs to remain a taxable entity. SGI is currently selling insurance in Manitoba and Ontario and is looking to expand into other provinces. I understand that SGI believes that being a tax-exempt entity would likely impair the current operations, and also hamper future expansion. Tax-exempt status may be considered by provincial regulators to be an unfair advantage over existing insurers currently operating in those jurisdictions.

As I trust you can appreciate, an important concern in respect of the application of section 149 is the maintenance of competitive equity in the commercial marketplace. We have carefully considered your situation and have concluded that, by allowing amalgamated SGI and Coachman to remain taxable, our concern for competitive equity does not arise. As such we prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended to provide that where one corporation (the "Parent") vertically amalgamates with a wholly-owned subsidiary under section 87 of the Act, any election made by the Parent under subsection 149(1.11) is deemed to have been made by the amalgamated corporation.

While we cannot offer any assurance that our recommendation in this matter will be accepted, we hope our statement of intent in this letter will be helpful in responding to your concern.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Sept. 16, 2005:

Mr. Don Thompson, Vice President, Finance and Administration, SGI, Regina, SK

Dear Mr. Thompson:

I am writing in response to your letter of December 22, 2004 to Ms. Stephanie Smith of this Division. In that letter you refer to my letter to you dated December 6, 2004 regarding our intention to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Income Tax Act (the "Act") be amended to provide that where one corporation (the "Parent") vertically amalgamates with a wholly-owned subsidiary under section 87 of the Act, any election made by the Parent under subsection 149(1.11) is deemed to have been made by the amalgamated corporation. You have asked for clarification in two respects: (i) the definition of "wholly-owned subsidiary" and (ii) the effective date for the proposed amendment.

The Act contains two definitions of the term "subsidiary wholly-owned corporation". You have requested that the proposed amendment (discussed above) refer to the definition contained in subsection 248(1) of the Act and not the more restrictive definition contained in subsection 87(1.4) of the Act. We understand that if the more restrictive definition in subsection 87(1.4) was used SGI Canada Insurance Services Ltd. ("SGI") would not benefit from the amendment as Coachman Insurance Company ("Coachman") has issued directors' qualifying shares to meet a regulatory requirement in Ontario. It is our understanding that other than the directors' qualifying shares SGI wholly owns Coachman. Given the additional information that you have provided we will recommend that the amendment either refer to the definition of "subsidiary wholly-owned corporation" in subsection 248(1) or otherwise accommodate the situation where directors' qualifying shares have been issued.

We will further recommend that the amendment have application to amalgamations that occur after October 4, 2004, the date of your first letter to us on this matter. While we cannot offer any assurance that our recommendations in this matter will be accepted, we hope our statement of intent in this letter will be helpful in responding to your concern.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 108(4), will amend the portion of subsec. 149(1.2) before para. (b) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after May 8, 2000.

Notwithstanding subsec. 152(4) to (5), any assessment of a taxpayer's tax payable under the Act for any taxation year that began before February 27, 2004 is to be made that is necessary to give effect to the amendment.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 149(1.2) excludes, for the purposes of paragraphs 149(1)(d.5) and (d.6), certain income from the determination of where an entity to which either of those paragraphs applies derives its income. As a consequence of the amendment to paragraph 149(1)(d.5), a written agreement in subsection 149(1.2) is expanded to include reference to a municipal or public body.

In addition, subparagraph 149(1.2)(a)(vi) is added to clarify that the geographical boundary of a municipal or public body performing a function of government in Canada is defined to be the area described in new subsection (11).

(1.2) For the purposes of paragraphs (1)(d.5) and (d.6), income of a corporation, commission or association from activities carried on outside the geographical boundaries of a municipality does not include income from activities carried on under an agreement in writing between

(a) the corporation, commission or association, and

(b) a person who is Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province or a municipality or corporation to which any of paragraphs (1)(d) to (d.6) applies and that is controlled by Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province or by a municipality in Canada within the geographical boundaries of,

(c) where the person is Her Majesty in right of Canada or a corporation controlled by Her Majesty in right of Canada, Canada,

Subsec. 149(1.2) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 178(4), applicable to taxation years and fiscal periods that begin after 1998.

(1.3) Capital ownership [by municipality] — For the purposes of paragraph (1)(d.5) and subsection (1.2), 90% of the capital of a corporation that has issued share capital is owned by one or more municipalities only when the municipalities own shares of the capital stock of the corporation that give the municipalities 90% or more of the votes that could be cast under all circumstances at an annual meeting of shareholders of the corporation.

Proposed Amendment — 149(1.3)

(1.3) Votes or de facto control [by municipality or government] — Paragraphs (1)(d) to (d.6) do not apply in respect of a person's taxable income for a period in a taxation year if at any time during the period

(a) the person is a corporation shares of the capital stock of which are owned by one or more other persons that, in total, give them more than 10% of the votes that could be cast at a meeting of shareholders of the corporation, other than shares that are owned by one or more persons each of which is

(i) Her Majesty in right of Canada or of a province,

(ii) a municipality in Canada,

(iii) a municipal or public body performing a function of government in Canada, or

(iv) a corporation, a commission or an association, to which any of paragraphs (1)(d) to (d.6) apply; or

(b) the person is, or would be if the person were a corporation, controlled, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, by a person, or by a group of persons that includes a person, who is not

(i) Her Majesty in right of Canada or of a province,

(ii) a municipality in Canada,

(iii) a municipal or public body performing a function of government in Canada, or

(iv) a corporation, a commission or an association, to which any of paragraphs (1)(d) to (d.6) apply.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 108(5), will amend subsec. 149(1.3) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after May 8, 2000 except that for those taxation years that began before December 21, 2002, it is to be read as follows:

(1.3) For the purposes of paragraph (1)(d.5) and subsection (1.2), 90% of the capital of a corporation that has issued share capital is owned by one or more entities, each of which is a municipality or a municipal or public body, only if the entities own shares of the capital stock of the corporation that give the entities 90% or more of the votes that could be cast under all circumstances at an annual meeting of shareholders of the corporation.

Notwithstanding subsec. 152(4) to (5), any assessment of a taxpayer's tax payable under the Act for any taxation year that began before February 27, 2004 is to be made that is necessary to give effect to the amendment.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 149(1.3) provides that, for the purposes of applying paragraph 149(1)(d.5) and subsection 149(1.2) to a corporation, 90% of the capital of the corporation is considered to be owned by one or more municipalities only if the municipalities are entitled to at least 90% of the votes associated with the shares of the corporation.

As a consequence of the amendment to paragraph 149(1)(d.5), subsection 149(1.3) is amended applicable to taxation years that begin after May 8, 2000, to include reference to municipal or public bodies performing a function of government in Canada.

In addition, subsection 149(1.3) is replaced, applicable to taxation years that begin after December 20, 2002, to provide that paragraphs 149(1)(d) to (d.6) do not apply to exempt a person's taxable income for a period in a taxation year in two cases.

First, under new paragraph 149(1.3)(a), a corporation is not exempt from tax on its taxable income for a period in a taxation year if at any time during the period the corporation has issued shares that are owned by one or more persons (other than certain tax-exempts) that, in total, give them more than 10% of the votes that could be cast at a meeting of shareholders. For this purpose, it is necessary to determine whether more than 10% of the votes could be cast at a meeting of the shareholders by a person or persons other than:

- Her Majesty in right of Canada or of a province,
- a municipality in Canada,
- a municipal or public body performing a function of government in Canada, or
- a commission, an association or a corporation, to which any of paragraphs 149(1)(d) to (d.6) apply.

Second, under new paragraph 149(1.3)(b), a person is not exempt because of any of paragraphs 149(1)(d) to (d.6) from tax on taxable income for a period in a taxation year if at any time in the period the person is, or would be if the person were a corporation, controlled, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, by a person (or by a group of persons that includes a person) other than:

- Her Majesty in right of Canada or of a province,
- a municipality in Canada,
- a municipal or public body performing a function of government in Canada, or
- a commission, an association or a corporation, to which any of paragraphs 149(1)(d) to (d.6) apply.

For further details about the expression "controlled, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever", reference should be made to subsections 256(5.1) and (6). In general, the expression refers to a controller, who has any direct or indirect influence that, if exercised, would result in control in fact of the person.

History: Subsec. 149(1.3) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 178(4), applicable to taxation years and fiscal periods that begin after 1998.

(2) Determination of income — For the purposes of paragraphs (1)(e), (i), (j) and (l), in computing the part, if any, of any income that was payable to or otherwise available for the personal benefit of any person or the total of any amounts that is not less than a percentage specified in any of those paragraphs of any income for a period, the amount of such income shall be deemed to be the amount thereof determined on the assumption that the amount of any taxable capital gain or allowable capital loss is nil.

History: Subsec. 149(2) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 88(2), applicable to 1992 et seq. Subsec. (2) formerly read:

> (2) Income not to include taxable capital gains — For the purposes of paragraphs (1)(e), (i), (j) and (l), in computing the part, if any, of any income that was payable to or otherwise available for the personal benefit of any person or the total of any amounts that is not less than a percentage specified in any of those paragraphs of any income for a period, the amount of that income shall be deemed to be the amount thereof otherwise determined less the amount of any taxable capital gains included therein.

(3) Application of subsec. (1) — Subsection (1) does not apply in respect of the taxable income of a benevolent or fraternal society or order from carrying on a life insurance business or, for greater certainty, from the sale of property used by it in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of, carrying on a life insurance business.

(4) Idem — For the purposes of subsection (3), the taxable income of a benevolent or fraternal benefit society or order from carrying on a life insurance business shall be computed on the assumption that it had no income or loss from any other sources.

(4.1) Income exempt under 149(1)(t) — Subject to subsection (4.2), subsection (1) applies to an insurer described in paragraph (1)(t) only in respect of the part of its taxable income for a taxation year determined by the formula

A is its taxable income for the year;

B is

(a.1) for the purpose of computing the corporation's income for its first taxation year ending after that time, the corporation shall be deemed to have deducted under sections 20, 138 and 140 in computing its income for its taxation year ending immediately before that time, the greatest amount that could have been claimed or deducted for that year as a reserve under those sections;

Proposed Amendment — 149(10)(c)

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 108(6), will amend para. 149(11) to substitute "127(5) to (36)" for "127(5) to (26)", applicable to each corporation that after 2006 becomes or ceases to be exempt from tax on its taxable income under Part I of the Act.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 149(10) applies where, at a particular time, a corporation becomes or ceases to be exempt from tax under Part I on its taxable income (otherwise than by reason of the exemption for certain insurers in paragraph 149(1)(t)). A new taxation year is considered to start at the particular time and the corporation's properties are deemed to have been disposed of at fair market value and reacquired at the particular time for the same amount.

Paragraph 149(10)(c) provides that the corporation is, for specified purposes in the Act, treated as a new corporation. One of the specified purposes is with regard to the investment tax credit regime set out in subsections 127(5) to (26). Paragraph 149(10)(c) is amended to also refer to subsections 127(27) to (36), consequential to the earlier enactment of those subsections.

(d) where, immediately before the disposition time, the corporation's cumulative eligible capital in respect of a business exceeds the total of

(i) ¾ of the fair market value of the eligible capital property in respect of the business, and

(ii) the amount otherwise deducted under paragraph 20(1)(b) in computing the corporation's income from the business for the taxation year that ended immediately before that time, the excess shall be deducted under paragraph 20(1)(b) in computing the corporation's income from the business for the taxation year that ended immediately before that time.

History: Paras. 149(10)(a), (b) to (d) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsecs. 178(5), (6), applicable to a corporation that becomes or ceases to be exempt from tax on its taxable income under Part I of the Act after April 26, 1995. Those paras. formerly read:

(a) the taxation year of the corporation that would otherwise have included that time shall be deemed to have ended immediately before that time and a new taxation year of the corporation shall be deemed to have commenced at that time;

(b) the corporation shall be deemed to have disposed, immediately before the time that is immediately before that time, of each property (other than, where, at that time, the corporation ceases to be exempt from tax under this Part on its taxable income, a Canadian resource property or a foreign resource property) that was owned by it immediately before that time for an amount equal to its fair market value at that time and to have reacquired the property at that time at a cost equal to that fair market value;

(c) where paragraph (b) applies in respect of depreciable property of the corporation and the capital cost thereof to the corporation immediately before the disposition exceeds the fair market value thereof at that time, for the purposes of sections 13 and 20 and any regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a),

(i) the capital cost of the property to the corporation at that time shall be deemed to be the amount that was its capital cost thereof immediately before the disposition, and

(ii) the excess shall be deemed to have been allowed to the corporation in respect of the property under regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a) in computing its income for taxation years ending before that time; and

(d) notwithstanding section 111, no amount is deductible in computing the corporation's taxable income for a taxation year ending after that time in respect of a non-capital loss, net capital loss, restricted farm loss, farm loss or limited partnership loss for a taxation year ending before that time to the extent that the loss could have been applied to reduce the corporation's taxable income for taxation years ending before that time.

(11) [Repealed]

History: Subsec. 149(11) repealed by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 178(7), in force on June 18, 1998. Subsec. 149(11) formerly read:

(11) Exception — Subsection (10) does not apply to a corporation that ceases to be exempt from tax under this Part after November 12, 1981 by reason of control of the corporation being acquired by a person or persons pursuant to an agreement in writing entered into on or before that date.

Proposed Addition — 149(11)

(11) Geographical boundaries — body performing government functions — For the purpose of this section, the geographical boundaries of a municipal or public body performing a function of government are

(a) the geographical boundaries that encompass the area in respect of which an Act of Parliament or an agreement given effect by an Act of Parliament recognizes or grants to the body a power to impose taxes; or

(b) if paragraph (a) does not apply, the geographical boundaries within which that body has been authorized by the laws of Canada or of a province to exercise that function.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 108(7), will add subsec. 149(11), applicable to taxation years that begin after May 8, 2000.

Notwithstanding subsec. 152(4) to (5), any assessment of a taxpayer's tax payable under the Act for any taxation year that began before February 27, 2004 shall be made that is necessary to give effect to the amendment.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 149(11) is added to define, for the purposes of section 149, the geographical boundaries of a municipal or public body performing a function of government in Canada. Those boundaries are defined as encompassing the area in respect of which an Act of Parliament or an agreement given effect by an Act of Parliament recognizes or grants to the body a power to impose taxes; or if there has been no such recognition or grant, the area within which the body has been authorized by the laws of Canada or of a province to exercise that function.

For example, if a particular self-governing First Nation meets the definition of "a public body performing a function of government in Canada," it is intended that the relevant geographic boundary would delineate the area where the self-government agreement, or the statute enacting self-government powers, provides the First Nation authority to impose direct taxes. As a second example, if a particular Indian Band meets the definition of "a public body performing a function of government in Canada," it is intended that the geographic boundary of the Indian Band be the band's reserves as defined in the Indian Act. Similarly, if a particular school board meets the definition of "a municipal or public body performing a function of government in Canada" it is intended that the geographic boundary of the school board be the area of jurisdiction of the board as defined by provincial legislation or regulation.

(12) Information returns — Every person who, because of paragraph (1)(e) or (l), is exempt from tax under this Part on all or part of the person's taxable income shall, within 6 months after the end of each fiscal period of the person and without notice or demand therefor, file with the Minister an information return for the period in prescribed form and containing prescribed information, if

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is a taxable dividend or an amount received or receivable by the person as, on account of, in lieu of or in satisfaction of, interest, rentals or royalties in the period exceeds $10,000;

(b) at the end of the person's preceding fiscal period the total assets of the person (determined in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles) exceeded $200,000; or

(c) an information return was required to be filed under this subsection by the person for a preceding fiscal period.

Related Provisions: 149.1(14) — Charity or RCAAA information return; 162(7)(a) — Penalty for failure to file; 233 — Demand for information return.

(ii) by a person, or by a group of persons that do not deal at arm's length with each other, if the person or any member of the group does not deal at arm's length with a person described in subparagraph (i);

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 109(3), will amend paras. (c) and (d) of the definition "charitable organization" in subsec. 149.1(1) to read as above, applicable after 1999 except that, in respect of a charitable organization that was not designated before 2000 as a private foundation or a public foundation under subsec. 149.1(6.3) or under subsec. 110(8.1) or (8.2), as enacted by R.S.C. 1952, c. 148 [repealed; see Pre-RSC History to 110(8.1), (8.2) on TaxPartner or Taxnet Pro], and that has not applied after February 15, 1984 for registration under para. 110(8)(c) of that Act [repealed; see Pre-RSC History to 110(8)] or under 248(1)"registered charity", subparas. (c)(ii) and (iii) of the definition "charitable organization", as amended, are applicable after the earlier of the day, if any, on which the organization is designated after 1999 as a private foundation or a public foundation under subsec. 149.1(6.3), and December 31, 2004.

Technical Notes (July 2010): The definition "charitable organization" provides that more than 50% of the directors, trustees, officers or similar officials of a charitable organization must deal with each other and with each of the other directors, trustees, officers or similar officials at arm's length.

For a charity that has applied for registration after February 15, 1984 and which has been designated as a private or public foundation, the definition "charitable organization" also requires that not more than 50% of the charity's capital be contributed by a person or group of persons not dealing with each other at arm's length. This definition is amended to replace the "contribution" test with a "control" test. As a result, a charity will not be disqualified from being treated as a charitable organization solely because a person, or a group of persons not dealing with each other at arm's length, has contributed more than 50% of the charity's capital. However, such a person or group is not permitted to control the charity in any way, nor may the person or the members of the group represent more than 50% of the directors, trustees, officers and similar officials of the charity.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Sept. 11, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

I am responding to your recent inquiry concerning the capital restriction in the definition of charitable organization of not more than 50% of the capital contributed to the organization by one person or a group of persons not dealing at arm's length.

This matter has been brought to our attention recently in the context that it could have unintentional implications prohibiting large one-time donations.

From a tax policy perspective, we agree that the income tax provisions should not have the effect of prohibiting or limiting charitable giving. Under the current definition of "charitable organization", the capital restriction of not more than 50% could unintentionally have that effect.

Consequently, and in light of the other restrictions in the income tax provisions including disbursements requirements, we are recommending to the Minister of Finance that the definition "charitable organization" in subsection 149.1(1) of the Act be amended to ensure that in certain circumstances large donations are not prohibited. In particular, we are recommending the replacement of the current contribution test with a post-donation test. This test will require that, at all times after the donation, any person (or group of persons not dealing at arm's length) contributing more than 50% of the capital of the organization must deal at arm's length with more than half of the directors, trustees and officers of the organization, and must not have any direct or indirect influence over the organization such that, if exercised, it would be reasonable to conclude that the person (or group) controls the organization or one or more activities of the organization.

We are recommending that such an amendment apply for the purpose of determining an organization's status after 1999. If the recommendation is acted upon, we anticipate that the amendment would be included in a future income tax technical bill.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber
General Director, Tax Legislation Division

CRA news release, July 11, 2007: Charities Directorate begins administering proposed changes relating to new tests for designation of charities

The Charities Directorate is now administering the proposed changes to the definitions of "charitable organization" and "public foundation", which also affects the concept of "private foundation" as defined in the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). The new definitions are included in Bill C-33 [later Bill C-10, then the July 16, 2010 draft legislation, still not enacted as of February 2011 — ed.], Income Tax Amendments Act, 2006.

Bill C-33 [now the July 16, 2010 draft legislation — ed.] replaces the "contribution test" with a new "control test". The former definitions used a "contribution test" whereby if a person, or group of persons not dealing with each other at arm's length, contributed more than 50% of the charity's capital, that charity could only be designated as a private foundation.

Under the new "control test", a charity will not be disqualified from being treated as a charitable organization or public foundation based solely on the source of its funding. Instead, the "control test" allows a person, or group of related persons, to contribute more than 50% of the charity's capital provided they do not control the charity in any way. In addition, this person, or members of the related group, may not represent more than 50% of the directors, trustees, officers and similar officials of the charity. Failure to satisfy the "control test" will result in a charity being designated as a private foundation.

The Charities Directorate is now applying the "control test" in its review of applications for registration and re-designation. Applications for re-designation can be made retroactively for taxation years that begin after 1999. However, the proposed legislation contains a limited 90-day timeframe within which a registered charity can apply for re-designation for a prior taxation year. As such, registered charities have until 90 days after Bill C-33 [now the July 16, 2010 draft legislation — ed.] receives Royal Assent to apply for retroactive re-designation. Applications received after that date will still fall under these new rules, but the re-designation will only become effective for future taxation years.

A "What's New" will be posted on the Directorate's Web site advising charities of the date on which Bill C-33 [now the July 16, 2010 draft legislation — ed.] receives Royal Assent and the date on which the 90-day period expires.

The Charities Directorate is currently developing guidelines for applying the new "control test" with respect to registered charities. The guidelines will be available in the near future on the Directorate's Web site at: www.cra.gc.ca/charities.

> (b) as if the references to "50%" in para. (b) of the definition were read as "75%".

Technical Notes (July 2010): The definition "public foundation" provides that more than 50% of the directors, trustees, officers or similar officials of a public foundation must deal with each other and with each of the other directors, trustees, officers or similar officials at arm's length.

This definition requires that not more than 50% (75% in some cases) of the foundation's capital can be contributed by a person or group of persons not dealing with each together at arm's length. The "contribution" test in the definition is replaced by a "control" test. As a result, a foundation will not be disqualified from being treated as a public foundation solely because a person, or a group of persons not dealing with each other at arm's length, has contributed more than 50% of the foundation's capital. However, such a person or group is not permitted to control the foundation in any way, nor may the person or the members of the group represent more than 50% of the directors, trustees, officers and similar officials of the foundation.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 13, 2002:

Dear [xxx]:

I am writing in response to your letter dated November 14, 2002, in which you requested that the definition of a "public foundation" in the Income Tax Act be amended in a manner similar to the change that has been proposed in respect of charitable organizations.

In particular, we have agreed to recommend an amendment that will replace the current contribution test for charitable organizations with a test applying after a donation is made. Under this test, any person (or group of persons not dealing at arm's length) contributing more than 50% of the capital of the organization must deal at arm's length with more than half of the directors, trustees and officers of the organization, and must not have any direct or indirect influence over the organization such that, if exercised, it would be reasonable to conclude that the person (or group) controls the organization or one or more activities of the organization.

As the policy objectives for rules regarding the control of charitable organizations are similar to those for public foundations, we agree that it would be appropriate to recommend that the definitions of each remain similar in this respect. We will also recommend that such an amendment apply for the purpose of determining a foundation's status after 1999. If the recommendation is acted upon, we anticipate that the amendment would be included in a future technical bill.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber
General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(9) [Repealed]

History: Subsec. 149.1(9) repealed by 2010, c. 25, subsec. 37(8), applicable to taxation years that end after March 3, 2010. It formerly read:

(9) Idem [— if property not used for indicated purpose] — Property accumulated by a registered charity as provided in subsection (8), including any income earned in respect of that property, that is not used for the particular purpose for which it was accumulated either

(a) before the expiration of any period of time specified by the Minister in the Minister's approval of the accumulation, or

(b) at an earlier time at which the registered charity decides not to use the property for that purpose shall, notwithstanding subsection (8), be deemed to be income of the charity for, and the amount of a gift for which it issued a receipt described in subsection 110.1(2) or 118.1(2) in, its taxation year in which the period referred to in paragraph (a) expires or the time referred to in paragraph (b) occurs, as the case may be.

Proposed Amendment — Former 149.1(9) closing words is, notwithstanding subsection (8), deemed to be income of the charity for, and the eligible amount of a gift for which it issued a receipt described in subsection 110.1(2) or 118.1(2) in, its taxation year in which the period referred to in paragraph (a) expires or the time referred to in paragraph (b) occurs, as the case may be.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 109(8), will amend the closing words of subsec. 149.1(9) to read as above, applicable after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 149.1(8) permits a registered charity, with the approval of the Minister of National Revenue, to accumulate property over a specified period for a particular purpose. The amount of such property accumulated is deemed to have been expended in the taxation year of the charity in which it was accumulated. If in fact the charity defaults on this responsibility by not using the property for the approved purpose within the specified period, subsection 149.1(9) treats that property as income of the charity and the amount of a gift for which it issued a receipt. This affects the calculation of the disbursement quota of the charity, with the result that the amount of the property must be actually disbursed in the year following default.

Subsection 149.1(9) is amended consequential to the addition of new subsection 248(31), in respect of gifts made after December 20, 2002, to provide that the amount of a gift for which a tax receipt is issued refers to the "eligible amount" of a gift. For additional information, see the commentary to new subsection 248(31).

That portion of subsec. 149.1(9) following para. (b) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 123(5), applicable to 1988 et seq. That portion formerly read:

shall, notwithstanding subsection (8), be deemed to be income of the charity and the amount of a gift for which it issued a receipt described in paragraph 110.1(1)(a) or subsection 118.1(2) in its taxation year in which the period referred to in paragraph (a) expires if that paragraph is applicable or in which the earlier time referred to in paragraph (b) occurs if that paragraph is applicable.

Registered Charities Newsletters: 22 (permission to accumulate property).

(10) Deemed charitable activity — An amount paid by a charitable organization to a qualified donee that is not paid out of the income of the charitable organization is deemed to be a devotion of a resource of the charitable organization to a charitable activity carried on by it, unless the amount paid is a gift the making of which is a political activity.

History: Subsec. 149.1(10) amended by 2012, c. 19, subsec. 7(5), in force on June 29, 2012. It formerly read:

(a) the taxpayer or person filing the return

(i) has made any misrepresentation that is attributable to neglect, carelessness or wilful default or has committed any fraud in filing the return or in supplying any information under this Act, or

(ii) has filed with the Minister a waiver in prescribed form within the normal reassessment period for the taxpayer in respect of the year;

(b) the assessment, reassessment or additional assessment is made before the day that is 3 years after the end of the normal reassessment period for the taxpayer in respect of the year and

(i) is required pursuant to subsection (6) or would be so required if the taxpayer had claimed an amount by filing the prescribed form referred to in that subsection on or before the day referred to therein,

Proposed Amendment — 152(4)(b)(i)

(i) is required under subsection (6) or (6.1), or would be so required if the taxpayer had claimed an amount by filing the prescribed form referred to in the subsection on or before the day referred to in the subsection,

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — foreign affiliates), subsec. 34(1), will amend subpara. 152(4)(b)(i) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after November 1999.

S. 53 of the draft legislation provides that any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that ends before the day on which the draft legislation is assented to and would, in the absence of this section, be precluded because of subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act shall be made to the extent necessary to take into account this amendment, if the taxpayer

(i) elects in writing in respect of all of its foreign affiliates that this section apply in respect of that provision, and

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): In general terms, subsection 152(4) provides that the Minister of National Revenue may not reassess tax payable by a taxpayer for a taxation year after the normal reassessment period for the taxpayer in respect of the year unless the exceptions described in paragraphs 152(4)(a) to (d) apply.

Subparagraph 152(4)(b)(i) allows the Minister of National Revenue to assess or reassess tax within an additional 3 years where the assessment or reassessment is required by subsection 152(6). Subsection 152(6) may apply, for example, where a taxpayer carries back a loss pursuant to section 111.

Subparagraph 152(4)(b)(i) is being amended by adding a reference to subsection 152(6.1) in order to allow the Minister of National Revenue to also assess or reassess tax within an additional 3 years where the assessment or reassessment is required by that subsection because of the carryback of a FAPL [foreign accrual property loss — ed.].

(ii) is made as a consequence of the assessment or reassessment pursuant to this paragraph or subsection (6) of tax payable by another taxpayer,

(iii) is made as a consequence of a transaction involving the taxpayer and a non-resident person with whom the taxpayer was not dealing at arm's length,

(iii.1) is made, if the taxpayer is non-resident and carries on a business in Canada, as a consequence of

(A) an allocation by the taxpayer of revenues or expenses as amounts in respect of the Canadian business (other than revenues and expenses that relate solely to the Canadian business, that are recorded in the books of account of the Canadian business, and the documentation in support of which is kept in Canada), or

(B) a notional transaction between the taxpayer and its Canadian business, where the transaction is recognized for the purposes of the computation of an amount under this Act or an applicable tax treaty.

(iv) is made as a consequence of a payment or reimbursement of any income or profits tax to or by the government of a country other than Canada or a government of a state, province or other political subdivision of any such country,

(v) is made as a consequence of a reduction under subsection 66(12.73) of an amount purported to be renounced under section 66, or

(vi) is made in order to give effect to the application of subsection 118.1(15) or (16);

Proposed Addition — 152(4)(b)(vii)

(vii) is made to give effect to the application of any of sections 94, 94.1 and 94.2;

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — NRTs), s. 14, will add subpara. 152(4)(b)(vii), applicable to taxation years that end after March 4, 2010.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Subsection 152(4) generally provides that the Minister of National Revenue may not reassess tax payable by a taxpayer for a taxation year after the normal reassessment period for the taxpayer in respect of the year unless certain conditions described in paragraph 152(4)(a) or (b) have been met.

Paragraph 152(4)(b) is amended by adding a new subparagraph. New subparagraph 152(4)(b)(vii) allows the Minister of National Revenue to assess or reassess tax within an additional 3 years where the assessment or reassessment is made to give effect to the application of any of sections 94, 94.1 and 94.2.

(c) the taxpayer or person filing the return has filed with the Minister a waiver in prescribed form within the additional 3-year period referred to in paragraph (b); or

(d) as a consequence of a change in the allocation of the taxpayer's taxable income earned in a province as determined under the law of a province that provides rules similar to those prescribed for the purposes of section 124, an assessment, reassessment or additional assessment of tax for a taxation year payable by a corporation under a law of a province that imposes on the corporation a tax similar to the tax imposed under this Part (in this paragraph referred to as a "provincial reassessment") is made, and as a consequence of the provincial reassessment, an assessment, reassessment or additional assessment is made on or before the day that is one year after the later of

(i) the day on which the Minister is advised of the provincial reassessment, and

(ii) the day that is 90 days after the day of sending of a notice of the provincial reassessment.

(4.1) Where waiver revoked — Where the Minister would, but for this subsection, be entitled to reassess, make an additional assessment or assess tax, interest or penalties by virtue only of the filing of a waiver under subparagraph (4)(a)(ii), the Minister may not make such reassessment, additional assessment or assessment after the day that is six months after the date on which a notice of revocation of the waiver in prescribed form is filed.

Proposed Amendment — 152(4.1)

(4.1) If waiver revoked — If the Minister would, but for this subsection, be entitled to reassess, make an additional assessment or assess tax, interest or penalties by virtue only of the filing of a waiver under subparagraph (4)(a)(ii) or paragraph (4)(c), the Minister may not make such a reassessment, additional assessment or assessment after the day that is six months after the date on which a notice of revocation of the waiver in prescribed form is filed.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 110(3), will amend subsec. 152(4.1) to read as above, in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Where a taxpayer has filed a waiver under subparagraph 152(4)(a)(ii), subsection 152(4.1) limits the period during which the Minister may reassess the taxpayer to six months after the taxpayer has notified the Minister of the revocation of the waiver. Subsection 152(4.1) is amended to make reference to a waiver referred to in new paragraph 152(4)(c).

Related Provisions: 152(1.7) — Limitation period re determination of partnership income or loss; 152(4.2) — Reassessment with taxpayer's consent; 165(1.2) — No objection permitted where right to object waived; 169(2.2) — No appeal where right to object or appeal waived.

(4.2) Reassessment with taxpayer's consent — Notwithstanding subsections (4), (4.1) and (5), for the purpose of determining, at any time after the end of the normal reassessment period of a taxpayer who is an individual (other than a trust) or a testamentary trust in respect of a taxation year, the amount of any refund to which the taxpayer is entitled at that time for the year, or a reduction of an amount payable under this Part by the taxpayer for the year, the Minister may, if the taxpayer makes an application for that determination on or before the day that is ten calendar years after the end of that taxation year,

(a) reassess tax, interest or penalties payable under this Part by the taxpayer in respect of that year; and

(b) redetermine the amount, if any, deemed by subsection 120(2) or (2.2), 122.5(3), 122.51(2), 122.7(2) or (3), 127.1(1), 127.41(3) or 210.2(3) or (4) to be paid on account of the taxpayer's tax payable under this Part for the year or deemed by subsection 122.61(1) to be an overpayment on account of the taxpayer's liability under this Part for the year.

Proposed Amendment — 152(4.2) — Reassessment to implement technical-bill amendments

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 157, provides that if an amendment made by Part 1 of the draft legislation applies before the day on which the draft legislation receives Royal Assent, for the purpose of and to the extent necessary to take into account that amendment, in applying subsec. 152(4.2) to a taxation year that ends before that day, the subsec. is to be read as follows:

> (4.2) Notwithstanding subsections (4), (4.1) and (5), for the purpose of determining, at any time after the end of the normal reassessment period of a taxpayer in respect of a taxation year, an amount payable under this Part by the taxpayer for the taxation year, the Minister may, if the taxpayer makes an application for that determination,
> (a) reassess tax, interest or penalties payable under this Part by the taxpayer in respect of that taxation year; and
> (b) redetermine the amount, if any, deemed by subsection 120(2) or (2.2), 122.5(3), 122.51(2), 122.7(2) or (3), 125.4(3), 125.5(3), 127.1(1), 127.41(3) or 210.2(3) or (4) to be paid on account of the taxpayer's tax payable under this Part for the year or deemed by subsection 122.61(1) to be an overpayment on account of the taxpayer's liability under this Part for the taxation year.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 152(4.2) relates to the reassessment of tax, interest and penalties payable by a taxpayer and to the redetermination of tax deemed to have been paid by a taxpayer. This subsection gives the Minister of National Revenue discretion to make a reassessment or a determination beyond the normal reassessment period when so requested by an individual.

Clause 158 [should read "157" — ed.] of this Bill extends the application of subsection 152(4.2) solely for the purpose of allowing the application of the relieving measures included in this Bill. Many of the technical amendments in this Bill apply to taxation years that are now outside the normal reassessment period of three years. This amendment provides the Minister of National Revenue the authority to make, upon application from any taxpayer (not only individuals), an adjustment for a taxation year after the normal reassessment period for that year, if the adjustment concerns the application of a provision included in this Bill.

Related Provisions: 152(3.1) — Normal reassessment period; 152(4.3) — Consequential assessment; 164(1.5) — Refunds; 164(3.2) — Interest on refunds and repayments; 165(1.2) — Limitation of right to object; 180.01(2)(d) — Election to reduce tax on shares that have dropped in value is deemed to be application under 152(4.2); 225.1(1) — No collection restrictions following assessment.

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), subsec. 32(1), will amend subsec. 152(4.3) to read as above, applicable to reassessments, redeterminations and modifications in respect of taxation years that relate to changes in balances for other taxation years as a result of assessments made, or decisions on appeal rendered, after November 5, 2010.

Technical Notes: Where it is necessary, as a result of an assessment or an appeal of a taxpayer for a taxation year, to adjust an amount deducted or included in computing a "balance" that is relevant for another taxation year, subsection 152(4.3) allows the Minister of National Revenue to reassess the other taxation year beyond its normal reassessment period, as well as to redetermine an amount deemed to have been paid or to have been an overpayment on account of tax in respect of that other year. Subsection 152(4.3) is amended to also allow, under the same conditions, the modification of a refund or other amount payable by a taxpayer for the other year.

> (4.3) Notwithstanding subsections (4), (4.1) and (5), where the result of an assessment or a decision on an appeal is to change a particular balance of a taxpayer for a particular taxation year, the Minister may or, where the taxpayer so requests in writing, shall, before the later of the expiration of the normal reassessment period in respect of another taxation year and the end of the day that is one year after the day on which all rights of objection and appeal have expired or been determined in respect of the particular year, reassess the tax, interest or penalties payable, or redetermine an amount deemed to have been paid, under this Part by the taxpayer in respect of the other taxation year, but only for the purpose of giving effect to any provision of this Act requiring the inclusion, or allowing the deduction, of an amount in computing a balance of the taxpayer for the other year, to the extent that the inclusion or deduction can reasonably be considered to relate to the change in the particular balance of the taxpayer for the particular year.

Subsec. 152(4.3) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 90(2), applicable to reassessments and redeterminations in respect of taxation years made after June 10, 1993 that relate to changes in balances for other taxation years made as a result of assessments made, or decisions on appeals rendered, after December 20, 1991 except that where the day referred to in subsec. (4.3) as "the day on which all rights of objection and appeal have expired or been determined in respect of the particular year" occurs before June 10, 1993, subsec. (4.3) shall be read as if that reference were to June 10, 1993.

Proposed Repeal — 152(6)(c.1)

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), subsec. 32(2), will repeal para. 152(6)(c.1), applicable to taxation years that end after October 1, 1996.

Technical Notes: Section 119 provides a tax credit in certain circumstances where the "stop-loss" rule in subsection 40(3.7) applies to an individual who ceased to be resident in Canada in a prior year.

Currently, paragraph 152(6)(c.1) provides that assessments to take into account section 119 credits are permitted only where they are made within 3 years after the normal reassessment period, as subsection 152(6) is to be read together with paragraph 152(4)(b).

New subsection 152(6.3) is being introduced to ensure that credits under section 119 are available to emigrant taxpayers without regard to the normal or extended reassessment periods. Specifically, new subsection 152(6.3) requires that the Minister of National Revenue reassess a taxpayer's tax for the departure year (and any relevant subsequent year) in order to take into account a deduction claimed under section 119 in respect of a disposition in a post-departure year if

- the taxpayer has filed for the departure year the return of income required by section 150,
- an amount is subsequently claimed by the taxpayer, or on the taxpayer's behalf, for the departure year as a deduction under section 119, and
- the taxpayer files with the Minister, on or before the filing-due date of the taxpayer for the post-departure year, a prescribed form amending the return.

Existing paragraph 152(6)(c.1) is being repealed as it is no longer necessary.

These amendments generally apply to taxation years that end after October 1, 1996. However, for taxation years that end before Royal Assent, the filing deadline, under new subsection 152(6.3), for the prescribed form amending the departure year return is the filing-due date for the year that includes the day of Royal Assent.

(d) a deduction under subsection 127(5) in respect of property acquired or an expenditure made in a subsequent taxation year,

(e) a deduction under subsection 125.2 in respect of an unused Part VI tax credit (within the meaning assigned by subsection 125.2(3)) for a subsequent taxation year,

Proposed Repeal — 152(6)(e)

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, s. 45, will repeal para. 152(6)(e), applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 152(6)(e) requires the Minister of National Revenue to reassess prior taxation years in order to give effect to a taxpayer's carry-back of unused Part VI tax credits under section 125.2.

This paragraph is repealed consequential on the repeal of section 125.2. For further information, see the commentary on section 125.2.

(f) a deduction under section 125.3 in respect of an unused Part I.3 tax credit (within the meaning assigned by subsection 125.3(3)) for a subsequent taxation year,

(f.1) a deduction under subsection 126(2) in respect of an unused foreign tax credit (within the meaning assigned by subsection 126(7)), or under subsection 126(2.21) or (2.22) in respect of foreign taxes paid, for a subsequent taxation year,

(f.2) a deduction under subsection 128.1(8) as a result of a disposition in a subsequent taxation year,

(f.3) a deduction (including for the purposes of this subsection a reduction of an amount otherwise required to be included in computing a taxpayer's income) under subsection 146(8.9) or (8.92) or 146.3(6.2) or (6.3),

Proposed Amendment — 152(6)(f.3)

(f.3) a deduction (including for the purposes of this subsection a reduction of an amount otherwise required to be included in computing a taxpayer's income) under subsection 146(8.9) or (8.92), 146.3(6.2) or (6.3) or 147.5(14) or (18),

Application: The December 14, 2011 draft legislation, s. 14, will amend para. 152(6)(f.3) to read as above, in force or deemed in force on the day of the coming into force of S.C. 2012, c. 16 (Bill C-25, Royal Assent June 18, 2012), Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act.

Technical Notes: In general terms, subsection 152(6) provides for the reassessment of tax payable for a taxation year if a deduction or credit is being claimed as the result of a carry back from a later taxation year. Paragraph 152(6)(f.3) provides for the reassessment of taxpayer returns where deductions are claimed under subsections 146(8.92) or 146.3(6.3) in respect of post-death registered retirement savings plan (RRSP) and registered retirement income fund (RRIF) losses. Paragraph 152(6)(f.3) also provides for reassessments in circumstances where subsections 146(8.9) or 146.3(6.2) apply to reduce the income otherwise deemed to be included in the income of a deceased RRSP or RRIF annuitant.

Paragraph 152(6)(f.3) is amended to provide for the reassessment of taxpayer returns if an amount claimed under new subsections 147.5(14) or 147.5(18) reduces an income inclusion in respect of a deceased member of a pooled registered pension plan (PRPP). For example, the amount required to be included in income as a result of a deemed distribution under subsection 147.5(14) may be reduced by a subsequent transfer to a qualifying survivor to which new subsection 147.5(16) applies. Depending on the circumstances, it may be necessary to rely on paragraph 152(6)(f.3) to reduce or eliminate the income inclusion on the deceased member's return to reflect the payment to a qualifying survivor.

For further information regarding PRPPs, please see the commentary on new section 147.5.

(g) a deduction under subsection 147.2(4) because of the application of subsection 147.2(6) as a result of the taxpayer's death in the subsequent taxation year, or

(h) a deduction by virtue of an election for a subsequent taxation year under paragraph 164(6)(c) or (d) by the taxpayer's legal representative, by filing with the Minister, on or before the day on or before which the taxpayer is, or would be if a tax under this Part were payable by the taxpayer for that subsequent taxation year, required by section 150 to file a return of income for that subsequent taxation year, a prescribed form amending the return, the Minister shall reassess the taxpayer's tax for any relevant taxation year (other than a taxation year preceding the particular taxation year) in order to take into account the deduction claimed.

(b) a deduction under subsec. 126(2.21) or (2.22) in respect of foreign taxes paid by a taxpayer,

(a) a taxpayer has filed for a particular taxation year the return of income required by section 150,

(b) the amount included in computing the taxpayer's income for the particular year under subsection 91(1) is subsequently reduced because of a reduction in the foreign accrual property income of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer for a taxation year (referred to in this paragraph as the "claim year") of the affiliate that ends in the particular year, where the reduction in that foreign accrual property income is

(i) attributable to a foreign accrual property loss (within the meaning assigned by subsection 5903(3) of the Income Tax Regulations) of the affiliate for a taxation year of the affiliate that ends in a subsequent taxation year of the taxpayer, and

(ii) included in the description of F in the definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsection 95(1) in respect of the affiliate for the claim year, and

(c) the taxpayer has filed with the Minister, on or before the filing-due date for that subsequent taxation year, a prescribed form amending the return,

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — foreign affiliates), subsec. 34(2), will amend subsec. 152(6.1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after November 1999.

S. 53 of the draft legislation provides that any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that ends before the day on which the draft legislation is assented to and would, in the absence of this section, be precluded because of subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act shall be made to the extent necessary to take into account this amendment, if the taxpayer

(i) elects in writing in respect of all of its foreign affiliates that this section apply in respect of that provision, and

(ii) files that election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before June 30, 2011.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Subsection 152(6.1) provides for the reassessment of a taxpayer in certain circumstances where a FAPL [foreign accrual property loss — ed.] of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer is carried back.

Subsection 152(6.1) is being amended to reflect the restructuring of section 5903 of the Regulations and variable F of the FAPI definition in subsection 95(1).

Proposed Amendment — 152(6.1)(b)

(b) the amount included in computing the taxpayer's income for the particular year under subsection 91(1) is subsequently reduced because of a reduction in the foreign accrual property income of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer for a taxation year (referred to in this paragraph as the "claim year") of the affiliate that ends in the particular year, where

(i) the reduction is

(A) attributable to a foreign accrual property loss (within the meaning assigned by subsection 5903(3) of the Income Tax Regulations) of the affiliate for a taxation year of the affiliate that ends in a subsequent taxation year of the taxpayer, and

(B) included in the description of F in the definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsection 95(1) in respect of the affiliate for the claim year, or

(ii) the reduction is

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), s. 19, will amend para. 152(6.1)(b) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after August 19, 2011.

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: Subsection 152(6.1) provides for the reassessment of a taxpayer in certain circumstances where a "foreign accrual property loss" of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer is carried back.

Subsection 152(6.1) is being amended to reflect the introduction of the new concept of a "foreign accrual capital loss", which also allows for a carryback. For more details, refer to the commentary to new section 5903.1 of the Regulations.

(6.2) Extended reassessment period — The Minister shall reassess a taxpayer's tax for a particular taxation year, in order to take into account the application of paragraph (d) of the definition "excluded property" in subsection 142.2(1), or the application of subsection 142.6(1.6), in respect of property held by the taxpayer, if

(a) the taxpayer has filed for the particular taxation year the return of income required by section 150, and

(b) the taxpayer files with the Minister a prescribed form amending the return, on or before the filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that

(a) for taxation years that begin before October 1, 2006, each reference in subsec. 152(6.2) to "paragraph (d) of the definition "excluded property"" shall be read as a reference to "paragraph (d.3) of the definition "mark-to-market property""; and

(b) a prescribed form referred to in para. 152(6.2)(b) is deemed to have been filed by a taxpayer on a timely basis if it is filed by the taxpayer on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes March 12, 2009.

(1.4) Taxable capital — small-CCPC — The amount determined under this subsection in respect of a corporation for a particular taxation year is

(b) if the corporation is associated with another corporation in the particular taxation year, the amount that is the total of all amounts each of which is the taxable capital employed in Canada of the corporation for the particular taxation year or the taxable capital employed in Canada of a corporation with which it is associated in the particular taxation year for a taxation year of that other corporation that ends in the particular taxation year.

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), s. 33, will amend paras. 157(1.4)(a) and (b) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after 2007.

Technical Notes: Subsection 157(1.2) sets out the conditions that a corporation must meet in order to be a small Canadian-controlled Private Corporation and then to be eligible to pay its annual tax liability by quarterly instalments, instead of monthly.

Paragraph 157(1.2)(b) requires that the corporation's taxable capital employed in Canada, determined under subsection 157(1.4) which includes the taxable capital employed in Canada of associated corporations, cannot be more than $10 million, either in the preceding taxation year or in the current taxation year.

Subsection 157(1.4) provides that the reference to the amount in paragraph 157(1.2)(b) is, if a corporation is associated with other corporations, a reference to the sum of taxable capital employed in Canada by each corporation in the group of associated corporations. For this purpose, the taxable capital employed in Canada by the corporation has the meaning assigned by section 181.2 and includes the taxable capital employed in Canada in the year of any associated corporation.

Paragraphs (a) and (b) of subsection 157(1.4) are amended to add a reference to section 181.3. If a corporation is a financial institution, its taxable capital employed in Canada is described in subsection 181.3. This amendment ensures the correct measurement, for the purposes of determining the eligibility for payment of quarterly instalments, of the taxable capital employed in Canada by a Canadian-controlled Private Corporation that is a financial institution.

History: Subsec. 157(1.4) added by 2007, c. 35, subsec. 51(3), applicable to taxation years that begin after 2007.

(1.5) No longer a small-CCPC — Notwithstanding subsection (1), where a corporation, that has remitted amounts in accordance with subsection (1.1), ceases at any particular time in a taxation year to be eligible to remit in accordance with subsection (1.1), the corporation shall pay to the Receiver General, the following amounts for the taxation year,

(a) on or before the last day of each month, in the taxation year, that ends after the particular time, either

(i) the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of the amounts estimated by the corporation to be the taxes payable by it under this Part and Parts VI, VI.1 and XIII.1 for the taxation year,

B is the total of all payments payable by the corporation in the taxation year in accordance with subsection (1.1), and

C is the number of months that end in the taxation year and after the particular time, or

(ii) the total of

(A) the amount determined by the formula

$$(A–B)/C$$

where

A is the corporation's first instalment base for the taxation year,

B is the total of all payments payable by the corporation in the taxation year in accordance with subsection (1.1), and

C is the number of months that end in the taxation year and after the particular time; and

(b) the remainder of the taxes payable by it under this Part and Parts VI, VI.1 and XIII.1 for the taxation year on or before its balance-due date [sic — should be "balance-due day" — ed.] for the taxation year.

Related Provisions: 161(4.1) — Minimum instalment payment to avoid interest charges; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 112, will amend para. 157(3)(c) to read as above, applicable to 1999 et seq.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 157 requires a corporation to pay monthly instalments of its total tax payable under Parts I, I.3, VI, VI.1 and XIII.1 of the Act. Subsection 157(3) allows corporations to reduce each monthly instalment by 1/12 of the amount of certain tax refunds, including the "dividend refund" under section 129. For most mutual fund corporations, the dividend refund amount is computed according to rules set out in subsection 131(5) of the Act. Paragraph 157(3)(c), which allows a mutual fund corporation to apply its dividend refund to reduce its instalments, therefore refers to subsection 131(5). However, prescribed labour-sponsored venture capital corporations (LSVCCs), which are by definition mutual fund corporations, do not use subsection 131(5) to compute their dividend refunds — instead, they use special rules in subsection 131(11). To ensure that subsection 157(3) applies appropriately to LSVCCs, this amendment adds to paragraph 157(3)(c) a reference to subsection 131(11).

(d) where the corporation is a non-resident-owned investment corporation, 1/12 of the corporation's allowable refund (within the meaning assigned by section 133) for the year, and

(e) 1/12 of the total of the amounts each of which is deemed by subsection 125.4(3), 125.5(3), 127.1(1) or 127.41(3) to have been paid on account of the corporation's tax payable under this Part for the year.

Related Provisions: 131(5) — Dividend refund to mutual fund corporation; 136 — Cooperative not private corporation — exception.

where

A is the total of amounts payable under this Act by the other taxpayer in respect of the year, and

B is the amount that would, if the particular person or partnership were not deemed by subsection 69(11) to have disposed of the property, be determined for A in respect of the other taxpayer in respect of the year, but nothing in this subsection limits the liability of the other taxpayer under any other provision of this Act or of any person for the interest that the person is liable to pay under this Act on an assessment in respect of the amount that the person is liable to pay because of this subsection.

Proposed Amendment — 160(1.1) closing words

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 114(2), will amend the closing words of subsec. 160(1.1) to read as above, applicable in respect of assessments made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 160(1.1) provides that where subsection 69(11) applies to deem a disposition of property to have occurred at fair market value, both the person disposing of the property and the person acquiring the property are jointly and severally liable for the payment of each other's liabilities arising under the Act as a result of that disposition. The Minister of National Revenue may assess the person for such a liability under subsection 160(2). Subsection 160(1.1) is amended, in respect of assessments made after December 20, 2002, to clarify that the assessment of the taxpayer is subject to interest. [This overrules Algoa Trust, [1998] 4 C.T.C. 2001 (TCC), and Currie, [2009] 1 C.T.C. 2139 (TCC), although Zen, [2010] 6 C.T.C. 28 (FCA) (leave to appeal denied 2011 CarswellNat 47 (SCC)) suggests the amendment may not be needed — ed.]

(2) Assessment — The Minister may at any time assess a taxpayer in respect of any amount payable because of this section, and the provisions of this Division (including, for greater certainty, the provisions in respect of interest payable) apply, with any modifications that the circumstances require, in respect of an assessment made under this section as though it had been made under section 152 in respect of taxes payable under this Part.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 114(6), will amend subsec. 160(2) to read as above, applicable in respect of assessments made after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 160(2) allows the Minister of National Revenue to assess a taxpayer at any time in respect of liabilities arising under section 160, with such assessment having the same effect as if it had been made under section 152. Proposed Addition — 160(2.1)

(2.1) Assessment — The Minister may at any time assess a taxpayer in respect of any amount payable because of paragraph 94(3)(d) or (e) or subsection 94(17) and the provisions of this Division (including, for greater certainty, the provisions in respect of interest payable) apply, with any modifications that the circumstances require, in respect of an assessment made under this section as though it had been made under section 152 in respect of taxes payable under this Part.

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — NRTs), subsec. 15(1), will add subsec. 160(2.1), applicable to assessments made after 2006, except that it is to be read without reference to "or subsection 94(17)" in its application to taxation years that end before March 5, 2010; and if subsec. 94(3), as amended, applies to a taxation year of a taxpayer that ends before 2007, subsec. 160(2.1) applies to assessments made on or after the first day of the first such taxation year of the taxpayer to which that subsec. 94(3) applies.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): New subsection 160(2.1) allows the Minister of National Revenue to assess a taxpayer at any time in respect of any amount payable because of paragraph 94(3)(d) or (e) or subsection 94(17). Such an assessment has the same effect as if it had been made under section 152 and is subject to interest.

For more information on paragraphs 94(3)(d) and (e) and subsection 94(17), see the commentary on those provisions.

This amendment applies to assessments made after 2006, except that new subsection 160(2.1) is to be read without reference to subsection 94(17) in its application to taxation years that end before March 5, 2010. Also, if subsection 94(3) applies to a taxation year of a taxpayer (i.e., a trust, a beneficiary under the trust or a contributor to the trust), because of a valid election by the trust under the coming-into-force provision for new section 94, new subsection 160(2.1) applies to assessments made on or after the first day of the first such taxation year of the taxpayer.

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — NRTs), subsec. 15(2), will amend the opening words of subsec. 160(3) to read as above, applicable to assessments made after 2006, except that they are to be read without reference to "or subsection 94(17)" in their application to taxation years that end before March 5, 2010.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Subsection 160(3) provides that, where a particular taxpayer becomes jointly and severally liable with another taxpayer under subsection 160(1) or (1.1) with respect to a tax liability of the other taxpayer, a payment by the particular taxpayer on account of the particular taxpayer's tax liability will discharge the joint liability to the extent of the payment.

Subsection 160(3) is amended so that it also applies where the particular taxpayer has become jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable with another taxpayer because of paragraph 94(3)(d) or (e) or subsection 94(17) in respect of part or all of a liability under this Act of the other taxpayer. The expression "solidarily" is added to ensure that the Act appropriately reflects both the civil law of the province of Quebec and the law of other provinces. For more information on paragraphs 94(3)(d) and (e) and subsection 94(17), see the commentary on those provisions.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 12(4).

(b) a payment by the other taxpayer on account of that taxpayer's liability discharges the particular taxpayer's liability only to the extent that the payment operates to reduce that other taxpayer's liability to an amount less than the amount in respect of which the particular taxpayer is, by this section, made jointly and severally liable.
